FRENCH DETACHMENTS CARRY OUT SURPRISE ATTACKS FOR GAIN

Germans Make Violent Attacks Between Chambrettes Farm and Bezonvaux and Gain Footing in Advanced Positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 5.—(Official Statemnt.)—Last night French reconnoitering detachments made several successful attacks particularly northwest of Tracy le Valand, in Avocourt Woods. Near Troyon, in the regian of Rheims and at Hill 304, we broke attempts of the enemy to make surprise attacks. In the course of these actions we took a score of prisoners.

On the right bank of the Meuse a bombardment directed yesterday by the enemy against our positions in the region of Caurieres wood was redoubled in intensity. It was followed at about 4 p.m. by a violent attack on a front of three kilometres betewen 4 p.m. by a violent attack on a front of three kilometres between Chambrettes Farm and Bezonvaux. Between Caurieres wood and Bezonvaux repeated German efforts were broken up by our curtain of fire and machine guns. The enemy gained a footing in our advanced positions north of Caurieres wood, but his efforts to penetrate the wood were defeated by our fire. Losses of the enemy were heavy.

SNOWFALL IS HEAVIEST OF THIS WINTER

LET'S HOPE IT WON'T BE A REPETITION OF 1870, WHEN FLAKES FELL FOR A WEEK.

The snowfall of last night and today is the heaviest of the present season. As usual, March will likely have the most snow to its credit of any of the winter months. This winter there has been no pronounced thaw, and the original snow that fell early in the season it still with us. The snowfall of this winter has not been up to average, but it is possible that March may make up any deficiency. On looking over some old papers we discovered a few particulars regarding the snowfall of March 1870—47 years ago. This was the heaviest snowfall on record in this district. The winter had been an average one, and spring seemed near. On March 13 snow began to fall heavily. This was on a Sunday. It snowed continuously until the following Sunday night, with the exception of Friday. By this time things began to look alarming as there was snow on the level to the depth of at least 5 feet; many claimed 6 feet. The immense snowfall went off with a rush and did much damage, practically all the dams between Lakefield and Peterborough suffering. All the territory where the C.G.E. now stands was under water, and as far north as where the C.P.R. station now is. The river itself ran straight south from the west end of the Little Lake, making the Cemetery Point an island. The heavy snowfall was followed by the river's worst flood.—W.P.

MISS ANNETTA PEEVER ONE OF VOLUNTEERS TO HARVEST FRUIT.

The fruit farms of the Niagara District next summer will witness an invasion by young women from all walks of life, who will assist in the harvest Lack of male help will be a big problem to be overcome, and steps are already being taken to enroll young women who will volunteer for the work. Lists have been opened at the University of Toronto and Miss Annetta Peever, daughter of Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of George Street Church, is among the first volunteers.

Sheriff Davignon Dead at Windsor

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WINDSOR, March 5.—Sheriff Davignon died this morning, aged 72. He was a member of one of the oldest French-Canadian families, was educated at McGill University, and had resided here for forty years. He had held many offices.

Workingmen Will Dine on Thursday

Mayor Duffus has announced his third banquet for Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, when the workingmen of the city will be his guests at Hooper's. The toilers have taken up his worship's invitation with considerable enthusiasm and a profitable meeting is anticipated.

TEMPERANCE VOTERS LINE UP FOR HEARST

There will be a meeting this evening of the temperance workers of the Conservative party and the supporters of the Hearst prohibition policy. It being understood that the policy of the Provincial Government is total prohibition, the majority of the Conservative workers are lining up accordingly. A banquet will be held at a near date, at which the principles of the party will be enunciated by local speakers.

The meeting and banquet have nothing whatever to do with the selection of a candidate.

Ladies will be invited to the banquet.

FORMER PETERBORO' MAN'S GIFT TO THE MOTHERLAND.

Mr. David J. Johnston, an old Peterborough boy, but now of Toronto, has presented to the British Government 100 farm tractors to be used in agricultural work. A skilled mechanic will be sent with each machine, which has harrow, binder, ploughs and other atachments.

Premier Lloyd George has gratefully accepted the gift on behalf of the nation.

It is twenty years or more since Mr. Johnston left Peterborough. He has been very sucessful in business in the Queen City.

BURNS FATAL

YOUNG WOMAN SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LUCAN, March 5.—Alice Mackey, aged 20, died last night, the result of burns, exposure and exhaustion incurred when the house of her father, Timothy Mackey, Biddulph township, was burned early Friday morning.

LAD SUSTAINED INTERNAL HURTS

Roydon Rowe, the eight-years-old son of Corp. Albert and Mrs. Rowe, was injured internally while at play on Anson street Saturday morning, and is now in Nicholls Hospital. He was one of several young people sleighriding on the hill, and the lad was hurled against a building at the foot of the hill with such force that he suffered internal injuries.

The family recently came here from Lakefield.

Premier of China Leaves Cabinet

RESIGNATION OF ITS ENTIRE MINISTRY EXPECTED.

PEKIN, March 5. — The Cabinet yesterday decided that China should join the United States in breaking off relations with Germany. This decision was submitted to the President, who refused to approve the Cabinet's action, saying such power rested entirely with him. Premier Tuan Chi Jui immediately resigned and left for Tientsin, accompanied by several other members of the Cabinet.

The resignation of the entire Cabinet is expected.

Parliament is virtually unanimous in favor of the opinion of the Cabinet. The leaders of all the political parties are adversely criticizing the President's position. The vice-president of the republic supports the action of the Cabinet.

House Damaged by Blaze on Sunday

Damage to the extent of about $300 was caused by a fire on Sunday at the house occupied by Mrs. Rutherford on Antrim street just west of George street. The fire department were summoned and soon had the blaze under control. A defective chimney was the cause. The building is owned by Mr. J. Rothwell.

CANADIANS OF THIRD DIVISION IN FIGHT

Despatches Indicate Fighting of Severity.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 5. — A news despatch from Ottawa says the Canadians have been in another big fight. The Militia Department has so far received no details but despatches at hand would indicate that the third division has been in a heavy engagement with the Huns. The casualties, while not heavy, would show severe fighting.

Lt.-Col. Beckett, reported killed, is the only commanding officer who lost his life in the fight.

The last heard here of the Canadians was to the effect that they were in the neighborhood of Loos. They were moved from the Somme region several months ago to what is supposed to be a quieter section. They refused to remain quiescent and inaugurated a series of daylight raids.

The fight took place last Thursday. The casualties were not more than two hundred.

A PLOT TO KILL WILSON

Hun Reservist From Mexico Had the Bombs.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HOBOKEN, N.J., March 5.—Detectives declare they have unearthed a plot to kill President Wilson when today they arrested Fritz Kolb, a German reservist from Mexico. In a hotel where Kolb had engaged a room were found two bombs which the detectives said were to have been sent tonight to the President.

NO CHANGE IN PERSIA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 5.—The repulse of a small Turkish attack in Turkish Armenia, near Kalkit, is announced by the War Office. No change is recorded in Persia since the capture of Hamadan.

STUDIO TEA AND RECITAL

BY THE PUPILS OF MISS OLIVE JOHNSON.

On Saturday afternoon the pupils of Miss Olive Johnson gave a most enjoyable studio tea and recital at the Conservatory of Music. A varied and attractive program was rendered, some twelve pupils taking part. Two of Miss Logan's violin pupils, Alice and Dora Brown, assisted and Mr. Georgia Cuffe, soprano, pupil of Mr. R MacClean, sang most artistically "My Task," by Asford. Altogether the program was one of the most interesting of the Saturday afternoon series. The following pupils played:—

Piano—Isobel Vincent, Kenneth French, Florence Evans, Thomas Dutton, Gladys Greene, Katharine Ferguson, James Dutton, Isabel Couper, Harold Thorndyke, Edna Hewsen, Ablinda White.

Violin—Alice Brown, Dora Brown

Vocal—Georgie Cuff

What Will They Do About the Inspectors?

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATION HAS PLUMBING INSPECTOR BILLED FOR SUSPENSION.

The appointment of a sanitary inspector and the recommendation that the plumbing inspector be suspended, will furnish food for lively discussion at the city council tonight.

George Metcalfe was recommended by the property committee for the position of sanitary inspector over a large field of applicants, many of them returned soldiers, and several A.R. men. Tonight several of the aldermen will inquire why a returned soldier was not given the job.

The situation regarding the suspension of the plumbing inspector over some alleged defective work may peter out in much the same way as was the case in past experiences. There are some members of the property committee, however, who say they will see the thing through to a finish this time.

TOO MUCH OF ARTIFICIAL IS BEING IMPOSED

GEORGE ST. PASTOR SAYS MANY WOULD LIKE TO RETURN TO REAL.

Rev. Mr. Peever preached an unusually fine sermon last night of the topical order. He took for his subject "The Result of Teaching," more particularly specifying the effect of the teaching of Nietsche and his philosophy upon the German people. This German philosopher despises humility, patience, forgiveness and all the Christian virtues. He condemns Christianity as the worst of weaknesses. Life, he says, both in Nature and elsewhere, is a struggle for existence, and only the strong and the fierce win. Applying this to the German view of life, we see how it is that the Teutons disregard all that the British world holds most dear. The German philosopher regards ferocity as the great virtue. Some of his admirers in Germany, it is known, point to the devil-fish, the tiger, the shark, etc., as the crowning achievements of the Creator and as most likely to live in any order of life. Taking up works of this kind, which require close study and explanation, is very much appreciated by people, and it is a pity that more time is not found by pastors to deal with the daily life and reading of their people as applied to the principles of Christianity and vice versa. One very striking reference at large was made by the eloquent gentleman, who held the closest attention of his congregation throughout, when he said that there are many who would like to return to the real and who felt that too much of the artificial was being imposed upon the world.

PRESIDENT WILSON CALLS FOR UNITED AMERICA

PRESIDENT WILSON

New Responsibility on People of the Republic.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson took the oath of office in public this afternoon and delivered his inaugural address before a great crowd which packed the plaza at the east front of the Capitol. With his new consecration to the nation's service, the President, touching on the international crisis, declared there could now be no turning back from the tragical events of the last thirty months, which have brought upon Americans a new responsibility as citizens of the world. The President declared anew that America must stand for peace, for stability of free peoples, national equality in matters of right, that the seas must be free to all and that the family of nations shall not support any Government's note not derived from the consent of the governed. In sounding a solemn warning to the nation against any faction or intrigue to break the harmony or embarass the spirit of American people, the President called for an America "united in feeling, in purpose and in its vision of duty of opportunity and of service."

At the conclusion of the address the President led the inaugural procession back to the White House, where it passed in review before him.

TRAGEDY

Refused as Recruit He Ended Life by Hanging.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 5—Discouraged by the recruiting stations repeatedly rejecting him on account of deafnes, and heartbroken over the death of a brother fighting in France, Geo. Baker, aged 26, hanged himself in a cellar of a house on McPherson Avenue early this morning.

PTE. METHERAL BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

Laid Away by Officers and Men of the 247th Batt.

The funeral of the late Pte. W. D. Metheral took place this afternoon from the residence of his brother Mr. A. E. Metheral, Reid street. The officers and men of the 247th Battalion, accompanied by the band, participated in the funeral service. A firing party fired a volley over the grave, and the Last Post was sounded by the Bugle Band.

The pallbearers were Ptes. Hill, Way, Kimball, Fagg, Keltel, Holden Dunnette and Hall.

Rev. R. G. Peever conducted the services.

"You rarely see a man in civilian clothes in this country," writes Pte. Chas. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, Hall's Bridge, from a convalescent home in Bear Woods, Berks, England. "The street cars are operated by women, who also do other branches of work. Many ambulances in France are operated by women, some of them with money to burn."

Pte. Jones was hit by a small piece of shrapnel when a shell burst over the trench in which he was on duty. "There was a bombing raid that afternoon by the 1st C. M. R., and it was a good one," he says. "They brought back about sixty prisoners. It must have been about six o'clock when the shell came over and I got mine; but it was only a scratch. Another lad—his name is Barnes—was hit in the arm. As all the injured have to leave the trenches to be inoculated, I came out, and am now located here, due more to a touch of rheumatism than the wound. There were some very young Germans among the prisoners. Others were big fellows; and all were glad to be taken."

Pte. Jones believes he will return to the trenches, and in closing asks his parents not to worry.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman has received excellent reports from the outside recruiting districts, particularly Millbrook and Havelock, and expects a great many recruits from these places this week. An extra effort will be made among the local men to get them into khaki. Many who promised to join as soon as the 200 enlistment mark was passed will have the opportunity in the next few days to make good.

The battalion were this morning put through some extra exercises in the funeral drill so as to be prepared to accord a military man the full honors due to a dead soldier.

Physical drill will be given the men of the 247th Battalion every morning hereafter. It will be taken up first thing after the morning parade.

Battalion Orders

By Lt.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. 247th Battalion:

Duties—

Orderly officer for today, Lieut. J. H. Shook.

Orderly officer for tomorrow — Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lt.
Adjutant

FINES OF $10 AND COSTS

At the police court this morning William McGligott and Robert Weaver were each charged with being intoxicated on Feb. 22, and both pleaded guilty. McGligott was fined $10 and $8.60 costs and Weaver $10 and $2.60 costs.

A charge against Weaver for having liquor in his possession at a place other than his residence was dismissed.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, MARCH 5, 1917

THE LETTER IN ANOTHER COLUMN.

WE CHEERFULLY make room in another column for the letter from a prominent local resident who chooses to conceal his identity under the cognomination of "One Who Has Hit the Spuds." It is seldom the good fortune of any newspaper to receive a communication, the writer of which so happily blends jocosity, sarcasm, philosophy and hard-headed business accumen, and carries the difficult role with commendable dignity. We take it that he has no quarrel with The Review editorial to which he refers. The article was based on a school report to which certain statistics were attached, and we accepted these figures without a suspicion. Surely if mathematical demonstrations of our trained school authorities are not entitled to unqualified acceptance, the figures submitted to illustrate a political problem or support a political contention are not worth even a moment's consideration.

We trust that "One Who Has Hit the Spuds" will not run away with the idea that we are given to fall for any statistics that may pass under our notice. In the first place, when he says that the average farmer gets 25 bushels of oats to the acre, and on that extent of land derives an income of $15, we believe he is right, and that the pity of it is that his figures are all too true. But $385.72 from an acre of intensively cultivated land, as reported by the schools, is nothing out of the way. That record has been equalled in wider fields. Belgium, before the Germans laid it waste, did as well, otherwise the population would have perished of hunger. Farmers in Ontario could do better but for the lack of help. One good lawyer can prosecute all the criminals in a single county. Extend his territory so as to take in the entire Dominion, and he is up against a task no more hopeless than that which confronts the farmer who finds himself alone on a hundred-acre farm.

As we have already intimated, there are figures of which we are skeptical, just as our correspondent himself is. When he refers to "Rolly" with easy familiarity and rather painful freedom of expression, he says that if that backyard gardener raised $40 worth of potatoes and other vegetables on his plot—40 square feet in extent—he probably expended $60 to accomplish that feat. Even if the balance sheet did show such a result, that would not be sufficient to dismay a man who has run a modern newspaper in war time. But the amount of production is rather staggering. Forty square feet produces $40 worth of vegetables, one square foot $1. According to the arithmetic there are 43,560 square feet in an acre. This would mean a gross income of $43,560 from an acre, and the most vivid imagination can scarcely picture such a feat as possible. If the percentage of loss was the same as the estimate of our correspondent for the smaller plot, none but a Rockefeller would be financially able to take up amateur gardening on anything like an extensive scale.

A man otherwise above reproach is often tempted into liberal statements with regard to the fish he catches on the spring trip, or the deer he brings down on his annual visit to the hunting wilds. Even if he exaggerates a trifle in these matters, the fact remains that fish are caught and deer killed. The amateur gardener may be given to boast of his backyard achievements. This should not excite the skepticism of our correspondent to the point of inducing him to reject the argument that it is possible to raise potatoes and vegetables at home.

MEDICAL SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

DR. M. McCLELLAND delivered an address before the men's class at St. Andrew's Church yesterday afternoon on the subject "The Relation of Mentality and Spirituality to Health." The most interesting part of the treatise was not reached, and the matter will be taken up again next Sunday. The doctor, however, said enough to voice a revolution in medical science. The health of the world is to be assured by right living, by the exercise of common sense principles rather than by the agency of medicines.

There is a present-day movement along the lines laid down by Dr. McClelland. The church as well as the medical profession have shown a tendency to change old established views. Rev. T. H. Mitchell is one pastor who says that it is a matter of regret that the element of healing has been dropped from the creed of the churches. Christian Science is steadily growing in popular favor, and the courts have recently stamped with their official approval the means adopted by members of that cult in the treatment of the sick. It is no longer regarded as a crime to rely on prayer alone to heal bodily ills.

As Dr. McClelland said plainly in his address yesterday, there is vastly more care taken in the breeding of dogs, horses and cattle than there is in propagating the human race. This is a painful truth. Men and women with physical defects likely to be transmitted to their offspring are permitted to marry. There is little care taken to prevent the spread of mental deficiency or the perpetuation of criminal degeneracy by legislative enactments preventing the marriage of victims of either condition.

The State certainly exercises exemplary paternal care over the unfortunate, whether they be children or adults. The great trouble is that the State fails to act in time. Corrective measures rather than prevention is the system in force. Every child born into the world is taken up by the authorities if the parents are unable to care for it, or if it shows mental or moral deficiencies or physical defects which will render it unable to make its own way. The responsibility of the State for the welfare of the child should not be so restricted as to begin with its birth. It really ante-dates that event. The child has a right not only to be born in wedlock, but to be the progeny of parents who are in every way fitted for the duties of parenthood. The law of transmission of the sins of the progenitors to the third and fourth generation of the offspring is as inexorable as ever.

The science of eugenics has been recognised in the reproduction of animals in the lower world of creation for years, and the results are apparent more and more as time passes. Just now that science, as applied to the human race, is still in its infancy, and, like all great moral reforms, it is gaining ground slowly but surely. The best way to make the human race healthy, vigorous and free from mental defects is to teach the principles of morality rather than to rely upon medical skill.

Of every dollar raised for public revenue in Ontario, sixty-four cents goes to care for the mentally incompetent and for the regulation of the criminal classes. This condition, deplorable as it is, would not exist if the same care were exercised with regard to the human species as is taken in the reproduction of the lower animals.

THE FARMER AND HIS TAXES.

THE FARMERS in Peterborough County are not likely to be carried away by the sophistries of the politicians with regard to the taxation of land values. The preaching of the enthusiasts and faddists is to the general effect that all customs and inland revenue taxes be abolished and that the State's income be derived entirely from the taxation of land. The sop held out to the farmers is that of free agricultural machinery, and the removal of duty on anything else he has to purchase.

The farmer purchases a piece of agricultural machinery only occasionally. The increased tax on his land, due to the removal of customs duty, would be levied every year. He would thus be required to provide for the expenditures of others. The system would be on the same principle as abolishing railway fares and supporting the railways out of the general treasury. The farmer who perhaps did not travel one hundred miles a year by rail would be asked to help pay the fares of those who used this means of transportation to ten times that extent.

It is the tariff on farm machinery that has built up the factories of Canada engaged in this line. It was the tariff that brought the International Harvester Company to Hamilton, a firm that employs on an average 2,500 men, representing at a conservative estimate a population of 7,500, consumers of the products of Canadian farms. This is only one of scores of similar instances that could be cited.

The taxation of land values is all right if applied to municipalities. It is a different matter entirely to speak of setting the system in operation for the purpose of raising Federal revenue.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO ACT.

THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS that has been at the helm of State for the past two years automatically passed out of existence at noon yesterday, after failing to pass the armed neutrality bill. The despatches say that President Wilson will arm all merchantmen as a protection against submarine attacks, and it is likely that in a few days a fleet of ships flying the Stars and Stripes and freighted with American goods will start across the Atlantic, all armed and able to answer shot for shot and to sink any submarine at sight. It does not require very formidable guns to deal with the pirate craft. The threatened isolation of England by a German submarine blockade will never eventuate. American commercial intercourse with the Allied Nations will not be broken.

The inevitable result of the action decided upon by President Wilson will be that Germany will regard it as a hostile act and proceed on that assumtpion. The two countries are now practically at war. That being the case, the odds on the sea are once more decidedly against the Hun, who will probably now abandon his new naval policy as hopeless.

The new Congress of the United States does not meet in the regular order of events until the first Monday in December. It can, however, be called together in special session by the President at any time or by two-thirds of the members joining in a request for an emergency meeting. There will be many new faces in the Congress now in power, and the hope exists that the spirit will be different and that President Wilson will have the support and the co-operation of the representatives of the people in any measures required in the interests of national defence.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IT IS EASY to win the war. All that is necessary, it seems, is to call a meeting and pass a few resolutions.

• • • •

BUT EVEN CONSCIENTIOUS effort in the backyard garden should not absolve the eligible from military duty.

• • • •

THE FREQUENT stories of deaths from exposure appear to have no terrors for the dress paraders on George Street.

• • • •

"AMERICAN CIVILIZATION," boasts Mr. Bryan, "leads the world." Yes, with the German submarine in close pursuit.

• • • •

IN THE UNITED STATES, as in Canada, there are "patriots" who make political capital out of the calamity of war.

• • • •

UNFORTUNATELY the average slacker will rather pay a $10 poll tax than absent himself from the city by getting into uniform.

• • • •

SELECT your garden tools and seed potatoes early and leave "One Who Has Hit the Spuds" to disport himself in a maze of bewildering figures.

• • • •

DO NOT EAT ALL the potatoes. If a local amateur gardener can produce them at the rate of $43,560 worth on an acre, some of the tubers are worth saving for seed.

• • • •

AN EDITOR who died recently in Toronto left an estate worth $40,000. Editors all over Ontario will be anxious to learn what he conducted as a sideline.

• • • •

THE CONSERVATIVES, although defeated in New Brunswick, have a majority of the English-speaking representatives in the Legislature.

• • • •

THERE ARE, it seems, Lucien Cannons everywhere. In New Brunswick the Liberals told the voters that the Murray Government intended to dispossess the French-Canadian farmers to make room on the land for the returned soldiers.

THE ROAD TO WORLD BANKRUPTCY

We give below approximate statistics showing the amounts which European belligerents have expended for war purposes from July, 1914, to date. At best, no figures on this subject are fully right. They are just estimates made by the various governments at different times. Treated in a broad way, however, they should be accurate enough for practical purposes.

The estimates for daily expenditures given below are probably small, at least for all countries except Great Britain. They were made some time ago, and the cost of the war is steadily increasing.

	Cost to Date	Daily Cost
Great Britain	$16,730,000,000	$28,900,000
France	12,700,000,000	18,000,000
Russia	12,270,000,000	17,000,000
Italy	3,840,000,000	5,000,000
Other Allies	2,400,000,000	4,000,000
Total for Allies	$47,940,000,000	$72,900,000
Germany	$16,000,000,000	$22,000,000
Austria-Hungary	6,800,000,000	12,000,000
Turkey and Bulgaria	1,000,000,000	1,500,000
Total Central Powers	$23,800,000,000	$35,500,000
Grand Total	$71,740,000,000	$108,400,000

Jap Scientist Claims to Have Discovered Secret of Sex Control

The enigma of sex control, which has concerned scientists for many years, is said to have been solved by George Orishay Shinja, a Japanese graduate student at the University of California.

After three years of laboratory work on the sex problem, Shinja, now carrying on work under the supervision of the department of entomology declares he has discovered the secret by which the process of reproduction can be controlled.

Although the Japanese scientist has confined his experiments so far to the small insects, aphids or plant lice, he hopes to verify his findings by experiments on the blow fly, pomise fly, amphibia and on such high forms of animal life as the pigeon and chicken. The results of these investigations, he believes, will prove that sex can be controlled even in the human family.

Shinja's discovery was made as the result of an accident. In 1912 he started his experiments on aphids with the primal idea of producing winged and non-winged forms of the insect by means of a chemical treatment.

After experimenting with many kinds of chemical salts, he found magnesium chloride best suited his purposes, and this he used exclusively. While working on the effect this chloride had on the wings of the aphid he noticed that those which he treated gave birth only to the male sex.

Experimenting further along this line, he says, he has proved that in all cases of reproduction without the male cell the offspring to the second generation of aphids which had been treated with magnesium chloride turned out males.

Shinja claims that the magnesium chloride removes the water from protein substances. As water is the chief cell-forming substance, its removal, he finds, so deranges the normal maturation process that the male offspring is bound to result.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Your editorial on "What the Schools Did" to hand. Some kids, those, and then again some. An average return of $385.72 per acre—that's what they did. They are wasting time and can't be put to work too soon. The high cost of living is ended. Put the kids on the land and the farmers at school.

This shows the absurdity of estimates. The average farmer gets about twenty-five bushels of oats and at the average price of sixty cents has a gross return of fifteen dollars from his acre.

Do not tear up your back gardens ladies and gentlemen. It takes some cultivation to prepare ground for seed, and especially seed potatoes. It should be plowed, then manured, dug, planted, hoed, weeded, watered, paris greened; then you look for the potatoes, and, if you find them, weigh them up and notice first whether or not you have the seed back. One has a credit for experience and sunburn; a debit for weeds and new grassing next season, when we return to the shady lawn where the baby rolls around and the old man smokes his pipe.

It is a shame to egg on an unsuspecting public to play this backyard game.

Suggestions are, of course, in plenty, municipalities to buy the seed and plow the yards with the municipal teams. Why not put the firemen on in their off times, with the police force looking over the fence? Seed costs money when purchased in five-bag lots. It will cost more delivered to one thousand families in peck packages.

If Rolly got $40 worth from his little plot, it is safe betting he put in $60 in time, the real object of his ground attention being reduction of avoirdupois, the crop being a bye-product.

What talk we have and the rot that is written. Pardon me for suggesting, as I know there is at least a modicum of common sense, but it will not be carried out, and is therefore wasting printer's ink.

Enlist the business sympathies of six or eight of the leading firms. Hamilton's, Mason's, Denne's, Savigny's, White's, Braund's; leave your name and the quantity you can use and will take, families and hotels; then the market gardeners and farmers would have an idea of the quantity needed and the name of the people who will purchase.

There must be loyalty between producers and consumers. The middleman should be paid for any handled by him, and well paid. He will be the go-between and will protect the consumer by inspection. The price to the consumer must be fixed now, or at least a maximum price. This, in my opinion, will do more to alleviate the "high cost of living bug" than any backyard fad.

You can't teach farmers to grow potatoes; they know. Nor can you teach backyard gardeners, for they do not know and never will.

The money for the crop, some 25,000 bushels at least, will remain in the county, and not go to P. E. Island and elsewhere.

A market gardener will grow one thousand bushels of potatoes at a great deal less expense than two hundred backyard gardeners will grow the same quantity for, and if the average backyard gardener grows and bags five bushels of potatoes, he will go some.

And there is no reason to stop at potatoes. Order your winter vegetables as well. Remember, now is the time—now, not next summer—and there will not likely be any $5.00 potatoes.

IS THIS SARCASM?

Editor Review: I was pleased to see in your paper the other day a letter from the officials of the Protestant Benevolent Association in which they stated in a clear manner what the association stands for. No Protestant should hesitate to join it.

It is quite true that at the present time there are no Roman Catholics in local offices, but they are an aggressive people and no one can tell at what time they will attempt to get a member of their church into one of the paid positions in the civic service.

In these trying times, let us all stand by the faith of our fathers and be guided by the teachings of that eminent German philosopher, Bernhardi, who tells us that the great civilizing influences in the world today are Prussianism and Protestantism.

NO SURRENDER.

A QUESTION FOR REEVE McKEE

Editor Review: Will Mr. McKee, Reeve of Smith township, explain to us the reason why, after he promised to do all he could to help Mr. Thomas Black get the position of caretaker of the Chemong bridge, he turned right around and moved that Mr. James Grant be given the position, and worked until the latter got it? It has been hinted for some time that it is hard to tell on which side of the fence Reeve McKee is, and it now looks as if this impression is warranted. There is no room for wigglers in the Smith Council.

MILITARY LANTERN SLIDES

An Ontario minister the other day borrowed from the Military Hospitals Commission a set of lantern slides. These slides show what goes on a. the hospitals and sanatoria. That is, they show something of how our injured soldiers are being restored to health and to power for self-support, however serious their injuries may be. The minister exhibited the slides at three country churches under his charge. In returning the set, he writes:

"My recording steward, who is also the postmaster, and chairman of the local recruiting league, says they should be shown in every community. They meet the unrest in many families who have feared that the maimed who return will be forced to sell lead-pencils or such like.

"What I should have done was to ask for them for a longer period and put them on in every available church in this district. A man with a well-prepared lecture and a few local slides could render a valuable service to the country, both in allaying the unrest above referred to and in removing the prejudice in some families from which recruits might be secured."

The slides, with explanatory notes, may be borrowed by ministers and other responsible persons free of charge. Application should be made to the Military Hospitals Commission, 22 Victoria street, Ottawa.

Wit and Wisdom

Anxious.

Crewe — Good heavens, how it rains. I feel awfully anxious about my wife. She's gone out without an umbrella.

Drew — Oh, she'll be all right. She'll take shelter in some shop.

Crewe — Exactly. That's what makes me so anxious.

Father's Definition.

"Pa, what's a running account?"

"It's an open account in a dry-goods store, my son, which keeps your mother running downtown all the time to buy things."

Maybe More.

"Mrs. Flubdub says she is going to Palm Beach for a rest."

"How inconsistent people are. Just as much gossip going on there as here."

Advantages Appreciated.

"Do you have any trouble keeping your boy on the farm?"

"Not lately," answered Farmer Corntossel. "Josh rather likes to stay around a place where he can have eggs for breakfast regular."

Too Loud.

"Did I hear that young man kissing you last night?"

"I'm afraid so, mother. I told him not to open his muffler."

Last Chance.

A lawyer who for many years had shocked a large number of his friends by his rather liberal views on religion recently died.

A friend of the deceased, who cut short a trip to hurry back to town for the purpose of attending the last rites of his colleague, entered the late lawyer's home some minutes after the beginning of the service.

"What part of the service is this?" he inquired in a whisper of another legal friend standing in the crowded hallway.

"I've just come myself," said the other, "but I believe they have opened for the defence."

BEFORE ADAM

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1907, by the MacMillan company.

I did not see what became of my mother, but I did see the Chatterer shot down out of the old home tree. And I am afraid that at the sight I did a bit of joyous teetering. Before I leave this portion of my narrative I must tell of Red Eye. He was caught with his wife in a tree down by the blueberry swamp. The Swift One and I stopped long enough in our flight to see. The fire men were too intent upon their work to notice us, and furthermore, we were well screened by the thicket in which we crouched.

Fully a score of the hunters were under the tree discharging arrows into it. They always picked up their arrows when they fell back to earth. I could not see Red Eye, but I could hear him howling from somewhere in the tree.

After a short interval his howling grew muffled. He must have crawled into a hollow in the trunk. But his wife did not win this shelter. An arrow brought her to the ground. She was severely hurt, for she made no effort to get away. She crouched in a sheltering way over her baby, which clung tightly to her, and made pleading signs and sounds to the fire men. They gathered about her and laughed at her, even as Lop Ear and I had laughed at the old tree man. And even as we had poked him with twigs and sticks so did the fire men with Red Eye's wife. They poked her with the ends of their bows and prodded her in the ribs. But she was poor fun. She would not fight, nor, for that matter, would she get angry. She continued to crouch over her baby and to plead. One of the fire men stepped close to her. In his hand was a club. She saw and understood, but she made only the pleading sounds until the blow fell.

Red Eye, in the hollow of the trunk, was safe from their arrows. They stood together and debated for awhile, then one of them climbed into the tree. What happened up there I could not tell, but I heard him yell and saw the excitement of those that remained beneath. After several minutes his body crashed down to the ground. He did not move. They looked at him and raised his head, but it fell back limply when they let go. Red Eye had accounted for himself.

CHAPTER XIV.

THEY were very angry. There was an opening into the trunk close to the ground. They gathered wood and grass and built a fire. The Swift One and I, our arms around each other, waited and watched in the thicket. Sometimes they threw upon the fire green branches with many leaves, whereupon the smoke became very thick.

We saw them suddenly swerve back from the tree. They were not quick enough. Red Eye's flying body landed in the midst of them. He was in a frightful rage, smashing about with his long arms right and left. He pulled the face off one of them, literally pulled it off with those gnarly fingers of his and those tremendous muscles. He bit another through the neck. The fire men fell back with wild, fierce yells, then rushed upon him. He managed to get hold of a club and began crushing heads like eggshells. He was too much for them, and they were compelled to fall back again. This was his chance, and he turned his back upon them and ran for it, still howling wrathfully. A few arrows sped after him, but he plunged into a thicket and was gone.

The Swift One and I crept quietly away, only to run foul of another party of fire men. They chased us into the blueberry swamp, but we knew the tree paths across the farther morasses, where they could not follow on the ground, and so we escaped. We came out on the other side into a narrow strip of forest that separated the blueberry swamp from the great swamp that extended westward. Here we met Lop Ear. How he had escaped I cannot imagine, unless he had not slept the preceding night at the caves.

Here, in the strip of forest, we might have built tree shelters and settled down, but the Fire People were performing their work of extermination thoroughly. In the afternoon Hair Face and his wife fled out from among the trees to the east, passed us and were gone. They fled silently and swiftly, with alarm in their faces. In the direction from which they had come we heard the cries and yells of the hunters and the screeching of some one of the folk. The Fire People had found their way across the swamp.

The Swift One, Lop Ear and I followed on the heels of Hair Face and his wife. When we came to the edge of the great swamp we stopped. We did not know its paths. It was outside our territory, and it had been always avoided by the folk. None had ever gone into it—at least to return. In our minds it represented mystery and fear, the terrible unknown. As I say, we stopped at the edge of it. We were afraid. The cries of the fire men were drawing nearer. We looked at one another. Hair Face ran out on the quaking morass and gained the firmer footing of a grass hummock a dozen yards away. His wife did not follow. She tried to, but shrank back from the treacherous surface and cowered down.

The Swift One did not wait for me, nor did she pause till she had passed beyond Hair Face a hundred yards and gained a much larger hummock. By the time Lop Ear and I had caught up with her the fire men appeared among the trees. Hair Face's wife, driven by them into panic terror, dashed after us. But she ran blindly, without caution, and broke through the crust. We turned and watched and saw them shoot her with arrows as she sank down in the mud. The arrows began falling about us. Hair Face had now joined us, and the four of us plunged on, we knew not whither, deeper and deeper into the swamp.

Of our wanderings in the great swamp I have no clear knowledge. When I strive to remember I have a riot of unrelated impressions and a loss of time value. I have no idea of how long we were in that vast everglade, but it must have been for weeks. My memories of what occurred invariably take the form of nightmare. For untold ages, oppressed by protean fear, I am aware of wandering, endlessly wandering, through dank and soggy wilderness, where poisonous snakes struck at us and animals roared around us, and the mud quaked under us and sucked at our heels.

I know that we were turned from our course countless times by streams and lakes and slimy seas. Then there were storms and risings of the water over great areas of the low lying lands, and there were periods of hunger and misery when we were kept prisoners in the trees for days and days by these transient floods.

Very strong upon me is our pictures. Large trees are about us, and from their branches hang gray filaments of moss, while great creepers, like monstrous serpents, curl around the trunks and writhe in tangles through the air. And all about is the mud, soft mud, that bubbles forth gases and that heaves and sighs with internal agitations. And in the midst of all this are a dozen of us. We are lean and wretched, and our bones show through our tight stretched skins. We do not sing and chatter and laugh. We play no pranks. For once our volatile and exuberant spirits are hopelessly subdued. We make plaintive, querulous noises, look at one another and cluster close together. It is like the meeting of the handful of survivors after the day of the end of the world.

This event is without connection with the other events in the swamp. How we ever managed to cross it I do not know, but at last we came out where a low range of hills ran down to the bank of the river. It was our river emerging like ourselves from the great swamp. On the south bank, where the river had broken its way through the hills, we found many sandstone caves. Beyond, toward the west, the ocean boomed on the bar that lay across the river's mouth. And here in the caves we settled down in our abiding place by the sea.

There were not many of us. From time to time as the days went by more of the folk appeared. They dragged themselves from the swamp singly and in twos and threes, more dead than alive, mere perambulating skeletons, until at last there were thirty of us. Then no more came from the swamp, and Red Eye was not among us. It was noticeable that no children had survived the frightful journey.

I shall not tell in detail of the years we lived by the sea. It was not a happy abiding place. The air was raw and chill, and we suffered continually from coughing and colds. We could not survive in such an environment. True, we had children, but they had little hold on life and died early, while we died faster than new ones were born. Our number steadily diminished.

MEANING OF NAMES

Interesting Derivation of Some Commonly Used Names For Girls.

Nowadays there is not so much importance attached to the meaning of names, but in far away ages a child's name had some direct personal application. It may have indicated some peculiarity in its appearance, some quality desired for it, some jewel, flower, animal or weapon that was supposed to have some influence over the child such as Deborah, the bee; Samuel, asked of God.

Though children's names are not given with the old care and attention, yet it is always interesting to know the character of the people who originated our own.

The name Dorothy, with its many equivalents and abbreviations, is a great favorite, and truly the meaning is unsurpassed "The Gift of God"! Well can we imagine the joy of the mother who first named her baby girl Theodora. "Theodora" is the English of the Greek Theos or Zeus, who was the chief god of the Greeks. Zeus was the god of heaven, their creator, and the object of their highest worship, and the word Theodora meant "divine gift." The English form, "Dorothea," in which the word is merely inverted, is first found in the legend of St. Dorothea, an early Christian martyr, who dropped roses from Paradise upon the earth as a testimony of her heavenly home and joy.

The diminutive Dolly formed so common a pet name in the days of Queen Elizabeth that the wooden puppets played with by the children were invariably given this name, which survives to this day in our little girls' best loved toys. Other variations of the name are Dora, Dorinda, and Doris.

The Greek god Helios, who drove his flaming chariot across the heavens each day, was the God of Light, his name coming from the root ele, meaning "light." From this one word we now have Helena, Helen, Elaine, Ellen, Eleanor, Ellinor, Nelly, Leonora, Nora, Eileen, and Lena.

When washing china with gilt upon it never use soda. Rub a little soap on the dishcloth to make a nice lather, then rinse in clear cold water.

HELPFUL HOME HINTS

Needles and pins will never rust in a cushion filled with coffee grounds. Rinse the grounds in cold water, spread on a sheet of paper to dry thoroughly, and then stuff the cushion.

In preparing lettuce for a salad dry by tossing lightly in an old napkin.

Lettuce leaves not sufficiently attractive for salads can be used as pot greens.

If the sugar and water one has boiled for frosting grains, a teaspoonful of butter added will make it smooth and creamy again.

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over, drop a piece of dripping the size of a walnut into the centre of them, just as they commence to boil.

When making a steamed pudding put a piece of well greased paper over the top before tying the cloth. This will prevent the cloths from becoming greasy and they are no trouble to wash.

There is nothing better to remove tar from white clothing than lard. Rub it well into the spot and then wash it out with soap and warm water.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 5.

Breast Feeding.—(Continued.)

IF THE BABY is very feeble or premature it may not be able to nurse. In such cases the breast milk should be removed by a breast pump and fed to the baby or a wet-nurse provided. In harelip or cleft palate the baby may not be able to nurse. It should be fed with the breast milk by means of a medicine dropper or spoon.

Pregnancy. In pregnancy the baby must be weaned.

Menstruation. In menstruation the baby should not be weaned.

It is frequently said that the mother's milk does not agree with the baby. This is not often the case, and if the matter is investigated it will be found that there are other reasons why the breast milk apparently disagrees with the baby. Green or slimy movements in a baby otherwise doing well are not a good reason for weaning. If the baby spits up, it may be because he is dandled about after feeding or because the flannel binder is too tight or he may have taken too much food. If the baby is troubled with gas, he may have taken the food too fast, the mother may be doing too much work, or she may have indigestion.

Insufficient Breast Milk. This may be determined by weighing the baby before and after nursing, or the mother may be weighed before and after nursing. This will determine the quantity taken by the baby at each nursing. The baby will as a rule need as many ounces, plus one, as he is months old.

If the Milk is Insufficient. If there is not enough breast milk we should examine and see:—

(1) That the mother is taking proper and sufficient food.
(2) That she is not overworked.

If these conditions are satisfactory, it will be necessary to make up the deficiency by a cow's milk formula, or one breast-feeding may be omitted entirely and a cow's milk formula substituted in its place. The former method should be used where the supply of breast milk is very small and the latter in case the supply is nearly normal. The cow's milk formula to be used should be the same except that a baby taking breast milk will take a stronger formula than a baby of the same age being raised on cow's milk.

When to Part Feed the Baby. Generally after the second month, except in the hot summer weather, it is desirable even if the breast supply is adequate, to give the baby one bottle feeding a day. This gives the mother more freedom and enables her to carry on the nursing longer by keeping her from getting mentally and physically tired. A further advantage is that it teaches the baby to take milk from a bottle and makes the weaning easier. One bottle may be substituted for any one nursing.

Nursing Hours. It is advisable to put the baby to the breast as soon as the mother has recovered from the exhaustion of her confinement. There will not likely be any nurse, but the efforts of the baby will stimulate the flow of milk to the breasts. The baby does not need any food during the first twenty-four hours. A little boiled water without sugar will be sufficient. The baby should be put to the breasts alternately during the second day at intervals of four hours. During the next twenty-four hours the interval should be regular by the clock every two hours from 6 a.m. till 10 p.m., and at 2 a.m. The intervals should be lengthened to two and two and a half hours and then to three hours, as soon as the baby will allow it. The three-hour limit should be established by the end of the first month. Convenient hours for nursing are 6 a.m., 9 a.m., 12 noon, 3 p.m., 6 p.m., 10 [illegible] and 2 a.m. The 2 a.m. feeding should be cut off as soon as the baby will go from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. The continuous sleep is good for the baby and should be brought about as soon as possible. Usually this is accomplished at two and a half and three months of age. The 10 p.m. feeding should usually be continued for eight or nine months or longer if the baby is not gaining. Many strong, healthy babies will go satisfactorily from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. without feeding.

The baby should be nursed at one breast only at each feeding. If the supply of milk in one breast is not sufficient he may be given both breasts at a feeding. At first the baby should not nurse more than ten minutes, not at any time more than twenty-five minutes. Many mothers make the mistake of giving the baby too much.

Position of the Nursing Baby. The baby should be held comfortably on the mother's arm and so placed that the nipple goes easily into his mouth. It is a good plan for the mother to lie down when nursing the baby. The baby should not be allowed to go to sleep until a reasonable time for feeding is allowed. The nursing once begun should not be interrupted.

(To Be Continued Next Week.)

MEANING OF DREAMS SHOULD BE STUDIED

Most of Them Have a Meaning, An English Writer Declares, and This Can Be Discovered.

Dreams cannot be dismissed with the scoff "What did you have for supper?" As a matter of fact you dream more when you are hungry than when you are sufficed, says a writer in "Answers." Other phrases like "loss of equilibrium," "brain excitement," "cerebral unrest," "sleep insanity," and so on, are merely attempts to explain why we dream. They don't touch the important question, "Do dreams mean anything?"

The writer's answer to this is, "Most certainly they do!"

Dreams can be divided into classes. A "return" dream is unimportant. It comes from the brain using up unexhausted impulses of thought.

Another type of dream is the "browsing" sort, which is a near relation of the "return" variety. The mind browses over ordinary matters of the day. Incidents are repeated, sometimes fantastically, but your recollection of the dream is, as a rule, vague.

That in itself is a good sign, for you need never worry over dreams you cannot remember. Those which leave a vivid and persistent impression are important and urgent.

Lucky and Unlucky Dreams

Symbolic dreams need a key for their unravelling. And there is this difficulty, that, except in some few cases, the key is entirely personal to the dreamer.

There is no hard and fast law of interpretation. Thought is necessary. A system of tabulation is a great help. If you find that certain events follow a certain type of dream, then you have the beginning of the key. Certain objects which figure in dreams have for thousands of years been of good or ill omen, and these would help you out in details. Flour, for example, foretells illness or death. Gold is a bad thing to dream about. So, too, are perfumes. Silver is good.

What are called "warning" dreams should be taken at their full value, and precautions should be taken to avoid the place, person, or circumstances indicated.

The writer dreamed that a tree in an avenue swayed and fell on him as he was on the way to a certain house, where he went on a certain evening every week. He went another way, but the tree crashed down all the same. Like instances could be multiplied by the hundred.

Other "warning" dreams are revelations of what will actually happen, and cannot be "discharged." These nearly always refer to some other person.

Dreambook Nonsense

Old "Dreame Bookes" have a tremendous amount of rubbish, with now and again a little bit of true traditional interpretation. What has stood the test of thousands of years can be relied upon. Here is an example. A lad continually dreamed of Satan and evil fiends. Tradition says that portends the dreamer will become a priest. At the time nothing looked more absolutely impossible. Now he is a clergyman of the Church of England.

Those who scoff at dream philosophy, and think that it is merely for the ignorant and superstitious, are wrong, the "Answers" man declares, for the most eminent men of all ages have believed in the significance of dreams. And as we know that nothing is purposeless in life, then dreams must have a purpose.

So, without seeking the aid of modern "witches," study your dreams, tabulate them, and get the key.

BODY AFFECTS MIND

Irritability is Caused by Sickness of More or Less Severe Character

The irritability of a dyspeptic is due to his physical condition. Most people, to a greater or less degree, realize the dependence of mental and emotional states on conditions of health and disease.

When a man is cross, around the house, he is often excused on the old saying of, "Well, his liver is bad."

There is nothing truer than that the state of the physical organs, particularly those connected, directly or indirectly, with the digestive apparatus, determine the attitude of the mind towards things and people.

When a man's tissues are nourished he looks upon the world in a kindly way.

The man who can burn a thick steak and a platter of vegetables into mental and physical energy is the man whom we often see controlling other men and affairs.

The pessimistic, narrow, jaundice-eyed creature is very likely to be lacking in the ability even to inspire himself to great things.

Did you ever notice how cheerfully a woman gives her order in a restaurant when there is a man along to pay the freight?

FASHION HINTS

Embroidered Buds on Gown

There's a suggestion of fancy dress costume about this gown, of flowered taffeta. The blossoms are embroidered on the white silk in delicate green. The underskirt of chiffon is also embroidered in floral design, and the bodice is of transparent chiffon.

KITCHEN WRINKLES

A piece of starch placed in the water will keep flowers fresh for quite a long period.

If a little saltpetre is sprinkled over the fire occasionally it will keep the the chimney free from soot.

After washing cut-glass articles let them dry and afterwards rub them carefully with prepared chalk, with a soft brush.

Potatoes are more nutritious if boiled in their skins, after being scrubbed clean; they can be skinned before taking to table.

After using a gas-stove for baking leave the door open a little while to allow the heat to escape. This will prevent sweating and rusting.

The best way to keep a dustbin fresh and clean is to put hot ashes into it each time it has been emptied. It keeps it quite clean and free from all smells.

Celery or parsley rubbed on the hands after peeling onions will counteract the odor. Lemon, borax, or ammonia is excellent for removing stains from the hands.

Brown stockings should never be ironed, but just pressed through the mangle to smooth them out. A hot iron will spoil the color and give them an unpleasant yellw tint.

When washing oilcloth a tablespoonful of painters' size added to a pail of water will give it a glossy surface and make it wear much better than when washed in the ordinary way.

Not only is powdered oatmeal good for the complexion, but a little of it thrown into the water in which the face and hands are bathed has a softening and whitening effect.

When cooking kippers, place them on a dish or tin with a piece of butter on each; cover and leave in a fairly hot oven for ten minutes. This method preserves the juice and the flavor of the fish better than frying.

When cleaning stone steps and hearths mix the white hearthstone or red ochre with thin starch instead of water. This causes it to stick to the stones, and it will not be washed off so quickly with rain or be trodden off.

Many a man who imagines his executive ability is sufficient to control the affairs of a nation would not even make a successful book agent.

PETERBORO'S FINE WATERWORKS SUBJECT OF ARTICLE BY EXPERT

Plant and Equipment Illustrated in the Canadian Engineer.

The current number of The Canadian Engineer has an illustrated article on Peterborough's fine waterworks, giving details of the plant and a description of the pumping equipment. The illustrations show the reinforced concrete dam, interior of the pumping station, the Worthington vertical pump and De Laval auxiliary pump, the Venturi meter and the chlorinating pump. The article, written by R. O. Wynne-Roberts, M.CanSoc.C.E., follows:—

Peterborough a city of about 22,000 inhabitants, derives its supply of water from the River Otonabee, about 2 1-2 miles upstream from, and at a slightly higher elevation than, the centre of the city. The water is pumped direct to the consumers, and as the highest part supplied is only 100 feet above the pumps there is no difficulty in maintaining sufficient pressure.

A reinforced concrete dam, about 300 feet long, thrown across the river, impounds the water in the river for the development of power and as storage for the supply to the citizens. The depth of water behind the dam is about 12 feet and affords an available head on the water turbines of an average of about 10 feet, and the suction lift of the pumps ranges from 3 to 10 feet. Provision is made to draw water from the tailrace, when frazil ice causes trouble above the dam, or when the stream is low and it is desirable to conserve the water for power, the suction lift in this case is about 18 feet.

The pumping station is a substantial building of reinforced concrete framework and brick panels and measures about 125 feet long by 40 feet wide. It houses three sets of water-driven horizontal single-acting triplex pumps, a Worthington centrifugal pump and an auxiliary steam pump. The two oldest pumps were installed in 1893 and are massively built. They have three plungers each 18 inches in diameter, 30-inch stroke and are operated at 20 r.p.m. when run at full capacity. Each of these are capable of delivering 2 1-4 million gallons per day. The plunger heads are connected to the crankshafts carrying massive cog-wheels, which are driven by pinions from a horisontal shaft that transmits the power from the water turbines through bevel wheels. The water power is developed by vertical Samson turbines—62-inch wheels. Speed, 66 r.p.m.

The other triplex pump of similar construction was built in 1909 and has a capacity of three million gallons per day. The plungers are 21 inches in diameter, 30-inch stroke, and driven in a like manner to the other by a Samson vertical turbine, having a 68-inch wheel running at about 80 r.p.m. The bevel gear reduces the sped of the pumps to 22 strokes per minute.

There is a 3-stage Worthington vertical centrifugal pump, also driven by a Samson water turbine. The water-wheel rotates about 80 r.p.m. and by means of an increasing gear the pump is capable of being driven at about 640 r.p.m. The delivery from the pump is rated at about three million gallons daily.

Steam Auxiliary Pump

The steam auxiliary pump, installed in 1915, is a De Laval single-stage turbine driven by a 400 h.p. steam turbine running at about 6,000 r.p.m. under 125 lbs. steam pressure. The pump is driven at about 1,385 r.p.m. by the steam turbine by means of the usual reduction gear. This pumping unit is split horisontally for easy access to all parts The suction is 14 inches diameter and the delivery 12 inches. This pump is arranged to draw water either from above the dam with a suction lift of 3 feet or thereabouts or from the tailrace with a lift of about 18 feet, and is rated at six million gallons per day under a total head of about 328 feet. The condensing plan consists of a Schutte-Koerting multi-jet condenser and a De Laval centrifugal pump working under 35 feet head at 2,200 r.p.m. and discharging about 700 gallons per minute, and driven by a steam turbine of type T.A.

The pump house is equipped with an overhead travelling crane carying a hand-operated 10-ton block tackle.

The water-driven triplex pumps and water turbines were made by William Hamilton Co., Peterborough. The Worthington turbine pump was built by John McDougal Caledonian Iron Works Co., Montreal, and the De Laval steam turbine and pumps were supplied by the Turbine Equipment Co., Toronto.

There are two 100-h.p. horizontal return tube boilers each 66 inches in diameter and 16 feet long, fitted with Cyclone shaking grates of 34 square feet in area A fan to induce draft is belt-driven by a 6 h.p. vertical steam engine and a 6-h.p. Foos gasoline engine is installed to operate the fan when the boiler furnaces are being started. The boilers are not heated until necessity arises. The boilers are placed in a separate adjoining building, the base of which is reinforced concrete with a brick superstructure, and a laminated wood roof covered with 5-ply Barrett roofing.

Pumping the Water

The water is pumped from the river through a 30-inch auction header and discharged from the pumps through individual connections controlled by valves into a 24-inch delivery main, in which is inserted a 10-nch Venturi throat to measure the quantity pumped. The Venturia meter recording apparatus is in the office on the main floor, together with a self-recording Bristol pressure gauge and Wallace & Tiernan's chlorinating plant. The meter is type M Builds' Iron Foundry Co. make and needs no description, but it is interesting to note that the Venturi throat referred to not only measures the volume of water pumped but also controls the operation of the chlorinating plant. The differential presures in the inlet and throat of the Venturi meter are transmitted to the Benturi meter recorder and also to the diaphragm which controls the admission of liquid chlorine according to the varying quantity of water that is supplied. The liquid chlorine is supplied in steel cylinders under considerable presure and when it is decided what quantity of it must be used to sterilize the water it can be done easily by means of a glass gauge set against a graduated scale. Having noted the volume of water that is being registered by the meter and adjusting the chlorinator scale to suit the required proportion of chlorine to be added, the differential pressures at the Venturi throat automatically regulate the clorinator for other rates of flow. The liquid clorine meets with a small quantity of water in a glass vessel and the resulting mixture is conveyed by a rubber pipe to the suction connection in the pipe gallery. The maximum quantity of liquid chlorine used, is stated to be about 3 lbs. per million gallons, but the average in 1916 was 1 1-2 lbs. The chlorine costs about 25 cents pere pound delivered at the pump house inclusive of all charges.

The pump-house, etc., are steam heated by means of a 30-h.p. horizontal return-tube boiler.

The force mains to the city consist of one 16inch and one 18-inch cast-iron pipe. These continue well within the city boundaries. The normal pressure at the pumps is about 70 lbs., and the fire pressure from 100 to 120 lbs. per square inch. There are about 44 miles of mains ranging from 3 inches to 18 inches in diameter, all cast-iron pipe. There are also 4,323 services.

The total quantity pumped in 1916 was about 1,100,000,000 gallons, or an average of about three million gallons per day. The maximum peak rate was about 5 1-2 million gallons per day. The average daily consumption of water in 1916 was about 136 gallons per capita. The cost of the water, inclusive of all charges, averaged about 4.95 cents pere 1,000 gallons.

The Peterborough waterworks were first installed by a private company in 1882 and were acquired by the city in 1902.

The water commissioners are Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman; Messrs. W. H. Moore and Robt. Hicks. Mr. R. L. Dobbin, B.A.Sc., is the water works superintendent, to whom credit must be given for the foregoing information, and Mr. Wm. Kennedy, Jr., Montreal, is the consulting engineer.

The President Sworn In

President Wilson took the oath of office at 12.03 p.m. Sunday in the presence of the chief justice and some members of the Cabinet. There was no ceremony. When he kissed the Bible after taking the oath of office his lips touched on this passage: "The Lord is our refuge; a very present help in time of trouble."

MOBILIZE RESOURCES FOR SPIRITUAL CONQUEST

Call and Challenge to the Christian Church.

Successful anniversary services were held at St. James Methodist Church on Sunday, the visiting preachers being Rev. R. G. Peever of George St. Church, and Rev. C. W. Barrett of Lakefield, the former preaching at the morning service, while Mr. Barrett addressed an open session of the Sunday School and occupied the pulpit at the evening service. The special collections for the day amounted to $150.

The choir, under the leadership of Mr. Harold Hill, did valuable work towards adding to the enjoyment of the services. Mr. Hill is building up a strong organization both in quality and quantity and the singing Sunday morning brought a compliment from Rev R. G. Peever who referred to the choristers as "a very excellent choir." Mr. Peever was introduced by the pastor, Rev. Benj. Greatrix, as "one who by his words has been a constant inspiration to me in the building of the new church."

The visiting preacher took for his text verses 2 and 3 of Isaiah, ch. 54: "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth from the curtains of mine habitations; spare not lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes; For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited."

These words, used by the prophet to the church, were applied by the preacher to the church of the present day when the dark hour is at hand.

Mr. Peever discussed the call and challenge to the church—that of organizing for spiritual conquest, and, after surveying the world-wide conflict of today, said: If we can unite to smite and kill, we can unite to bless. This is not a time for the Christian church to retrench.

Mr. Peever told of the measures taken by the nations to prosecute the war, of how the British Cabinet had been remounlded and of how vast sums of money in war loans had been raised and asked why the Christian church could not in a similar way mobilize its resources for the blessing of mankind and the establishment of Christ's kingdom.

He said a day of glorious dawn will come out of the turmoil of war and the Christian church must be prepared to meet the opportunity presented.

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

In reality, cheap tea is rarely more economical, often less economical, than Red Rose Tea.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

TO CONSCRIPT 50,000 MEN WITHIN NEXT SIXTY DAYS

Chaplain Makes Authorized Statement While Preaching in Winnipeg Church—Militia Act to be Enforced.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 5.—Captain (Rev.) W. J. Hindley, chaplain of the 190th Battalion, addressing his congregation in Central Congregational Church last night stated that he was authoriezd to announce that the Militia Act will be put into effect within the next sixty days and probably within the next thirty days.

The first call, he said, would be for 50,000 men, and the number to be supplied by each province would be apportioned to it by the authorities at Ottawa, having regard to the man-power of each province and the number of recruits already furnished under the voluntary system. The man-power, Capt. Hindley said, would be ascertained from the registration cards returned under the National Service system. Single men between the ages of 18 and 45 will be called up first, said Capt. Hindley, and the government will issue orders that Quebec must first bring her contribution of men up to the level of Manitoba.

The names of two or three times the number of men to be contributed would be placed in a box, and names would be drawn until the quota to be supplied by a district was obtained. Each man would be required to appear before a board, which would decide whether he was rendering service in his civilian capacity of more importance than if he were in uniform. The men selected for the army would be put straight into khaki and would form a home defence army of 50,000.

It would not be a case of training one or two days a week, he said, but they would be in continuous training for eighteen months. At the end of that time, if the war was still on, these 50,000 would be sent to the front.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

MARCH IS HARD ON THE EYES

The sun's strength increases fast in March, and the glare from the melting snow is very hard on the eyes, especially if they are at all weak. Dr. Fowler fits the eyes with glasses that are the proper strength, and rendered opaque to keep the glare from the ice from injuring the eyesight. He will gladly explain their features.

OBITUARY

JAMES DAVIDSON.

On Saturday evening James Davidson, Dennistoun avenue, dropped dead while entering his residence. He had been down town all afternoon, and about 6 o'clock took the car to his home. He left the car with a number of acquaintances at Dennistoun avenue and when about to enter his home was seen to fall. Friends hurried to his assistance. He lay motionless, and was picked up and taken into the house, where an examination showed that he was dead. A later medical opinion was given that heart failure had caused immediate death.

The late Mr. Davidson for many years was one of the most progressive farmers of Smith, and was widely known by a large circle of friends. The late Mr. Davidson was at all times interested in associations that tended to the welfare of the farm. About ten years ago he moved with his family to Peterborough, where he had since resided.

The deceased was a son of the late James Davidson, who emigrated from the North of Ireland and settled in the township of Smith nearly 100 years ago when the city of Peterborough contained only about seven houses and was not known on the map even as Scott's Plains. He is, therefore, one of the few fast-disappearing links connecting the present generation with the earliest history of Peterborough. He was born in the Township of Smith 71 years ago. He was a staunch Liberal in politcs and a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, a daughter of the late George McKee of Smith, and his two daughters, Misses Georgie and Hazel, also his brother, Mr. Wm. Davidson, and his sisters, Mrs. Sam. McKibbon, of Troy, N.Y., Mrs. Sarah McPherson, and Mrs. George E. Elliott.

The funeral services will be held at his residence, 11 Dennistoun Ave., on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock.

JOHN GAUL

John Gaul, an old resident of North Monaghan, died yesterday morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Rogers, Frank Street Brownton. He was 84 years of age.

The funeral took place this morning to Sacred Heart Church and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the Late Mrs. (Dr.) George Burnham took place privately this morning from her late residence on Water Street to the Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Canon Cornish of St. John's Church. The pall bearers were Dr Carmichael and Messrs. R. B. Rogers, W. H. Hill, Robt. Fair, W. F. Johnston, and W. Blackwell.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS TO HAVE PART IN GARDEN PLOTS

INSTITUTION WILL BE A CLEARING HOUSE IN FURNISHING HELP.

Seventy five men and older boys listened with the greatest interest to Lt. A. E. Brittain's address on the second battle of Ypres, which was given at the meeting Sunday afternoon. This is the second appearance of Mr. Brittain this season and he has on both occasions been greeted with record audiences.

The Y.M.C.A. of Canada are to cooperate with the Department of Agriculture in organizing and supervising "Boy Power" for the purpose of increasing farm products.

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. is to line up its boy members of 15 and under in a contest in working city garden plots and will endeavor to act as a clearing house in furnishing young men of 16 and 17 years of age for farm work. The association is fortunate in having the assistance of its President, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Directors H. B. Cowan and J. E. Smith, men who are well acquainted with the agricultural situation. These men are aiding the association secretaries in outlining a program which it is hoped will prove most successful.

The complete program will be announced next week, although the association would greatly appreciate the favor if information regarding available vacant lots could be sent to the Y.M.C.A. office this week.

To create the right interest in the proposed plan the effort must take the shape of a contest with a series of cash prizes, so there will be an opportunity for interested friends to set up the trophies.

Mr. F. E. Ellis will speak to the boys on Wednesday evening regarding Canada's agricultural problem. Every boy should be present.

NO MORE LIQUOR FOR DRY STATES

DRASTIC PROHIBITION BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson has signed the post office appropriation bill containing the "bone dry" prohibition provision.

The "bone dry" provision of the postal bill is the most far-reaching prohibition legislation ever enacted by the Federal Government; in fact, it is the first direct legislation by the government prohibiting the liquor traffic.

At least fourteen states which have prohibition laws but do not prohibit the importation of certain quantities of liquor for personal use will be made bone dry by the new law which prohibits the importation of liquor into any state that prohibits "its manufacture and sale." State legislation, recently passed and about to become effective within the next few weeks will increase the number of bone dry states to at least twenty-two.

The same bill prohibits delivery in the mails of any publication or any correspondence bearing liquor advertisements in states which by their own laws prohibit such advertising within their borders.

ST. PAUL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS

At the mid week service on Wednesday evening the Rev. Mr. Smith, assistant minister in the Dale Presbyterian Church, Toronto, will speak. His wife was a former member of St. Paul's Church and a graduate of our Deaconness College in Toronto. She will also give a brief address. The Women's Missionary Society will hold their meeting Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The preparatory servcie has been postponed from the 9th to the 16th of March as the Communion has been postponed to the Sabbath, the 18th.

Distinguished Privates

"This afternoon I saw the Oxford City Volunteers Training Corps—of which the Poet Laureate is a member—as they swung along the street," says a writer in The Magazine. "'Town and Gown' marched side by side. I caught sight of Private Gilbert Murray (Regius Professor of Greek), and Private W. M. Geldart (Vinerian Professor of Law); close by him marched a well known Oxford philosopher; and towering a head taller than anyone else was our great Professor of Literature, Sir Walter Raleigh."

ADVANCE ON FIVE MILE FRONT AGAINST STUBBORN RESISTANCE

Another Substantial Gain for the British.

LONDON, March 4—Last night's official statement says: Against the Germans' stubborn resistance, British troops today advanced on a line north of the Ancre in France, an average of a quarter of a mile on a front of nearly five miles long.

The advance was made north of Puisieux Au Mont and east of Gommecourt. A counter-attack against our advanced position north-east of Gueudecourt was stopped by our heavy fire.

An enemy bombing attack forced our troops to evacuate a trench east of Sailly-Saillisel, but an immediate counter-attack was organized and regained the whole of the lost ground.

FRENCH SUCCESSES

PARIS, March 4—(Official): Between the Oise and the Aisne our detachments penetrated positions south of Nouvron as far as the Germans' second trench, and carried out important destructive work.

Raids and surprise attacks took place in several sectors on the French front last night. We repulsed all attacks. Three of our air squadrons dropped projectiles on hangars at Frescati, on a powder magazine at Bons, on blast furnaces at Boefline and on the railroad station at Delme.

PARIS, March 4—Artillery activities have been displayed along the entire front. Violent action in the eastern theatre by Italian troops at Hill 1050 resulted in shattering the enemy's trenches and the bringing in of prisoners. All counter-attacks were repulsed.

Women for Conventions

East Middlesex Liberals decided to invite women to equal representation and participation in the coming convention for Federal nomination on April 14.

WILL ARM MERCHANTMEN

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Senate failed to pass the armed neutrality bill before the final adjournment of Congress today. The President will, however, arm American merchant ships and take whatever other steps he deems necessary to protect vessels.

FOUR ENEMY STEAMERS AND BARGES WITH AMMUNITION AMONG CAPTURES.

RUSSIANS TAKE CITY.

LONDON, March 4—The Admiralty announces that in Mesopotamia operations on the river, the gunboats Tarantula, Mantis and Moth came in contact with the Turkish army while in retreat and inflicted heavy losses and captured four Turkish steamers and a number of barges full of ammunition.

LONDON, March 4 (Official statement)—Hamadan, an important Persian city near the Turkish border, has been captured by Russians, who are pursuing Turkish troops who are in retreat.

TOOK VILLAGE, TOO

PETROGRAD, March 4—An official statement reports the capture of Hamadan, 100 miles from the Mesopotamian border. We also captured a village within two miles of Bijar, 80 miles north-west of Hamadan.

His Voice Still for War

Ex-President Wm. H. Taft, passing through London, Ont., said in an interview that American ships would be armed, would attack the first submarine sighted in the danger zone, and that the first clash would bring matters to an issue.

Ambition is responsible for many of life's failures. The average man would rather wabble around in a big place than fill a small one well.

When a man waits to make sure he is right before going ahead he may find himself distanced by a less conservative individual who was willing to take some chances.

THE REFRIGERATOR NEEDS PROPER CARE

Some Hints as to How to Get the Best Results and How to Improve An Old One.

Refrigerators are supposed to be necessary to the preservation of food, but many times, through carelessness, they are exactly the opposite.

A good (not necessarily an expensive) refrigerator is a profitable investment; but, unless one knows or studies it from all sides, in, out, up, and down, we often find a refrigerator is a very expensive house furnishing.

The best arranged are those having the ice chamber one one side, with a swinging door. This space should be large enough to store at least 125 pounds of ice, and the ice chamber should not be opened.

Ice is wasted by constant contact with warm air from outside. There never should be any food kept in this ice space. The only things permissible are the water bottles, which should be filled and laid inside.

If you contemplate purchasing a new refrigerator do not overlook the fact that if the lining is white you can detect the slightest mold or any other dirt which might be neglected on a dark surface.

The ice chamber, if one is careful not to place any food in it, may be kept in perfect condition with a thorough cleansing once a week. Remove the ice and the bars its rests on. Do not use warm water. Take cool water, with any of the cleansing powders or a little ammonia, and wipe every inch and corner of the space, and flush the pipe with cold water. A little cold water will not flush the pipe; you need a force or a deluge of water which acts like a torrent to sweep the drain pipe of anything it may contain.

All food should be kept covered. The little granite pails of different sizes that may be purchased for 10 cents are most valuable in the refrigerator. Milk bottles should be kept closed with a paper cap or a cup turned over the top of it.

Not enough thought or knowledge is given to the drainage or waste pipe. Many drain pipes connect directly with the sewer system of our homes. This is very unsafe. The only safe way to do this is to have a reliable plumber arrange the pipes so there may be no direct connection between the sewer and where food is kept.

The old wooden-lined ice boxes may be freshened and the musty smell removed by giving the entire inside a coat of lime. Wash the entire inside with a strong solution of soda water. Dry in the sun, if possible; if not, leave open until perfectly dry. Mix a quart of quicklime with water to a consistency of cream. Apply with a wide paint brush to every part of the lining. This will be satisfactory if used on the dark zinc lining. If the first coat does not make the inside white, give it another coat of the lime wash. If the refrigerator is in good condition, and the lining is of zinc and has become dark colored, give the entire inside two or three coats of bathtub enamel, allowing the different coats to thoroughly dry each time before applying a second or third coat. The cleanliness and drainage of our refrigerators may affect our whole household.

If the ice box is damp, a bowl containing a lump of unslacked lime (the size of an egg or a cup placed on the top shelf will absorb much of the moisture.

Every housewife should inspect her refrigerator every day if she wishes to keep her food sweet, her grocery bills small and the health of her family good.

LICK HIM AGAIN

Every time you lick a war stamp think of the Kaiser, and give it another lick.

Blessings and curses are equally out of place. He will get all that is coming to him. But anybody who fails to learn the lesson from the example he has set will have missed the appearance of evil.

Many of us cannot do much more than lick postage stamps, but we can all do that with a cheerful spirit. They will stick all the better for the good cheer put into the process of their attachment.

It ought to be a source of constant satisfaction that the stamps are not being licked for benefit of the Kaiser. It would be a degrading business if we had to lick stamps for the Kaiser after what we have found out about him.

We can be sure that if we do not lick stamps for King George and his merry men we shall have to lick them for Wilhelm and his pirates. This reflection makes it so pleasant to lick a stamp that one goes to a pile of unanswered letters with gratitude for the chance to give the Kaiser another lick.

The Kaiser wishes very much to stick himself all over civilisation. The only way to keep him off is to stick something else up there first. The war stamp is an excellent substitute for Kaiser Wilhelm, and it will not adhere so disagreeably as he would if he were given a chance to stick. With Wilhelm in mind, it is possible to lick war stamps all day long with a thankful, happy heart.—Toronto World.

Seized German Works and Gold

The Russian Government ordered the confiscation of the Warsaw gas works, which belonged to a German company. The city officials in searching the company's safe found 900,000 roubles (about $450,000) in gold, which had evidently been stored up to send to Germany.

ARCHIBALD RINK CAPTURE PRIMARY HONORS OF SPIEL

Victory by Fourteen Shots in Final Contest.

The finals of the local bonspiel have been played, and Skip Archibald's rink is the winner. They took the measure of Dr. Wightman's rink on Saturday night, and at no stage of the game was the winning rink in danger. The contest was watched from start to finish by all the club members who found it possible to be present, and many were surprised at the perfect plays made at all times by the victors. The rinks and scores were:

J. K. Costain	J. W. Parkins
F. Brownscombe	R. J. Soden
M. C. Tooley	J. Wiley
A. W. Archibald	Dr. Wightman
Skip 20	Skip ... 6

The score by ends was—

Archibald .....2xx3x34x4x211x—20

Wightman ....x11x1xx1x1xxx1— 6

Consolation

In the consolation the following games were played which leaves the semi-finals to be run off this evening:

J. Copping	J. H. Parsons
M. Comstock	L. A. Turner
P. D. Fitzgerald	R. Harstone
J. H. Ferguson	W. G. Ferguson
Skip....13	Skip.... 6
C. Westbrook	T. O. Donaldson
J. M. Lowes	C. S. Towne
C. J. Seymour	J. Brightman
R. G. Sturgeon	T. Brightman
Skip ...12	Skip.... 10

In the semi-finals Skips Kay and Sturgeon will play off, and the winner will go into the finals. The other to go into the first draw will be the winner of a three-cornered battle. Skips Giroux and Foote will fight it out first, and the winner will play J. H. Ferguson.

MERCANTILE CUP MOVES AGAIN

E. G. PATTERSON'S FOUR ARE THE NEW HOLDERS.

Vice-Skip E. G. Patterson now holds the Mercantile Cup, having wrested the honor of holding it for at least a week from C. C. Parsons on Saturday night. The members of the winning rink could not have played better and every shot was laid to perfection. Skip Patterson forgot to wear the hat which goes with the cup, but no protest was lodged on this account.

The rinks and scores:—

MORE OF THE SAD DETAILS AS TOLD BY THE OTHER FELLOWS

(Hamilton Herald.)

Victory was sweet. While the locals predominated throughout the entire proceedings, they were not getting results from their herculean efforts, and it looked like a hopeless task for them to score five times in the last frame. But the unexpected happened, and the round honors are resting comfortably here.

Peterborough's strong defence — Halpin and Flanagan kept the Hams at bay for the first two periods. Shot after shot was rained on Goalkeeper LeGros, but the bulk of them were made from outside the defence, and were somewhat easy for him to handle. The locals absolutely refused to even attempt to beat the visiting pair, it being quite evident that they learned their strength in Peterborough.

In the last period, however, with every man on the team with the exception of Sloan upon the forward line, the defence of the invaders had little chance to stop the home crew. The puck was constantly in the 247th's end of the rink, and the shots that LeGros stopped were so numerous that the actual count was lost. Five got past him, but this was but a very small percentage of the number fired in his vicinity.

Minus Bobby Armstrong, their star centre, the Petes were undoubtedly weakened, but it is doubtful if even his presence would have denied the Hams their well-earned victory. Thornton played at rover in Armstrong's absence, and Evans went up to centre. Halpin and Flanagan, on the defence, were the pick of the visitors. Such a defence has not been seen in Hamilton in the intermediate ranks. They had the local baffled for 40 minutes, and it was only when the entire local crew went up on the forward line that they were helpless. Evans, at centre, was strong. He scored their only goal, and played fine hockey from gong to gong. The lads from the house of Flanagan did yeoman service, and, in fact, the whole team worked hard, but they were worn out in the last period, and didn't appear to have a good kick left in them. This was plainly noticeable by their failure to get the puck out of their territory more than once in the last ten minutes.

Peterborough, in Pat Flanagan and Halpin, possesses one of the strongest defences in the intermediate ranks. They commanded the respect of the Hams throughout, and kept them shooting from outside until the last period, when the entire local team went up on the line.

LeGros may be a lucky goal-guardian, but he also possesses a great amount of ability. He had more shots to take care of than any goalkeeper who has appeared here this season, and it was only due to his wonderful work that only eight got past him. He had little or no chance to stop those five in the final period. Four of them were from close in, and his entire team was around him.

JACK ADAMS GUARDED BY TWO PLAYERS

WOULDN'T LET HIM GET AWAY AT HAMILTON.

Where was Jack Adams when the light went out at Hamilton the other night? A number of fans have been unable to answer the problem to their satisfaction. The doughty right winger of the Soldiers was expected to put up his best game of the winter, but for the first time this season he failed to appear in the scoring summary.

The explanation is simple. Adams went into the game ready to play his head off, but he had two men on top of him all night. It was next to impossible for Adams to get going at his real speed at any stage of the contest, and the best he could do was to try—which he did to the last ounce of energy.

THE WAR LORD OF LAUGHTER

Among all the war-lords one would not look to find a "War-Lord of Laughter"; but this title has been earned by Bruce Bairnsfather, whose war-cartoons have made all England laugh. To these he has lately added a book called "Bullets and Billets," and his whole war-philosophy, revealed by pen and picture, shows no tolerance of such "nonsense" as "the purifying and uplifting qualities of warfare." Indeed, "he sees it for what it is," says Mr. Holbrook Jackson, editor of To-day (London), "a nasty business of mud and blood and other unspeakable things, and he makes his laughter mainly out of the sturdy pluck and will to endure of those rankers who are determined to see it through, despite their grousings and their discomforts." Like all great humor, Bairnsfather's is "allied to tears." "He makes you laugh at the most desolating things, not because they are laughing matters, but because of their curious juxtaposition to rather bewildered human beings who are surprised to find themselves swept into this maelstrom of destruction." We see here some of his evocations by pencil:

"The most difficult of all artistic achievements is the creation of character. And just as Dickens created Mr. Micawber and Rudyard Kipling Sergeant Mulvaney, so Bruce Bairnsfather has given us Old Bill and Our Bert, the two characteristic Tommies of the early days of the great war. Once having made the acquaintance of these gentlemen in khaki and mud, they become friends for life. Old Bill is the type of the hardy veteran who has been 'out since Mons,' and Bert is the raw recruit who has yet to learn the tricks of the trade. They are both unforgettable. The former, with his walrus moustache, cutty-pipe, and Balaklava helmet, and the latter, with his smooth upper lip, falling jaw, and dangling cigaret, finding his surprise and anxiety always up against the superbly cynical aplomb of Bill. What, for instance, could be more typical of the peculiar cockney humor of so many of our fighting men than the picture of Bert, arriving in the trenches and pointing to what looks like a roughly fashioned doorway in the earth, and asking Bill, 'Is this right for 'eadquarters?' to be told—'Yes, change at Oxford Circus!' Or the laughter-provoking pathos of the heroes leaning up against some sand bags beside a shattered cottage, and saying, 'Ow long are you up for, Bill?' 'Seven years.' 'Yer lucky—I'm duration.' There seems to be a subtle hint here as to the probable length of the war! And I always like the trench picture illuminated by star-shell, with the veteran leaning up against the parapet with a piece of bread on the point of his bayonet in the process of being toasted at a battered fire-bucket. The novice appears with, 'Is this 'ere the Warwicks?' 'Nao,' says Bill, with characteristic scorn, 'Indenburg's blinking light Infantry.'"

Not unlike his drawings is the vignette of his first night in the trenches. Most writers would see here an opportunity for pathos; but Second-Lieutenant Bairnsfather thus began his romantic life in the mud of Flanders.

"Here we were, now wetter than ever, cold as polar bears, sitting in this hygroscopic catacomb at about 2 a.m. We longed for a fire; a fire was decided on. We had a fire-bucket—it started life as a biscuit-tin—a few bits of damp wood, but no coke. 'We had some once, I'm sure! Why, of course, we built it into the dam!' Down came the dam, out came the coke, and in came the water. However, we preferred the water to the cold; so, finally, after many exasperating efforts, we got a fire going in the bucket. Five minutes' bliss followed by disaster. The fire-bucket proceeded to emit such dense volumes of sulfurous smoke that in a few moments we couldn't see a lighted match. We stuck it a short time longer, then one by one dived into the water and out into the air, shooting out of our mud hovel to the surface like snakes when you pour water down their holes. Time now, 3 a.m. No sleep; rain, water plus smoke. A board meeting held immediately decides to give up sleep and dugouts for that night. A motion to try and construct a chimney with an entrenching tool is defeated by five votes to one. . . . Dawn is breaking—my first night in the trenches comes to an end."

Men of twenty-eight have not accumulated a great store of biographical data for their admirers, but Mr. Jackson passes on these:

"He was one of that numerous galaxy of British men who, without any external persuasion, linked up at the beginning. He was 'in it' from the early days of Armageddon, and before the expiry of three months from the fatal 4th of August, he found himself a second lieutenant, sludging about in the mud of Flanders. He is now twenty-eight years old and a captain of his regiment. The fact which will surprise people most is that his name is a real name, and not a pseudonym, for he is the son of Major Thomas Bairnsfather, of the Cheshires, who is acting as District Recruiting Officer at Stratford-on-Avon, where the family has lived for many years. The Bairnsfathers are military folk, and Bruce was born in India. As a boy he was brought to England, and, like the laureate of Tommy Atkins and the army, Rudyard Kipling, he was sent to the famous school at Westward Ho, which everybody knows is the scene of Kipling's school-days and the scenario of 'Stalky & Co.' He inherited the artistic sense from his mother, who is a painter of considerable ability, and his earliest sketches are memories of his Indian experiences."

CAN YOU FALL EASILY?

Let Every Muscle Relax and You Will Break no Bones

"A special providence hovers over drunken men and children."

This saying is frequently heard, but perhaps the majority of persons never thought that it really had some foundation.

As a matter of fact, the main cause of bone breakage from falls is due to the resistance of the tendons more often than from the violence of the shock.

A child or an intoxicated person rarely ever makes any great effort to recover balance in case of slipping or toppling over. So no special resisting force is exercised, and the child or adult simply sinks into a heap without serious injury.

On the other hand, when an adult, with his faculties alive and working normally, falls, he attempts to save himself. He goes through all sorts of contortions and draws up every sinew and muscle until it is tense. Then if the wrench or shock caused by falling is too severe, the bone breaks.

Just a Link

Is this to thee a weary day,
A day that passeth slow;
A day that burdeneth thy heart
With some new weight of woe?

Be patient. Know thou that this day
Is in life's lengthening chain
A necessary link between Joys past and joys to come again.

Where the Mother Was

A young lady was walking in the country one day, when she came upon a boy about to climb a tree. There was a nest in the tree, and from a certain angle it was possible to see in it three eggs.

"You wicked little boy!" said the girl, "are you going up there to rob that nest?"

"I am," the boy replied coolly.

"How can you?" she exclaimed. "Think how the mother will grieve over the loss of her eggs."

"Oh, she won't care," said the boy; she's up there in your hat."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BROWN—BROWNE

A quiet marriage was solemnized in St. Clements Church, Toronto, on Friday evening, March 2, 1917, by the Rev. Canon Bushell of Pte. Egerton Brown, son of Mr. T. E. Brown Postmaster, Port Granby, to Miss Mabel Browne, youngest daughter of Mr. Geo. Browne, 47 Rose Ave., Toronto.

The young couple left on the evening train amid showers of confetti and good wishes to visit Peterborough, Ottawa and other points. On their return they will reside on Granby Ranch, Quesnell, B.C.

The groom is a brother of Mrs. W. McMillan, 595 Division St., and returned from France Jan. 14, 1917.

The social class will meet as usual on Tuesday evening at the Conservatory.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser of Hamilton spent Sunday in the city.

Miss Dallas Wood of Hamilton was a visitor to the city yesterday.

Mr. James Laidlaw of the Trent Valley Canal office, Kirkfield is in the city.

The monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held on Thursday afternoon of this week in the green room of the Y. W. C. A. The subject, Care of the Feeble-Minded, will be presented by Miss Hatton, and Backyard Gardening will be discussed. An interesting afternoon is promised.

Mr. W. Harris, who has been visiting in this district, will leave on his return to Ingelow, Man., this week.

Mr and Mrs. Peter Campbell, Toronto, and Miss Halliday, city, left today for a six weeks' trip in Florida.

Mr. R. L. Kirby, sales manager Studebaker Motor Sales, Toronto, is in the city.

Mrs. C. Birdsall, 166 Edinburgh St., fell on the walkway leading to Dr. Moir's office on Saturday night and severely injured her hip. An examination showed that no bones were broken.

UMBRELLA FOR MR. G. W. GILMAN

RETIRING SUPT. OF ST. ANDREW'S S. S. REMEMBERED BY STAFF.

At the close of the Sunday school services at St. Andrew's Church yesterday afternoon Mr. G. W. Gilman, who recently resigned the position of superintendent after over two years of faithful and efficient service, was presented with a gold-trimmed umbrella by the staff of teachers. Miss Bessie Read read a lengthy complimentary address and the presentation was made by Mr. John Hill. It was a complete surprise for Mr. Gilman, but he made a feeling and appropriate reply. He is succeeded as superintendent by Mr. J. A. McKone and now fills the position of leader of the men's class that was recently organized.

"In Walked Jimmy"

WITH GEORGE H. SUMMERS, HERE NEXT MONDAY, MARCH 12.

Founded on the old but healthy idea that 'nothing succeeds like success," "In Walked Jimmy," which is described as "a comedy with a serious purpose," comes to The Grand Theatre on Monday next, March 12, with George Summers, a comedian of distinction, in the principal role. The play reflects the efficacy of optimism and the utter futility of abandoning the ship when it's sinking simply because the rats are inclined that way. The author is obviously an exponent of that common-sense cult known in psychic and philosophic circles as "New Thought," and to this fact most audiences attribute their two hours of wholesome and unalloyed delight while making the acquaintance of Jimmy.

The thing into which Jimmy walked was a broken down shoe factory, when the clerks had all just been fired, when ejection was imminent, and when the proprietor had a pistol at his head in serious contemplation of suicide.

Jimmy, nothing else but plain Jimmy, would have been a mysterious figure had it not been for his matter-of-fact manner, his smile and his everlasting humanness. He didn't tell who he was; in fact, it didn't matter. He put the shoe business on its feet, or rather on the feet of several hundred thousand babies, won the heart of the girl clerk, saved the erring brother from jail, escaped that place as a permanent boarding house himself, and foiled the villain, all in two hours.

AN APPEAL BY THE RED CROSS

WORKERS WANTED FOR TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Red Cross Society, through the Canadian War Contingent Association is making repeated earnest appeals for socks to be sent to the men in the trenches. It will be only through continued and unceasing work on the part of the knitters that the demand can be met and the local society accordingly urges all its workers to make an extra effort to add to the sock supply. During the past week the knitting machines in the Red Cross work rooms have been kept busy, with the result that there are now 75 pairs of socks to be toed off. The society asks that all ladies who are good darners will meet Tuesday, March 6, at 2.30 p.m., in the Red Cross rooms to do this work.

Tea Cakes

Cream one heaping tablespoon of butter with one cup of light brown sugar, beat in one egg, one cup of sour milk, into which stir one teaspoon of soda. One cup of raisins put into two cups of flour. Add milk and flour little at time, beat hard, put in muffin pans. Put chocolate marshmallow on top and bake twenty-five minutes in moderate oven.

Codfish Toast

Shred one cup of salt fish and soak over night. In the morning drain thoroughly. Put two cups of rich milk in double boiler, blend two tablespoons of flour with a little cold milk until perfectly smooth. Add to the milk in double boiler. Allow to cook fifteen minutes.

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford car either with or without self starter.

Last November I received a Ford car with an A B C electric starter and lighting system which was designed by the head electrician of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted, nor has it had the battery recharged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this starter is reliable and effective in every particular, and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a starter.

My salesman will be in the show room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

38 GUNS CAPTURED FROM TURKS

TURKS ABANDON STRONG POSITION TO ADVANCING BRITISH TROOPS

Had Spent Two Months in Construction of Formidable System of Defences---Captures in Advance Include 38 Guns---Aircraft Bomb Troop Trains and Railways.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7. — An official statement says: "On Monday British cavalry were engaged with a Turkish rearguard at Lajj, nine miles southwest of Ctesiphon, Mesopotamia. Owing to the fact that the war material abandoned by the enemy is strewn over eighty miles of country, it is not yet possible to give an accurate list of our captures. The collection of booty and salvage of guns, etc., is being proceeded with, and up to the present 38 guns, including those on captured river craft, have been collected, exclusive of machine guns and trench mortars.

"Turkish forces abandoned in the face of our advancing troops a very strong position in the neighborhood of Sheikh Nuran, west of Shellal, after having spent two months in the construction of a formidable system of defences.

"Yesterday our aircraft carried out a series of bombing attacks on enemy troops, railway trains and rolling stock. About ten high explosive bombs were dropped. Much damage was caused to personnel and material.

"Shellal is on the Nile, in upper Egypt, about four hundred miles south of Cairo."

BRITISH EXPENDITURE AND REVENUE IN YEAR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7—Up till last Saturday the total British expenditure for the fiscal year was nine billion seven hundred and sixty-five million dollars, and the revenue was two billion four hundred and seventy millions.

OCCUPY CRATER IN THE ARGONNE

SURPRISE ATTACK ON GERMAN TRENCHES NETTED PRISONERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 7.—"Between the Oise and the Aisne we made a surprise attack on German trenches at Quennevieres and brought back fifteen prisoners," says today's official announcement.

"In the Argonne, in the vicinity of Four de Paris, we exploded a mine and occupied the crater.

"Germans attempted several surprise attacks to the northeast of Flirey, in Bouchot Woods, north of St Mihiel, and near Ammots-Willo. The attacks were checked at once by our curtain of fire and losses were inflicted on the enemy.

"Elsewhere the night was calm.

"Adjt. Casale brought down his sixth German airplane yesterday."

Foe Claims 15 'Planes.

BERLIN, March 7.—The war office announces there was lively artillery activities at various points on the Western front from Verdun front to Arras, with repeated actions between reconnoitering detachments and trench garrisons. In the evening the French attacked on the northeast front of Verdun new German positions in Caurieres Wood, but were repulsed.

The war office claims fifteen enemy airplanes and only one German machine were shot down yesterday.

BERLIN, March 7. — An army headquarters announcement says there has been a let-up in the severe weather along the Russian front, accompanied by increased activity on the part of artillery, but the infantry is still comparatively inactive.

NO PROTEST BY KITCHENER IN CASE OF REISE

SAY THEY WILL WIN O.H.A. CHAMPIONSHIP ON FRIDAY NIGHT.

(Special to The Review.)

KITCHENER, March 7—The Kitchener Intermediates do not propose to protest Reise of Hamilton, having no evidence to support a protest. Manager Rita does not care for eleventh hour protests. We will win Friday.

The Review received the above wire from Kitchener this afternoon in reply to a query on the situation. The Dutchmen are evidently quite confident that they can win the O. H. A. championship in the return game at Kitchener on Friday night.

Hamilton won their game last night by a score of 8 to 3.

Pte. W. J. Mallory Dies Overseas

BOMB. GEORGE FINNIE IS SERIOUSLY ILL WITH PNEUMONIA.

Pte. Wilbert John Mallory, a Peterborough soldier, succumbed to an attack of heart disease, an official report to that effect having been received here. He died on January 29. The message does not state where his death occurred.

City Nightwatchman Edward Finnie has been notified that his younger son, Bombardier George Finnie, is seriously ill in hospital at Bramshott from an attack of pneumonia. The report is dated March 6th.

Pte. Calvin Gould is officially reported seriously ill, having contracted pleurisy, according to an official notification received in the city today.

Two recruits were taken on the strength of the 247th Batt. this morning. They are Pte. Arthur H. J. Wells of Young's Point and Pte. John Cornelius of Peterborough.

Another recruiting rally will be held at the Armories Sunday night at 8.30, to be addressed by Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Major O'Flynn and Capt. S. N. Dancy, of the Reinforcement Draft of the 2nd Battalion. Every one of the three speakers has seen actual service at the front, and if such men are not given the encouragement of a hearty reception, then the recruiting situation in Peterborough is indeed hopeless. The band will render patriotic airs and a cordial invitation is extended the public to be present.

MR. MITCHELL ACCEPTS A CALL TO TORONTO CHURCH

Matter Was Decided Yesterday at Meeting of Toronto Presbytery---Will be Inducted Pastor of Old St, Andrews' April 12.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church for the past year, has accepted the call to become pastor of Old St. Andrew's Church in Toronto. The matter was finally settled at a meeting of Toronto Presbytery in that city yesterday, Mr. Mitchell being in attendance. The call was formally presented by the congregation and Mr. Mitchell signified his willingness to take up the new work. All arrangements were made for his induction, which will be held April 12, and Mr. Mitchell will preach his first sermon as a Toronto pastor on the Sunday following.

Mr. Mitchell will make an announcement to his congregation in this city next Sunday and will then be in a position to state just when he will leave. It is likely that he will take a brief vacation before going to Toronto, and if he does this it will be impossiblef or him to remain more than two or three weeks in Peterborough. He will leave behind him here a host of friends, not only among the congregation to which he has ministered, but in every walk of life in the city.

The popular minister at St. Andrew's is not the first to go from that pulpit to a Toronto charge. The late D. J. Macdonnell, one of the most gifted preachers the Presbyterian Church in Canada ever produced, left here in the 70's to become pastor of New St. Andrew's in Toronto. He was, as a thinker and preacher, considerably in advance of the times, and being of a highly sensitive and nervous temperament, was hounded into a premature grave by heresy hunters and other sticklers for doctrines that the church no longer embraces. The world has moved since those days, but Mr. Mitchell has kept up with it.

The call extended to Mr. Mitchell was unanimous, signed by 654 members and 236 adherents. The stipend is $3,300 a year.

POISON WAS FOR CAMP DOGS

SO MRS. WHEELDON TESTIFIED IN COURT TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7— Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, who, with her daughters and son-in-law, is on trial charged with conspiracy to murder the Prime Minister and Hon. Arthur Henderson, testified today that poison was obtained for poisoning dogs. She admitted she sympathized with conscientious objectors to military service and said she was attempting to assist them from the camp in which they were interned. The poison was for the camp watchdogs.

SERGT. GIORNO SCALDED BY AN EXPLOSION

FACE AND NECK INJURIES WHEN VULCANIZING AT THE ARMORIES LABORATORY.

Sergt. Giorno of the Canadian Army Dental Corps, was badly scalded at the Armories this morning.

The young man was at work in the laboratory, where he is assistant to Lt. Harriman, and was engaged in vulcanizing. From some unknown cause the oven exploded when under heavy steam pressure, causing bad scalds on the face and neck of the young man.

Dr. Harvey, who was summoned to attend, did not think that the eyes of the injured man would be seriously affected.

After a temporary dressing had been made, Sergt. Giorno was taken to the Nicholls Hospital.

BALTIC NEARS HOME HARBOR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 7. — The steamship Baltic, which left Liverpool about Feb. 25, was reported five miles south off Fire Island this afternoon and will dock early tomorrow. The steamship has 85 cabin passengers.

BLOCKADE WILL FORCE COLLAPSE OF THE ENEMY BELIEF OF COL. CHURCHILL

Cannot Support Their Men in the Field Indefinitely.

Internal Conditions of the Nations Very Bad.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7. — Churchill's speech in the Commons yesterday, in which he urged preparation for a 1918 campaign, is interpreted to mean that the Allied authorities do not expect the war to end this year. It is considered significant that Mr. Churchill, widely known as an advocate of vigorous action, believes the blockade will force the collapse of the Central Empires. The Government knows that the internal conditions in Germany and Austria are very bad and that they cannot support their armies indefinitely.

Naval men believe that a continuance of the blockade will force the German fleet out for a decisive naval fight, which is keenly desired, because there can be no safe peace while Germany possesses her fleet.

HULL WILL VOTE ON LOCAL OPTION

HULL, March 7—Hull is to have a vote on local option some time early in the month of April. A duly signed petition embodying all the legal requirements and signed by forty-six residents was presented to the city council. This calls for a poll within thirty days. The petition is the sequel to the campaign for prohibition.

GERMANS FIB FOR PURPOSE

MAKE FALSE STATEMENTS IN EFFORT TO DRAW OUT TRUTH.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7—Replying to a question in the House of Commons, James Macpherson said the Government did not accept the acuracy of a report recently sent from Berlin that the Germans had brought down eighteen airplanes on the western front in one day. "False statements such as these, he said, were made in order to elicit the truth. "I can assure the House," he added, "that we will maintain the mastery of the air."

G.T.R. MISHAP AT MILLBROOK

BROKEN WHEEL ON COACH OF TORONTO TRAIN.

The 6 a.m. G.T.R. passenger train for Toronto met with a mishap near Millbrook this morning when a broken wheel on the rear coach threw the car off the rails. The train from Port Hope could not get through to the city and had to proceed to Lindsay via the old line, connections and transfers to Peterborough being made by an extra train.

This district has been free of serious accidents this winter, one reason being the excellent condition of the roadbed and track, for which Supt. Thomas Yarrow is responsible.

MINNESOTA DUE AT NEW YORK

ONE OF THE LARGEST FREIGHT SHIPS IN THE WORLD.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 7—The American steamship Minnesota, one of the largest freight ships in the world and the largest merchant vessel under the American flag, is due here late today from San Francisco through the Panama canal.

The Minnesota was purchased recently by the International Mercantile Marine Co from the Great Northern for use in London trade. Her tonnage is 20,000.

NEW MILK PRODUCTS CO. WILL BRING PROSPERITY TO CITY AND COUNTY

Will Purchase Upwards of One Hundred Thousand Dollars Worth of Milk From Farmers Every Month---Solid Citizens at the Helm.

The latest industry for the city is the Peterborough Milk Products, Ltd., which has just been incorporated under the Dominion Companies Act, with an authorized capital of $250,000. The men on the board of directors are the new company's best recommendation. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., is president, and Mr. W. G. Morrow and Mr. G. Walter Green are members. The other directors are Toronto citizens, Mr G. Gordon Plaxton, who has been elected vice-president, and Mr. J. A. Morden, secretary. Local residents are likely to avail themselves of the opportunity to take stock in a concern which promises success from the start.

The new company is an extension of the Peterborough Creamery, which has been so long and so successfully conducted by Mr. Gillespie. The present business will be continued but in addition the manufacture of condensed and evaporated milk will be taken up. The company has secured the premises now occupied by Mr. Gillespie, which will be at once remodelled and equipped as a condensery and milk products will be manufactured both for the domestic and export trade.

What It Means to Peterborough?

The new corporation means a great deal to the city and county. It will be one of the most important of all local industries. When in full operation it will employ about forty hands. This may appear a small staff when compared with the number employed in other factories, but there are other features which must be considered. All the raw material used by this company will be secured within a radius of ten miles of the city and the money will thus be kept at home. Other factories get a large percentage of their material from a distance, some of it coming from the United States.

It is estimated that within a year, or eighteen months at the outside, this company will be paying out from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars a month to the farmers of Peterborough county for milk. This cannot fail to work a boom in the agricultural industry. It will encourage dairy farmers to increase and improve their herds and to raise more feed than ever. The chances are that within the next few years Peterborough farmers will, instead of selling grain, be buying it in carload lots. It has been found that in Western Ontario and in other places where condensories have been established that not only has the dairy business received a new stimulus, but that the value of farms has been enhanced by from ten to twenty-five per cent. The farmers of Peterborough county are evidently on the threshold of a new era of prosperity.

What it Means to the City

The urban resident will share in the advantages that the new company is certain to bring to the community. A good deal of the milk now produced in Peterborough county is now going to Toronto and other outside points. The new corporation will soon be in a position to handle the entire supply. Local consumers can be sure of fresh milk daily as any left over when the milkman makes his rounds will be used in the condensory instead of being kept for distribution the following day. Wherever a condensory has been established the advantages to the daily purchasers of milk have been made apparent.

Bright Prospects Ahead

The new company starts out with every prospect of success. On the board of directors are to be found some leading business men of the city, whose connection with any enterprise is all the guarantee required. Mr. Gillespie will be the active manager and the services of skilled milk engineers of long experience have been secured. The location of the plant and its equipment will ensure a large output and in view of the excess demand over the present supply of condensed milk the company will never lack for a ready market at profitable prices.

Buying By Test.

All supplies for the new company will be purchased under the test system which is in use among condensories all over the country. It is regarded as the only fair method to all parties concerned, and an encouragement to the up-to-date dairyman who keeps the right grade of stock and who adopts modern principles in the conduct of his business.

C.P.R. EXPRESS LEAVES RAILS

TWENTY PASSENGERS ARE HURT IN A RAIL ACCIDENT.

TRENTON, March 7 — Twenty passengers on the Chicago-Montreal C.P.R. express sustained injuries yesterday afternoon when the train was derailed when one and a half miles west of Trenton. A broken rail caused the accident.

The engine, baggage car and one first-class car remained upright on the ballast section, the company says and the other four cars were tilted to the side.

A train from Trenton, with nurses and doctors, was rushed to the scene and the injured passengers were forwarded to the hospital at Belleville.

The train was in charge of Conductor Munro, and the engine driver was Engineer Maine.

ENEMY LINES PENETRATED BY ITALIANS

ALSO DEFEAT ATTACK BY AUSTRIANS ON RECENTLY WON POSITION.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, March 7. — An Austrian attack on Monday night was repulsed by Italians, who inflicted appreciable losses on their opponents, the war office announced today. The attack was made on a position recently occupied by the Italians on Constabella. Yesterday Italians penetrated the enemy lines at Monciagh on the Asiago Plateau. "We countermined and destroyed an enemy mine gallery at Cordevole, burying most of the occupants in the debris, and occupied the crater."

NO EXEMPTION FOR HOTELS

WHITBY, March 7—The Whitby Council refused to grant to the hotel proprietors exemption from taxes for the year 1917. The Public Utility Commission also turned down a petition for free water and light for the hotels.

CULTIVATING VACANT LOTS.

MR. J. H. GRISDALE, director of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, has issued a circular containing valuable hints for the cultivation of vacant lots in towns and cities, a thrift campaign which has not only been launched, in Peterborough, but is being generally taken up throughout the Province and the Dominion. These suggestions are reproduced for the benefit of the municipal committee and the members of the Trades Council, who have the matter in hand here.

An organization should be formed, on the executive committee of which are at least two men or women who are enthusiastic and who will be willing to devote some time to looking after the preparation of the land and the laying out of the plots.

Owners of vacant land should be invited to offer such property for garden making.

Assuming that a fairly large number of lots have been offered by their owners, it should be widely advertised that one of these is available to any citizen who will be willing to work it, experience having shown that all classes n the community are interested in this work.

It has been learned by experence that it is important for the organization to at least plough and harrow the land for the plot holders the first year. Few persons who have not done any gardening before can be induced to prepare land for seed-sowing on their own initiative.

There are four methods by which funds may be raised to prepare the land.

By an appeal to wealthy citizens for contributions.

By a grant from the city or town council, if necessary on the understanding that the money will be returned by the plot holders when they have harvested their first crop.

The city or town council might appoint a committee to carry out such work, the city to aid in every possible way. In order that a movement of this kind may have at least the greater sympathy of the civic officials, it would seem desirable for the organization to have a room in the city or town hall for its meeting.

By charging each plot holder a small amount for preparing the plot for him.

The last method is the one which is likely to be the most satisfactory for most cities and towns, and is the one recommended here.

For information in regard to rules or bylaws, the reader is referred to the accounts of the work of the several organizations in Canada referred to in a bulletin being printed by the Dominion Government, as in it there will no doubt be found sufficient suggestions to enable bylaws to be drawn up for particular needs.

Boy Scouts can be made very useful in encouraging garden making and the use of vacant lots. In Ottawa they were employed in 1915 by the public health committee of the Local Council of Women in delivering vegetable seeds which had been donated for the purpose of encouraging the poorer people to make gardens. Seed can be obtained in bulk at a cheaper rate than in packages, and can be put up in packages by the Scouts. The Scouts also delivered pamphlets on vegetable gardening. This personal touch did much, it is believed, to decide those to make gardens who had been in doubt before, as many people would accept pamphlets if brought to them, who would not take the trouble to get them themselves.

Mayor Duffus has already offered the use of eight vacant lots which he owns, and this will likely be an inducement to other land owners to do likewise.

CITY BUILDERS OF THE FUTURE.

THE LATE EUGENE FIELD, in one of his inimitable and intensely human poems, tells of an aged grandfather and his grandchild engaged in the, for the latter, absorbing game of erecting a house of blocks. The little fellow confides in his aged relative with regard to his plans for the future. It is his ambition, when he grows up, to erect a sure-enough castle that shall eclipse everything in the way of architectural marvels ever devised. It is to be equipped with tower and minarets and have all the improvements and features that the mind of man has ever devised and some that have not yet been discovered.

The experience of a long lifetime has made the grandfather cautious. He is skeptical as to the plans of the child. Such, he says, were his own dreams and hopes years ago, but he had never been able to carry out his proposed plans. Disappointments and defeats, such as he met with himself, he says, are ahead of the child.

Some of the older citizens who enjoyed the hospitality of Mayor Duffus recently and who made suggestions in the building up of a city, are inclined to regard as impractical enthusiasts the younger men who at the second civic function took up the same task. The older men have seen some of their ambitious designs crumble up in failure. The same fate, they say, awaits the plans of the younger generation, who are expecting too much, whose confidence in themselves has all the assurance of inexperience.

Let the young men aim high. There is nothing like them hitching their wagon to the star of the greatest altitude. The higher they aim the higher will they attain. Even if they carry out successfully only half of their ambitious projects, they will accomplish more than their no less earnest forefathers have done. There is no monitor like experience, and the most valuable lessons in life are learned by the wise and prudent from the failure of others.

The child in the poem may never erect the castle that is pictured in his youthful dreams, but the chances are all in favor of his eclipsing the constructive achievements of his venerable relative, rendered skeptical by partial failure.

PATRIOTISM AT KITCHENER.

THERE HAS BEEN a good deal of hard feeling created among the citizens of Kitchener by the newspapers in that city and the press throughout the country, and, as usual, politics crept into the discussion. When a Citizens' ticket carried the recent municipal election, the claim was set up that the new officials were all pro-German and that they would do everything possible to dampen the patriotic enthusiasm of the people and hinder all efforts in the interests of the war.

These fears have, fortunately, proved groundless. When the new mayor and council were asked for a civic grant of $25,000 for the Patriotic Fund they at once consented. This is as liberal a grant, according to population, as made in any city in Ontario, and should absolve the Kitchener officials from all suspicion.

REFORMING THE CIVIL SERVICE.

THE LEGISLATURE has by a party division rejected a proposition to reform the Civil Service by basing all appointments on the result of competitive examinations, without regard to the politics of the applicants for the positions. This proposition sounds well, but it has been found that there are objections to it in actual operation. The most efficient public servants are not secured by such a system, and it has been found in actual experience that it is advisable to allow the heads of departments some latitude in the selection of their staffs. It is not partisanship or a desire to appropriate the spoils of office that induces so many legislators to vote against the proposed change.

It is not the boy at school who stands first in his classes who invariably attains the greatest success in life. The contrary is as often as not the case. It is not the man who wins the gold medal at the university who always makes the best teacher, lawyer, doctor, or has the most distinguished career in any profession that he may adopt. If ministers were selected on their academic record alone, the entire affairs of the Church would have to be readjusted, and the preacher with the highest scholastic honors and the most letters attached to his name would not always be either the most successful or the most popular.

This same principle applies in every walk of life. The man who takes the highest stand at a Civil Service examination does not necessarily make the most efficient clerk. Natural aptness for a particular line must be taken into consideration.

A HALF-HEARTED ADMISSION.

IT DOES SEEM unreasonable, after the farmers have been burdened to protect urban industries for nearly forty years, to put an embargo on their exports when they get their first chance to retaliate, says The Globe.

There is sarcasm here. The farmers have not been burdened to protect urban industries. Prosperity for the factories in the city means prosperity for the farmers by building up markets for their produce. It is refreshing, however, to have The Globe, even by circuitous measures, take the part of the tillers of the soil, and to uphold the announced policy of the Government in this regard.

WHEN THE MINORITY RULES.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH is all right in theory, but it is quite possible to abuse the privilege. There is something wrong in a system of so-called representative government when a minority can outrageously defeat the clearly expressed policy of those who outnumber them almost ten to one.

Twelve senators in the United States Upper House of Congress held out against eighty-four colleagues, and so in effect defeated the President's request for authority to defend the nation against the German submarine peril. Twelve fanatical pacifists prevailed, although the bill had been passed in the lower branch of Congress, only thirteen votes out of over four hundred being recorded against it. In the Senate the bill was simply talked to death. That legislative body is at all times like the Dominion Parliament sitting as a committee of the whole. Members can talk as long and as often as they choose. All the unterrified dozen had to do was to prolong the agony of unbridled speech until the Senate automatically passed out of existence by the lapse of time.

In Canada, a hostile majority in the Red Chamber, independent of the voters and undismayed by public indignation, have during the past five years nullified some of the most important legislation brought down by the elected branch of the Government. There is danger in any system in which such results are possible. Freedom of speech was never designed or guaranteed for any such purpose.

ANOTHER WARNING TO FARMERS, CONCERNING SELECTION OF SEED

District Representative F. C. McRae, of Norwood, has issued the following warning to farmers with regard to the selection of seed grown:

The time is fast approaching when most farmers will be getting their seed ready for sowing. There are many factors which influence crop production; one of these, and a very important one, is the kind of seed sown. Until recent years the seed itself has not been considered of more than normal importance. By good seed was meant seed that would grow. It never seemed to occur to anyone that the kind of seed sown determined the kind of plant that would come up. The principal that like tends to produce like while recognized in the animal kingdom was scarcely ever associated with the plant world, and yet we find that principal to be the corner stone on which the plant improver builds his hopes for better things.

This year, above all, it will be very necessary to be very careful as to the kind of seed that is put into the ground. Our duty to our country in this time of crisis demands that our production of food stuffs be as large as possible and therefore it is necessary to sow the best seed available. The seed which is available on the average farm is not as good a sample as in a normal year, due to the fact that there are too many little, inferior kernels which have not sufficient food material stored in them with which to nourish the plant until it becomes firmly established in the soil.

There are a great many farmers who leave the selection of their grain for seeding purposes until just previous to the time they should sow it. This we believe is not a good practice. In nearly every barn there is a basement in which live-stock are housed. Above this is the granary where the grain is stored in bins. Where these animals are housed, unless there is a proper system of ventilation, the atmosphere in the stable will be very damp. This is noticeable by the accumulation of hoar frost on the walls and ceilings and also the presence of the animals tends to raise the temperature in the stables. The grain, in the first foot or two in the bins above the stable is likely to be lowered in vitality, due to the conditions of moisture and heat in the stable below, because all that is required for germination to begin is sufficient moisture, suitable temperature and the presence of oxygen. While the seeds may not actually germinate under these conditions, nevertheless, there is a great danger of their vitality being greatly injured and from actual germination tests, it has been found that taking a sample from the top of the bin and another from the bottom of the bin, there is a great difference in the vitality of seed. If, then, a person feeds from the bin and leaves only the bottom foot or two for seed, surely this is not good practice and any farmer whose seed conditions are such as described should be very careful in the selection of his seed.

Experiments conducted at the Agricultural College, Guelph, have proved that from a proper selection of seed, using large, plump kernels, that the increase in yield per acre was 16 bushels in the case of oats. This increase is simply due to the fact that the large, plump kernel has sufficient reserve food material stored to nourish the young plant until it becomes firmly established in the soil. In making a good selection of seed, the use of a good fanning mill is indispensable. All grain intended for seeding purposes should be run through the fanning mill at least three times, in order that all dirt, light and small kernels may be taken out

THE EPIDEMIC OF RESOLUTIONS

A pestilential custom accentuated by the war is that whereby municipal councils, boards of trade and other local organizations pass fool resolutions and send them on to Ottawa for consideration. Such a practice was a public nuisance in time of peace; it borders closely upon national menace in time of war. Most of these resolutions are either ill-considered or unsoundly based; they gave every cheap-jack agitator clamoring for public applause opportunity to magnify his importance; and they have a tendency to darken counsel, give rise to futile controversy, confuse the public, undermine confidence in the country's leadership, and enfeeble concentrated national effort in the war.

Here is an example of how the thing works out. Two months ago the little town of Duncan, in Manitoba, passed a resolution demanding that the Dominion Government take active steps "as early as possible" to have Canadian nickel refined in Canada. This resolution was forwarded to the majority of Dominion municipalities, and was promptly adopted by most of them and sent on to Ottawa for consideration. And what are the facts? While these municipalities and boards of trade were passing resolutions demanding that the Borden Government take steps "as early as possible" to see that our nickel be refined in Canada, a gigantic nickel refinery that will treat Canadian ores upon Canadian soil was being rushed to completion at Port Colborne; the company erecting the refinery had already expended about $200,000 on the building and had let tenders for plant and processes to the extent of $1,730,000. Steps that parish politicians thought the Government should take "as early as possible" in 1917, had been taken by the Government early in 1913.

The foregoing is only one among scores of foolish, futile resolutions and petitions that are daily deluging Ottawa, worrying and taking up the time of the Government when that time should be concentrated upon the vast issues of the war.

Members of town and city councils and boards of trade who want to see the energies and the thought of the country concentrated on the war can render a splendid service by asking a few common-sense questions when cranks introduce these resolutions. They may rest assured that the men who are in charge of affairs in Ottawa are in a vastly better position and infinitely better equipped to deal with these questions than men who are necessarily without official information, and, sometimes, unfortunately, without information of any other kind.

BOYS AND GIRLS.

The difference is apparent early: A boy has as much fun in stoning a cat as a girl has in hunting violets. A boy's curiosity is directed to the ice box; a girl would like to see what is in the top bureau drawer.

A girl can give the impression when away from home that her parents are wealthy; a boy cannot.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome to sit in the neighbor girl's parlor many years before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

A girl is never so young that she will reveal to guests at a party that the spoons are borrowed; a boy child never grows so old that he fails to.

Give a boy a dollar and he will eat it; give his sister one and she will wear it.

A brother and sister may have hair of the same shade, but the boy's is called red and the girl's auburn.

When brothers fight it is over the larger share of pie; when sisters quarrel, one has worn something belonging to the other without asking permission.

Wife— Oh, you horrid wretch. And you told me you never could care for anybody else!

She—I see now that I married a fool.

He— My dear, I found that out sooner than you.

Edith—Is it true that you have quarreled with Jack?

Ethel I should say not; my birthday is next week.

At Roll Call

General Sir Hubert Gough, to whom such high praise was given by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his last despatch, was telling a good story to some friends in London while on "short leave" recently.

It concerns primarily a sergeant —one of the "old brigade," a first-class soldier, but not overburdened with "book learning."

At roll call one morning he was calling out the names. Finally he came to one that gave him pause, but the next moment he roared it in his bull voice:

"Montaig!" No answer.

"Montaig!" No answer.

"Montaig!"

A pale youth stepped from the ranks. "I think you mean me, Sergeant. My name is Montagu and is pronounced mon-ta-gue."

The sergeant gave him the icy eye.

"Oh, is it All right Montagew. Take three paces to the rear and do two hours' fatigew."

BOWSER GOES TO WAR

But He Comes Back Within Two Hours

Bowser went over to the drug store after dinner the other night and was gone for an hour. When he returned he said to Mrs. Bowser:

"There were three or four men in the drug store, and we got to talking about the war. I tell you the days for the fighting hero have come back."

"I have been thinking so for a year past," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser.

"What a chance it has given men to make a great name for themselves for bravery!"

"Yes."

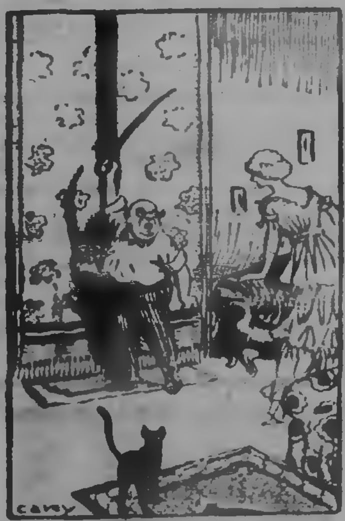
"And the histories will be full of their names for scores of years to come."

"Even the women have carried the flag in some of the battles," said Mrs. Bowser.

"I have read so," was the reply, "and I honor them for it; but, of course, this is no women's war. They must let the husbands do the fighting."

"But suppose the husbands don't want to do the fighting?"

"I can't suppose anything of the sort, Mrs. Bowser. Is there even a man in this neutral country whose blood does not run faster as he thinks of bullet and shell and the shouts of victory? Not one. He knows there are wounds and death on the battlefield, but there is also glory and fame. By George, Mrs. Bowser, but what a chance—what a chance!"



"OH, MEN! ON TO VICTORY OR DEATH!"

"And you will take advantage of it?" she asked.

"I? I take advantage of it? I have longed to; but, you see, I can't go."

"But why?"

"Because we are in a neutral country, and I can't fight for either side. Oh, if I only could!"

"But plenty of men have gone over there from this country," said Mrs. Bowser. "All their armies welcome Americans and give them due credit for their bravery and fighting. It is very easy for an American to get over there if he wants to go."

Mr. Bowser looked at her in a curious sort of manner, and after a walk across the room and back he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, for the last six months I have wanted to go so bad that I dreamed of it. No such chance has ever occurred to me in all the years before. I have been on the point of speaking of it a hundred times, but the fear that it might set you to worrying has kept me silent. We have a sword hanging up in the library. It may not be the sword of Bunker Hill—I think I bought it of a junkman for $1—but the sight of it sends a thrill of glory through me and makes me think of wielding it on the field of battle. With that sword in my hand I could reap honors and have my name go down in history, but—but"—

"But you won't wield it," finished Mrs. Bowser.

"But I ask, how can I?" demanded the warrior.

"Almost as easily as you can walk from here to the corner. You can buckle on that sword or some other take passage on a steamer and in two weeks be leading your men against the foe and preparing your name for history."

"By thunder! By thunder!" gasped Mr. Bowser, with hands on his knees, as he bent forward and looked into her face. "Woman, do you mean to tell me that you are willing I should go and take part in the bloody fray?"

"I have been wondering for the last six months why you didn't go," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Why I didn't? Why I didn't? I have not gone because I realized that my duty lay here at home. If the thought had come to me that you would be willing for me to go I should have been off months ago. Do you mean to tell me now that you are willing?"

"Why, I should be proud to know that my husband was leading his men against the enemy in a storm of shot and shell."

Mr. Bowser waited in astonishment for a full minute before he said:

"And I thought it would be right the other way, Mrs. Bowser. I thought if I even mentioned war and its glory you would faint away and fall on the floor. I thought after you came to you would cry and beg and plead for me to remain at home and protect you."

"Protect me from what?" was rather independently asked.

"From the thousand dangers which lurk about us day and night, although we are not in the theater of war."

"I have never lost any sleep over it."

Mr. Bowser was nonplused. Mrs. Bowser seemed perfectly willing that he should go to war. He had expected different results when the conversation began. He had no desire to go to war. Even if called upon to defend his own country he wouldn't have been any too quick about it. He wanted to stand well in Mrs. Bowser's estimation however, and he must resort to a bluff. He therefore gathered himself together and retorted by asking:

"Mrs. Bowser, I want you to answer with truth and sincerity. Are you willing for me to go to Europe and take part in the great conflict which is raging there? Now, don't try to dodge a question."

"I shall not try to dodge it, Mr. Bowser. If you want to be a hero and have your name inscribed on the pages of history it is my duty to kiss you goodby and pray for your safe return. If you return with one arm or leg missing I shall love you just as much as now and shall honor and be proud of you."

Mr. Bowser got up and walked the floor again, and Mrs. Bowser could hear him whispering to himself as he walked. When he came back to his chair again he said in very serious tones:

"I am off. I shall go this very night to catch a steamer which sails early in the morning."

"Is there any great hurry about it?" was asked.

He entered the library, took down the old junk sword and buckled it around him and came out with the bare blade in his hand. After giving it five or six flourishes around his head he shouted:

"On men! On to victory or death!"

"Which means you will go tonight?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"In five minutes, and I may never return. If I do not you will remember that my last thought was of you as a cannon ball struck me full in the chest and made a widow of you."

"I know you will fight bravely, Mr. Bowser, and if you will wait a minute I will find pencil and pad that you may write to me how your brave men followed and cheered you. I shall let the papers over here know how gloriously you died. If you get cold and have a lame back try and get a mustard plaster to draw the pain out. Here is a loving kiss for you."

Mr. Bowser didn't wait for the loving kiss. He merely waved a farewell with his hand and stalked out still carrying the unsheathed sword in his good right hand. He was off for the war, but he felt [illegible] his heart instead of seeking to re[illegible] him from going Mrs. Bowser had promptly encouraged it. He had tried to bluff her but had failed. What course should he take now? He was walking along the street trying to plan out something and using the murderous sword as a cane when a policeman stopped him and asked:

"Is there a military parade anywhere tonight?"

"Not that I know of," was the reply.

"Then why are you all togged out with that old toad sticker?"

"I have started for the war."

"The war in Europe?" was asked.

"Yes."

"Well, you had better go back home again. They have got enough crazy men over there. Where do you live?"

"Oh, back there a little ways," was the indifferent reply of the hero as he clattered his sword against the trunk of a shade tree.

"Then I'll see you to your gate. It strikes me you are not quite right in your head. It's against the law, anyhow, for a man to walk the streets with a deadly weapon in his hand, and I am responsible for the lives of the people walking on the streets. Does your wife know you are going to war?"

"Yes; she said that I could go if I wanted to."

"But you didn't want to go?" laughed the officer.

Mr. Bowser made no reply. The officer had seen through his bluff as clearly as Mrs. Bowser had done.

"Come on, old man, and don't hack any more shade trees."

The officer took Mr. Bowser by the arm and led him to his gate and opened it and whispered in his ear:

"I am a married man also and know how the old thing works. Whenever we have a row the old woman generally comes out first best. The way for you to do is to sit on your steps for about two hours, although the night is rather chilly, and then go in and tell her that the war has closed and that there is no longer a chance for you to make a hero of yourself. Better throw that old sword at the first dog that comes along. Ta-ta, old man."

Mr. Bowser followed instructions, and Mrs. Bowser replied:

"The war is over, is it? Well, I am glad of it. But you can wait and go to the next one."

Every Second Belgian Is Destitute!

3,500,000 Are Wholly or Partially Dependent on Charity.

The war goes on, but Belgium stands still, or rather slips back a little deeper into her misery! German rule grows harsher and more vindictive as certain defeat looms up ahead. Belgian reserves of money are steadily dwindling, and now fully half the population must be fed by charity or starve.

To make the situation worse, the great sympathetic public of Great Britain, Canada and the United States is beginning to look upon Belgium's need as an old story, and to be less generous in their giving. Meanwhile prices of food are soaring and the money given does not go as far as it did.

As it is, the Belgian Relief Commission has been compelled to cut down rations to what seems the absolute minimum—the smallest amount that will support life. If further reductions have to be made the weaker must go under, and the children, on whom Belgium's future depends, must be permanently stunted and weakened by want.

Meanwhile Canada as a nation, and we as individuals, are unusually prosperous. True, there are many calls on our purses, but there are few of us, indeed, who cannot easily spare enough to feed at least one Belgian family.

Presentation by Smith Friends

MR. JOHN ACKISON COMING TO THIS CITY TO RESIDE.

Many friends gathered at the home of Mr. John Ackison on the Second Line of Smith last night to bid farewell to him and his family before they leave the township to live in Peterborough. A very pleasant evening was spent in cards, music and games.

Mr. T. Cann called Mr. Ackison to the centre of the room and read the following address to him:

Mr. John Ackison,
Smith Township:

Dear Mr. Ackison,—Hearing of your intended departure from among us, we, your friends and neighbors, felt that we could not allow this opportunity to pass without expressing in some small way the very high esteem in which you are held in this vicinity.

You have been ever ready and willing to give a helping hand when necessary to those around you, and we fully realize that we are losing a good friend and neighbor from our midst.

We have gathered here this evening to spend a pleasant hour, and we now have the pleasure of asking you to accept this chair and clock as a slight token of the esteem, friendship and goodwill you carry with you to your new home, which we trust you and your family may long be spared to enjoy.

We, moreover, sincerely trust you will never forget your old friends of Lily Lake, although you are leaving our immediate neighborhood, and we hope we shall meet you from time to time.

Signed on our behalf.
WM STEINKRAUSS.

R. A. SKINNER DIES AT KEENE

SPENT TWENTY YEARS IN BUSINESS IN THE VILLAGE.

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene mourns the death of one of her best known and most highly esteemed citizens in the person of Mr Richard A. Skinner, who passed away yesterday after an illness of one year from hardening of the arteries. Mr Skinner had spent twenty years in the village, being the senior member of the firm of Anderson & Skinner, general merchants. Had he lived till the 25th of this month Mr. Skinner would have reached his 63rd year. He was born in Stirling.

Deceased is survived by his widow, one daughter, Miss Kate Skinner, at Queen's University, Kingston, and one son, Mr. Percy Skinner, an inspector at Niagara Falls for the Hydro-Electric Commission.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to the Presbyterian church and the Keene cemetery.

KEENE, March 7.—Mr. and Mrs Thos. O'Neil of Hastings spent Sunday with friends at the Victoria House.

The local hockey players went to Norwood on Tuesday to play the team of that town.

Mr. Bert Thurston of Lindsay spent a few days the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Howson.

The Methodist W. M. S. will held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Kindred on Thursday afternoon.

Misses Jean O'Neil and Pearl McCann were shopping in Peterborough on Saturday.

Quite a number of men are busy on the river cutting ice and getting in the season's supply. The ice is reported in fine condition.

Mr. Dennis Roche has returned to his home at Toronto after a month's visit with his parents.

Mr. Stanley Braden and his little daughter returned home on Monday from Havelock, where they spent the week-end with friends.

Owing to Councillor Howson leaving for the west next week, council will hold their regular meeting on March 12 instead of a week later.

Mr. Percy Skinner was called home Saturday owing to the serious illness of his father.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison was in Peterborough on Saturday.

A concert will be given in the town hall Thurrday evening by the Chemong Indian band.

THOUSANDS OF SICK WOMEN

Helped Every Year by Common Sense Suggestions Given Free by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

For forty years women suffering from all kinds of female ills have been writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Thus they receive common sense suggestions drawn from a vast volume of experience, and thousands of sick women have been saved from untold suffering, as letters like the following clearly show:—

Newark, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman. Your Sanative Wash is just the thing to overcome female weakness. I have told young mothers as well as older ones about your remedies, and what they have done for me. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, as my health was very bad when I wrote you, but now I can do my own work and have not had a sick day since I began taking your remedies. I keep the Compound and Liver Pills on hand all the time."—Mrs. GEO. THOMPSON, 24 Sherwood Court, Newark, Ohio.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. Shea took place from the family residence, 211 Reid street, on Friday morning, March 2, and was largely attended. Services were held in St. Peter's Cathedral at 10 o'clock by Rev. Father Phelan, after which the remains were taken via the C. P. R. to Norwood for interment.

The deceased had been a resident of the city for about eight years, and her sudden and unexpected death from heart failure on the morning of February 28th, was a terrible shock to her family and friends, especially to her husband, who had left her only a few hours before and to whom she cheerfully remarked that she had slept unusually well during the night but would remain in bed, as was her custom, a little longer.

Passing his home about 9 o'clock, Mr. Shea noticed that the house decorators, who were engaged at some inside work, had not yet been admitted. Somewhat alarmed, he tried the doors, but not receiving any reply from within, he at once forced an entrance through one of the windows, and, going upstairs, found his wife in bed as he had left her, and seemingly sound asleep, but on endeavoring to arouse her, found to his amazement that the spark of life had fled.

The late Mrs. Shea, because of her cheerful, kind and sympathetic disposition, had endeared herself to a large circle of friends, by whom she was universally respected and esteemed, while her many acts of charity, unostentatiously performed, were a source of comfort and solace to many aching hearts. In the discharge of her religious and home duties, to both of which she was devotedly attached, the same quiet, unassuming manner characterized her actions.

She leaves to mourn the loss of an affectionate and faithful wife and a loving and self-sacrificing mother her husband and two daughters, Miss Geraldine, of the public school staff Havelock, and Miss Irene, Gravenhurst. There also survive her one sister, Mrs. D. G. Maloney, of Ashburnham, and five brothers.

On their arrival in Norwood, the remains were met by a large number of old friends and neighbors who accompanied them to their last resting place in the family plot in the Catholic cemetery, Asphodel, where the burial services were conducted by Rev. Father McCarthy.

Not only by her immediate family and friends, but by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance, will she long be held in loving and tender memory. Numerous spiritual and floral offerings were received.

ORGANIZER OF WOMEN'S LABOR

Mrs. J. W. Bell.

WOMEN workers have been so successful in the factories in Great Britain that they are being tried in the great workshops of Canada. Everywhere they are proving themselves to be keen rivals to men, and it is now evident that the home is not the only place where a woman may excel in work calculated to advance the welfare of mankind. The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has sent thousands of its male employees for service in Europe, and as a consequence male workers have become scarce in various departments of industry. In 1915 women workers were introduced into the Canadian Pacific Angus Shops at Montreal. At present there are two hundred of them engaged in the shops.

These women workers have been organized and work under the supervision of Mrs. J. W. Bell, wife of Mr. Bell, superintendent of the Montreal Windsor Street Station building. Mrs. Bell is enthusiastic over the success of the efforts of those entrusted to her charge, and considers that the field of manual labor requiring skill and application is one in which women will yet exercise a wide influence.

A visit to the women workers in the Angus Shops is inspiring. The women punctually begin their labors at 7.15 a.m., and finish at 4.45 p.m. Allowing for the lunch hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock, they work eight and a half hours a day. Watching the women trip along cheerfully to the scene of their exertions one might feel that he is observing the world march away from the old era of prejudice and convention and entering a period of freedom and common sense. The spheres of the activity of the Angus Shops women workers are made cheerful and comfortable as it is possible to make them. Each woman has a locker in which she places her belongings before donning her overalls and cap. At the outset of the experiment it was difficult to induce some of the women to take kindly to the garments which tradition had marked out as male preserves, but after a little while every woman found these working dresses were more convenient than skirts The overalls have three distinct recommendations: they are tidy, they are sanitary, and they are safe, allowing their wearers to move amongst the machines without danger of being drawn into machinery clutches.

The women work on the piece system, and they are paid at the same rate as their brothers They work amongst the men with the harmony that prevails in offices where there are female and male clerks. In the Angus Shops the women are to be found sweeping, coach washing coach painting, working on drills, at lathes, at various kinds of machinery, filing and drilling in the brass shops, brass polishing, operating nut-tapping machines, cleaning dynamos in the electrical department, assisting in the steamfitting centre, and making mattresses and pillows. No woman is asked to do heavy work.

The women bring the material for their lunch with them, and this they may prepare in the lunch room which accommodates two hundred. Soup and bread are provided by the Company at cost price. Attached to the lunch room is a rest room, and near the rest room is a first aid room, where any accidents that may occur are treated. No less than seventeen of the women workers hold certificates of proficiency in first aid work. Should any accidents occur the services of these trained women are very valuable.

There has been no scarcity of applications for work at the Angus Shops. Hearing of the liberal treatment which they receive women have been anxious to secure work there. But only those who are specially in need of employment are taken on. Many of the workers are widows, soldier's wives, and women who are the sole means of the support of dependants. These plucky and industrious women lessen to a considerable extent the strain on the Patriotic, Red Cross, and other charitable funds.

Mrs. Bell makes a thorough investigation of the circumstances of each woman before she is given employment, and a close watch is kept on each worker for the first few days after her appearance in the workshops. This is done so as to guard against the danger of alien enemies, for many nationalities are represented among the female employees of the Angus Shops. Mrs. Bell says that every effort is made to have each woman placed at the task that is most congenial to her tastes and ability. Those who show exceptional talent and skill are promoted. There have been instances where girls entered as coach washers and in a short time found themselves installed as office assistants. Many of the women," says Mrs. Bell, "are one hundred per cent efficient, and this efficiency is in no small way due to the suitable conditions under which the women perform their tasks. The women are reliable and models of punctuality, and only in cases where there is illness of the worker or some member of her family do workers absent themselves from duty. Women are a decided success in the Angus Shops."

Backward Children

Mr. Crane, chairman of the supervision committee, presented a report on the way other cities handled mentally defective children and a special committee, composed of Messrs. Eastwood, Crane, Hill, Miller and Neal were appointed to confer with Dr. Helen McMurchy on the subject.

Additional Teachers

Mr. W H Hill, chairman of the committee on appointments, reported the necessity of getting three teachers for Easter. The committee had certain teachers from the Normal school in view and the committee were instructed to secure two of them. Mrs. Hamilton was appointed to take Miss Gordon's class until summer vacation.

Principals and Janitors

At the request of Chairman Denne of the Property Committee, a letter will be sent by the secretary to the principals and janitors of the different schools, setting forth very clearly that from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. the janitor is under the control of the principal absolutely.

Penny Banks

The question of penny banks was brought up by G. N. Gordon and an invitation was extended to Prof. MacKenzie to address a meeting in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on the subject at an early date. The arrangements will be in the hands of the chairman, Col. Miller and Mr. Gordon.

Resolutions of condolence were passed to Mr. Eastwood on the death of his mother, and to Dr. George Burnham on the death of Mrs. Burnham.

Collegiate Inspector Here

Mr. J. A. Houston, inspector of high schools for the pro ince, is at the Collegiate Institute and the board will meet him this afternoon at four o'clock.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

MARCH IS HARD ON THE EYES

The sun's strength increases fast in March, and the glare from the melting snow is very hard on the eyes, especially if they are at all weak. Dr. Fowler fits the eyes with glasses that are the proper strength, and rendered opaque to keep the glare from the ice from injuring the eyesight. He will gladly explain their features.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 6—One of the worst storms of the season visited this district on Monday and, as a result, only those on business bent ventured from their own firesides.

A large delegation from the local league went to Campbellford on Monday to attend the district convention. A good program was presented at both sessions. Those who took part in the program from Hastings were Miss Flossie Carter, Miss Mae Beavis and Miss Jessie Wilcox. The visitors from this district were obliged to remain overnight as the 7 o'clock train was delayed by a wreck some distance below. The train reached Hastings about 11.15 p.m.

The household effects of Mrs. Isaac Thomson were disposed of by public auction Wednesday. Mrs. Thomson has gone to live with her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Doxsee.

Nurse McGuire has been in charge of Mrs. S. Scriver, who has been operated on for internal trouble, and who is now improving.

The Mission Band of the Methodist Church held a successful social in the basement of the church on Friday evening. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music, contents, etc. Lunch was served during the course of the evening and all were pleased with the evening.

Mrs. D. Scriver entertained a number of friends on Tuesday evening, when a happy time was spent.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson returned on Tuesday from Montreal, where he went with a consignment of live stock for the city markets.

The monthly meeting of the I. O. D. E. was held on Tuesday afternoon when impertant business items were discused.

A Runaway

An exciting time was experienced on Sunday morning, when a horse driven by Mr. Roy Tyler took fright and bolted, upsetting the cutter and throwing the occupant out. Mr. Tyler hung on to the reins and was dragged a considerable distance before the animal could be stopped. Strange to say, the young man was not injured beyond a shaking up, and his friends are congratulating him on his miraculous escape.

The Ladies' Aid met on Thursday afternoon in the church parlor. It was decided to hold a St. Patrick's social on Friday, March 16.

A postponed meeting of the Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening.

Mrs. Walter Fowlds has so far recovered from her recent severe illness as to be moved downstairs. Her friends are hoping that she may soon be able to be out of doors.

Mrs. Walter Fowlds spent a few days during the week in Toronto.

Mrs. S. Stickles and Miss A. Hermiston visited Warkworth last week.

Mrs. Dodd went to Peterborough on Wednesday to visit her sister, Mrs. J. Trotter, who recent underwent an operation in Nichoils Hospital, and who is doing as well as can be expected.

Miss Mae Beavis returned on Saturday from a visit with friends in Lakefield.

Mr. Wm. Mann went to Peterborough on Monday.

Mr. Hutchinson of Toronto spent a few days in town the past week.

Mr M. Williams of Peterborough was in town last week.

Kelly's Rink Won Cup

The final game of the curling season was played on the rink recently, Mr. L. Kelly's rink winning the cup.

Mr. and Mrs. Downer of Peterborough have been guests of Mr. and Mrs Jas. Buck.

Mrs. L. Kelly and son Hayden spent a couple of days last week in Peterborough.

Mrs. H. Peters has returned from Peterborough, where she was attending her mother's funeral.

Mr. R. Bannon left a few days ago for Western Canada.

Miss E. Tate is visiting friends in Campbellford, the guest of Mr and Mrs Gibson.

Mr. G Douglas is on a trip to Western Canada, having disposed of his property here to Mr. E. Wa ner.

URGED TO KEEP UP THEIR WORK

KITCHENER LEAGUE ADDRESSED BY MAJOR BURNHAM.

The members of the Kitchener League held a meeting at the Oriental last evening, when they were favored by a splendid address from Major J. H. Burnham, M.P. The work that the league had done was given great praise by the speaker, who urged that they continue in their activities of sending socks to the soldiers. He also narrated several stories of interest which he had heard while in France.

A vote of thanks was tendered Major Burnham for his address.

Several new members were admitted to the league membership role. The ladies decided to postpone their weekly teas indefinitely, house parties and afternoon teas being substituted.

Mrs. McGee, 371 Reid Street, knitted ten pairs of socks and donated them to the league, and for this kindly gift a hearty vote of thanks was sent her. The gift of socks from the Women Teachers' Guild was similarly received.

In the four weeks of February the league sent 576 pairs of socks to headquarters.

The recent dance held at the Oriental Hotel was successful in every way and the secretary reported the receipts were $233.50, which announcement was received with applause.

Hearty votes of thanks were tendered to Mr and Mrs Colson and employees of the Oriental Hotel for kindness and services rendered the league. Similar votes were extended to the gentlemen of the managing committee, Messrs. F. A. Linton, W. Belleghem, H. Hall, L. Potvin and W Haslam. To Mr F. A. Linton and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., the ladies were thank ful for donations.

OBITUARY

ISABELLA LOUISA SUTHERLAND

Isabella Louisa Sutherland, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas Sutherland, died at the family residence, 350 Water Street, early this morning after a short illness.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

SEVERELY BURNED

Mr. Bert Hamilton, 32 Sophia St., was severely burned yesterday afternoon at the Metal Products Co. plant, where he is employed. Through an accident, he fell into a vat of acid preparation which is used in cleaning shells, and was burned about the hips and legs.

He is now at his home. The injuries are very painful.

"THE ROSARY"

The manager of the Tiz-It Theatre has booked the seven-reel Selig Red Seal play, "The Rosary," for Wednesday and Thursday. This production is adapted from the well known play by Edward E. Rose and tells the story of the many events which crowd the life of Father Kelly. In his early years his struggle between the love of a girl and the call of the church is shown while late in life he becomes the pivot about which a domestic tragedy revolves. His ward, a young broker, unjustly suspects his wife of being false to him and Father Kelly, who is visiting them when they quarrel, is at last instrumental in uniting them and again bringing happiness into both their lives. Charles Clary makes a beautiful character out of the Priest while Kathlyn Williams and Wheeler Oakman portray the young couple in a way which makes their characters appear to really live. From start to finish the film teems with dramatic action and its artistic treatment makes it a production which, once seen, will never be forgotten.

Miss B Williams is on a visit with friends at Hoard's Station.

Mrs. Wm. McKee has been visiting Lakefield friends.

Mrs. W. Baker was in Peterboro during the week.

Mrs A. Smith spent Saturday in Campbellford.

Mrs John Collins of Otonabee has bene visiting friends in this district.

Miss M. Buter is in Toronto attending the millinery openings.

Mrs. Prest and son, of Owen Sound, have returned home after a visit with friends here.

Mr. M. Baker has purchased a new piano.

CROSSING THE CHANNEL IRKSOME IN WAR TIME

Traveller Has to Run Gauntlet of Officials Who Make Certain He is Not Spy

To cross the Channel from England to France in these days of spies, alien enemies and suspects, is to become virtually a prisoner in the hands of the Anglo-Saxon authorities. Not only are you searched like a prisoner in a police station but you are under strict surveillance from the moment you obtain a ticket at Victoria station in London until you have satisfied the customs officials at Calais. In fact, you are a suspected spy.

After a preliminary examination at Victoria by official No. 1, who puts some mysterious chalk marks on your suitcase, you begin to think that the road is fairly easy after all. But disillusionment speedily comes. You are ushered into a small partitioned waiting room by official No. 2 and await your turn to be dealt with by official No. 3. This suave, keen-eyed representative of Scotland Yard subjects you to a severe inquisition, and you begin to wonder what particular part of the much-discussed Defence of the Realm Act you have offended against.

"Have you any letters or other documents or photographs?"

Possibly you have a photograph of your wife or your children. It takes little to persuade your interlocutor that these pictures are harmless and of no use whatever to an enemy. You have, too, a letter from home or from friends and some business documents. These must be shown, and after a glance at them official No. 3 returns them without thanks.

Fishing For Information

Your torturer starts a pleasant conversation, during which he attempts to take you unawares by carefully veiled cross-examination.

"It is a calm day, I hear," he goes on. "You will have a pleasant journey across. It is a change from the recent storms."

That, of course is a feeler. But you may not satisfy your questioner regarding the date of your last visit to the Continent. He goes on chatting and asks if you have any more letters. The answer, of course, depends on yourself, but official No. 3 takes it for granted that nobody who is honest wishes to cross the channel. Suddenly you are amazed to feel a hand, so soft, so gentle, stealing into your pockets.

"What's this?" he says, taking a diary from your inside coat pocket.

"Oh, so you travel for Messrs. Blank"—he has seen some business cards—"you surely do not do much in that way now, do you?"

Then follows a chat about your business. In the meantime your pockets are being very thoroughly searched. Before he has finished your questioner casually remarks, "And when were you over last?"

Eventually, after some five or ten minutes, which seems to be an hour, you are released and handed over to official No. 4. There is another long cross-examination, but no searching. Your passport is carefully scrutinized and so much of your business is discussed that you imagine you are having an introduction to yourself. If you are lucky your examinations may be complete in twenty minutes. At any rate you probably have about half an hour to spare, and naturally the first thing that occurs to you is to repair to the buffet. When you reach the barrier at the top of the platform, however, you are met by official No. 5's declaration that "passengers who have been examined are not permitted to leave the platform."

More Scrutineers

There are no more incidents until the train reaches Folkestone. Here you receive from official No. 6 a card upon which you are required to write your name, address, age and destination. This is taken by official No. 7 at the gangway of the boat. In the meantime, official No. 8 examines your passport.

You jump off the gangway and board the ship with a satisfactory sense of security from the officials for at least a couple of hours. But you do not know the ways of the spy seekers. No sooner have you set foot aboard than a very polite bearded Frenchman strolls up to have a little chat about yourself.

"Your passport, M'sieur; will M'sieur permit me to see?"

The precious document is again inspected. You have to submit to a cross-examination regarding the nature of your business. Eventually the official scribbles some hieroglyphics on the passport next to the vise stamp and passes on to his next victim.

Throughout the voyage you experience the unpleasant feeling of being watched. Solitary individuals pass by from time to time, Frenchmen and Englishmen, glancing carelessly in your direction the while.

Moments of Suspense

As the ship is secured alongside Calais quay and the gangway has been lowered you pick up your belongings and, in accordance with peace time custom, make a dash to get ashore. But you are in too much haste. You have to join the long queue of passengers which several officials are keeping back from the gangway.

"Just stand aside there and wait," commands an official brusquely.

Your worst forebodings are realized. You see visions of a dungeon. Your fellow passengers glance at you with scorn. It is not until after the last passenger has gone that the officials turn their attention to you. There is a conference, five of them examining your passport, which had not been returned. The polite and bearded Frenchman joins them, and you know your fate is sealed.

Suddenly they disperse and the Frenchman comes over, smiling, and apologizes for having kept you waiting. You are free!

Huns Need Watching

According to a Copenhagen correspondent, Danish tailors are keeping their eyes on would-be customers of German nationality. It is forbidden to export Danish cloth to Germany, and Denmark gets English cloth only on condition that it be not resold to the Germans. Many Germans who run up to Denmark take the opportunity of trying to get measured for as many suits as possible through various shops, so that when they get back to Germany they can sell at a big profit the suits which they do not actually need for their own use.

Askari Can't Hit Zepp.

From a soldier's diary of East Africa: "The German native soldier, called out here Askari, can't hit a Zepp at 10 yards. This is a fact. I suppose without exception he is one of the finest fighting men on earth, black, white, or yellow, but he can't shoot for toffee."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SPORTING NEWS

PRINTERS RETURNED VICTORS IN FIRST GAMES OF BOWLING LEAGUE

The new Peterborough bowling league opened last night at the Water Street alleys when the Printers and West End clashed in the first league match for the season. The Printers took the three games from the West Enders. The losers had a night off as they have a well-balanced team and expect to put in a good showing in the next game. Henderson, for the Printers, was high man for three games and "Chief" Thompson was high for the West End. Chief Thompson made a very difficult spare.

Tonight the King Pins meet the Wholesale Grocers.

The scores:

Printers
Moore	138	196	127—	461
Henderson	186	183	157—	526

KAY WINS GAME IN SEMI-FINALS

A CLOSELY CONTESTED MATCH WITH STURGEON QUARTET.

Skip Alex. Kay beat out Skip Bob Sturgeon in the semi-final game of the local bonspiel last night. From start to finish it was a case of one up and one down, and then even, and then the reverse. Every man on the rinks was playing his best and some of the most beautiful shots and draws curled locally this year were witnessed.

Skip Kay has already declared himself the winner but he has yet to take the measure of Skips J. H. Ferguson and Harry Foote.

Rinks and score:—

A. L. Killaly	C. Westbrook
A. J. Grant	J. M. Lowes
D. Easton	C. J. Seymour
A. C. Kay (Skip)—12	R. Sturgeon (Skip)—11

Skips Waddell, Morrow, Hicks, Giroux and McDermid took five rinks to Toronto, where they will curl with the Toronto Victorias.

DR. WIGHTMAN'S RINK WINNERS OF INTER-RINK

At the curling rink last night there was all kinds of excitement for those who are at all interested in the curling game. Dr. Wightman and Ray Best had a battle royal to decide which group in the inter-rink contests should hold the championship. Best was the winner of Group 1 and Wightman of Group 2. In last night's game it was an even bet at all stages until the twelfth end, when Best was up and Wightman got a four end and then a single, winning out by a score of 15 to 13.

Rinks and score:—

S. J. Graham	H. Dearle
C. S. Browne	C. G. Graham
J. Wiley	P. D. Fitzgerald
Dr Wightman (Skip)—15	R. P. Best (Skip)—13

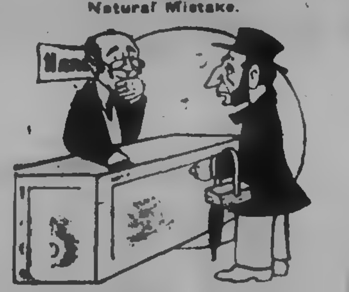
Big News in Brief

John Alfred Bucknell, supervisor for Michigan of the Canada Life Assurance Co., and engaged for 37 years by the company, died at Windsor Hotel Dieu of pneumonia, at the age of 56.

Welland board of trade is asking the Department of Railways and Canals to plan at once for a canal and river system from the foot of Lake Ontario to Montreal to conform with the Welland ship canal in capacity.

Mrs. Hornsey of Stratford, wife of Pte. J. Hornsey, who on Sunday night suffered the total loss of her house and its contents by fire, was presented by citizens with a comfortable brick house, completely furnished.

Natural Mistake.



"Got any biscuits?"

"No. This is a hardware store."

"I know it. But my wife told me to bring home some biscuits, and I thought this would be the place to match some she made yesterday."

Would Trade Places.

"I came to ask you," said the timid young man, blushing to the roots of his hair and twisting half the buttons off his new vest, "if I might marry your daughter."

"Young man, are you looking for a boss?"

"Well, I wouldn't put it just that way."

"No, because you do not realize what is about to happen to you. I have been bossed for twenty years, and I don't know but I would like a vacation. You can have her."

Would if He Could.

"Pa, if we lived in the days of pirates would you be a pirate bold and sail the Spanish main?"

"Of course not, my son."

"Of course not," chimed in his mother. "The place of the old pirates is taken by the modern trust magnates, and your pa isn't a trust magnate by a long way."

Doubted His Credit.

"I am going to turn over a new leaf."

"Are you?"

"You bet!"

"I was just wondering."

"What?"

"Where you'd get the leaf."

And It Is Easy.

"I am looking for trouble."

"You are?"

"Yes."

"Seems to me that you take a lot to do it."

A provincial scheme of co-operative marketing of Ontario's root crop was inaugurated at a conference in Ottawa of representatives of the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

JOHNSTON—MILES.

At St. Andrew's Manse at 10:30 this morning, Rev. T. H. Mitchell united in marriage Mr. Frederick Victor Johnston of Havelock and Miss May Miles, of Clarina. The parents of the young people were witnesses to the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will make their home in Alberta, where the groom is a prosperous farmer.

Mrs. K. G. Lech and Mrs. H. O. Fisk will be the hostesses at the 57th Chapter, I. O. D. E., tea tomorrow afternoon in the Masonic dining hall.

Mr. Stanley Hayton of Madoc spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. James McGhee, and sisters, of 502 Sherbrooke Street.

Dr. A. A. Fowler is confined to his home with an attack of rheumatism.

Mr. A. Franklin Lane has returned from Windsor, where he has been taking a post-graduate course in the Toledo Scale office. Mr. Lane received this course from the company owing to his splendid record of sales since taking over the sales agency.

Mr. A. Franklin Lane has returned from Windsor and Detroit. By a strange coincident the three Lane brothers were in Detroit the same week in February. Mr. I. Elwood Lane, of Lanes, Ltd., Five and Ten Cent Stores, Salt Lake City, Mr. John T. Lane, of Pasadena, Calif., and Mr. A. Franklin Lane, city, were in the city on business pertaining to their different branches.

ERNIE MARKS' STRONG COMPANY

LADIES WEAR ELEGANT GOWNS IN "THE MAN OF MYSTERY."

Ernie Marks is back to town with the strongest company he has ever placed before the footlights of the Grand. In the presentation of "The Man of Mystery" as a curtain raiser last night, the company produced a real kick, and the unravelling of the plot held the interest of the large audience from start to finish. Kitty Marks and the supporting ladies displayed a wealth of gowns that made their fair friends gasp with delight. All were exceedingly good in their portrayals.

The story told of the hunt by Lucifer, the famous detective, after The Shadow, a notorious crook, and the sleuth was returned a winner. The two leading roles were ably acted by Mr. Norbert E. Dorente and Mr. D. E. Benn respectively.

Ernie Marks kept the presentation well supplied with comedy. Revised versions of specialties that have made Marks Bros. audiences laugh since the palmiest days of Chris. Allan, when the company held forth in the old Opera House, were given by Neil Benzie. Al. Perren, a Lindsay boy, does a song and dance numbers and the Durands gave a miscellaneous bill that is above the average.

Poultry Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association will be held in the Labor Hall, George St., tomorrow evening, Thursday, March 8, at 8 o'clock. All varieties of Orpingtons will be on exhibition. All poultry fanciers are invited.—A. Brault, Secretary.

TO THE AUTOMOBILE BUYING PUBLIC

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford car either with or without self starter.

Last November I received a Ford car with an A B C electric starter and lighting system which was designed by the head electrican of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted, nor has it had the battery recharged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this starter is reliable and effective in every particular, and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a starter.

My salesman will be in the show room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

GOMEZ, REBEL STAFF AND MEN ARE CAPTURED

THREE THOUSAN MEN ENGAGE IN PITCHED BATTLE.

100 ARE KILLED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HAVANA, March 8.— An official statement issued last night says that in what was probably the greatest pitched battle ever known in Cuba, in which 3,000 men wer engaged, the rebel leader, Jos Miguel Gomez, his whole staff and 300 men, were made prisoners. Over 100 men were killed and many were wounded.

18,000 WOMEN FOR SERVICE IN FRANCE

FIVE THOUSAND TO LEAVE ENGLAND AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

A London cable says: Eighteen thousand women have volunteered to go to France and form a British women's army auxiliary corps. These recruits for the "army behind the army" will be sent out in batches of 200. Full preparations have been made for hotel billeting and accommodations.

Five thousand will be despatched to France as soon as possible. The total number that can be employed on the west front is not yet known, but doubtless thousands will ultimately be enrolled to relieve men of certain duties in connection with the large army undergoing training in the United Kingdom.

Though the anouncement that a woman's corps would be accepted was made only nine days ago, the applications for enrollment have been so numerous that no more will be considered for the present. The women act as typists, shorthand writers, cooks, waitresses motor transport drivers, storehouse keepers, checkers of unskilled lemor, telephone, telegraph, and postal workers and aids in miscellaneous services.

Women between twenty and forty years of age are accepted. They work forty-two hours a week for good wages. Enlisting for twelve months, they receive a bonus of five pounds if they re-enlist at the end of the year.

BERLIN BOASTS SUB. SUCCESS

AGGREGATE GROSS TONNAGE OF 91,000 WAS SUNK RECENTLY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, March 8—The German Admiralty announce that 21 steamships, 10 sailing vessels and 16 fishing craft, with an aggregate gross tonnage of 91,000, have been sunk recently by German submarines.

A British official statement says that 23 British merchant vessels were sunk by mine or submarines during the week ending March 4. Of these 14 were of 1,600 tons gross or over, and 9 were under 1,600 tons. In the same period three British fishing vessels were sunk. The statement includes one merchant vessel and one fishing vessel sunk during the previous week, but not included in a previous statement.

Twelve British merchant vessels were unsuccessfully attacked by submarines during the week.

The number of merchant vessels of all nationalities of more than 100 tons net arriving at United Kingdom ports during the week was 2,528. The number sailing was 2477. These figures are exclusive of fishing and local craft.

FRENCH WIN PRISONERS AT FOE TRENCHES

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE IS DONE TO WORKS OF THE GERMANS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 8 (Official statement).—Betwen the Oise and the Aisne there were rather heavy artillery engagements. Patrol encounters occurred in the region of Moulin Sous Toutvent.

In Lorraine, north-east of Embermenil, a French detachment penetrated German trenches and brought back fifteen prisoners after doing considerable damage to the enemy's works.

In Alsace, a German attack on our positions near Seppois Le Haut was repulsed completely. We took prisoners near Felsenfirv. French reconnoitering parties inflicted losses on the enemy.

The night passed quietly elsewhere.

COL. CHURCHILL PROPOSED ATTACK ON THE DARDANELLES TO DEFEND EGYPT

Commission Appointed to Inquire Into Responsibility for the Dardanelles Expedition Issues Its Report

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8. — The commission appointed to enquire into the responsibility for the Dardanelles expedition, issued its report today. The report, from which one of the members dissents on some of the main points, and two others on minor details, says:

"Winston Churchill proposed the attack on the Dardanelles as an ideal method of defending Egypt, and later, early in January, 1915, the question came up again as the result of a communication from Russia. Summarized in a paragraph, the report intimates that a naval attack, unsupported simultaneously by land forces, was foredoomed to failure, and that naval experts did not sufficiently insist upon this view, and that when Lord Kitchener declared there were not at the time troops available for operations in the East, the War Council did not take steps to ascertain whether that was the case or not."

"The Commission is of the opinion that Lord Kitchener did not sufficiently avail himself of the services of his general staff so that the general staff virtually ceased to exist. Further, regarding Kitchener, the report says that his premature death and that of his secretary renders it impossible to state with the same confidence, as in the case of those still living, the opinions and aims of Lord Kitchener at different periods of the proceedings. Even deference to the memory of the illustrious dead does not justify abstaining from complete revelations of his course. It is necessary to do justice to the living as well as to the dead.

Col. Churchill testified before the Commission that Kitchener's personal qualities and position played a very great part in the recision of events. The report continues: "He was the sole mouthpiece of war office opinion in the War Council. When he gave a decision it was invariably accepted as final. He was never overruled by the War Council or Cabinet in any matter great or small. Scarcely anyone ever ventured to argue with him in council."

"The principle of centralization," the report says, "was pushed to the extreme point byKitchener. It proved successful in minor operations in the Soudan, but in larger operations it threw upon one man more work than any one individual could cope with."

5000 CANADIANS WANTED FOR FORESTRY WORK IN BRITAIN

247TH BATTALION PASSES THE TWO HUNDRED MARK

Major Campbell Here Again This Evening

The 200 mark has been passed in the strength of the 247th Batt. and the officers and men are happy. To be correct, the total strength this morning was 202 and the recruiting officers hope to have quite a few more men by Saturday night.

The chief recruiting officer, Major Campbell, will be here for a short visit this evening.

Lieut. Strickland left this morning to take a course at the I.S. of I., Kingston.

Four recruits were taken on the strength of the 247th yesterday and this morning. They were Ptes. H. Townsend, Norwood, Neil F. Porter, 538 Chamberlain St., G. I. Russel, Peterborough; and J. R. Rouselle, Peterborough.

The Speakers' Patriotic League, the manufacturers and merchants will hold a conference on Monday night.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Peterborough branch of the Patriotic Fund, has received notification that Mrs. Jemima Head, 229 Edinburgh St., had been granted separation allowance.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH BARNARD

The death took place on Wednesday evening, March 7, at his late residence, 114 Dufferin St., East City, of Joseph Barnard. He was born at South Monaghan in 1833, and is the last remaining member of a family of twelve children. Forty-eight years of his life was spent at his birthplace, twenty-four in North Monaghan, and the remaining twelve at his late residence.

Mr. Barnard married Miss Caroline Tate, who predeceased him nine years. He is survived by six children, namely: Mrs. W. A. Bell of Smith Township; Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. H. Rightmeyer, Mrs J Arthur of Peterborough; William A. of Tillsonburg; and Joseph Albert of N. Monaghan.

Notwithstanding his great age, he was in possession of all his facilities to the last.

The funeral will take place from his late residence on Friday, March 9, at 2.30, to Little Lake Cemetery. A short service will be held at the house at 2o'clock.

MRS. DENIS McMAHON.

Elizabeth Sheehan, wife of Mr Denis McMahon, Cady street, Ashburnham, died this morning, aged 73 years. Mrs. McMahon was born in Douro, and had lived in the township until three months ago. She is survived by her husband, one son Patrick, of New Ontario, two sisters Miss Mary Sheehan, Douro, and Mrs Catherine Hynes, Lakefield, and one brother, Richard Sheehan, Douro

The funeral will be held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock to the Church of the Immaculate Conception and St Joseph's cemetery, Douro.

SANDWICHES CIGARS, BEER AND MUSIC

POLICE PUT A STOP TO SOCIAL EVENINGS BY HOLDING UP EXPRESSMAN.

AIRED IN POLICE COURT.

In police court this morning Magistrate Dumble dismissed a charge against a well-known South Ward resident for violation of the Ontario Temperance Act.

For some time a number of men interested in music have visited one another's homes on certain occasions for the purpose of having an evening's fun. One would bring the sandwiches, another the cigars, and so on. Each filled a part and one agreed each time to provide a three-gallon keg of lager. This he got in the regular way from Montreal, and after it was delivered at his home he would either take or send the keg to the agreed place of entertainment.

The police were notified that "so-and-so" was shipping liquor in kegs In duty bound the police officers made an investigation and on Saturday night two members of the department stopped an express man just after he had left the defendant's home, and in the sleigh they found a small keg of lager which was being taken to another residence. Later on, a search was made of the house and a dozen or more bottles of stout were found, which, it was claimed, was for the defendant's wife's use.

A charge was laid and a straight statement of facts made to the magistrate, who found that there was a technical violation but no one was hurt. He dismissed the case.

Dale Minister and His Wife in City

ADDRESSED THE PRAYER SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S.

The midweek service at St. Paul's Church had an added interest last night, when Rev. Mr. Smith, of Dale Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and Mrs. Smith, who before her marriage, was Miss Daisy Billings, of this city, were present and addressed the meeting.

Rev Mr. Smith is assistant pastor at Dale Church, the minister Rev. J. D. Morrow, being overseas as chaplain with the 180th (Sportsmen's) Batt. The church has accommodation for 2,600 persons and Mr. and Mrs. Smith always have capacity congregations at the service.

Dr. Neal's Address Very Instructive

At the meeting of the Peterborough Chapter of Graduate Nurses Association of Ontario in the Public Library yesterday afternoon, Dr. Neal delivered a very instructive address on Blood Pressure, which was the nurses. A hearty vote of thanks listened to with much interest by the nurses. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Dr Neal, after which the meeting adjourned.

WILL NOT RESUME DEBATE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8. — Bonar Law told the Commons this afternoon that he saw no advantage in giving facilities for a resumption of the Irish debate.

LONDON, March 8. — The parliamentary correspondent of the Times wires: "The Irish debate in the House of Commons last night culminated in a dramatic scene. John Redmond regarded the Prime Minister's reply to the Nationalist demand for an immediate settlement of the basis of Home Rule as so unsatisfactory that he declined to take any further part in the debate, and led his followers from the chamber.

"Lloyd George's declaration was to the effect that the government were prepared to grant home rule now to that part of Ireland which already demanded it, but would not take action to enforce home rule on that part to which it was repugnant."

PRESBYTERY OF PETERBOROUGH

WILL DEAL WITH RESIGNATION OF LIEUT.-COL. BEATTIE.

Peterborough Presbytery will meet at St. Andrew's Church next Tuesday, when reports on the year's activities will be received and general business transacted.

One of the items of business will be to deal with the resignation of Lt.-Col. Beattie from his church at Cobourg. Lt.-Col. Beattie went to the front as chaplain with the first contingent of Canadians.

REGRET HERE

EX-CONTROLLER SPENCE IS DEAD AT TORONTO.

The death of ex-Controller Frank Spence in Toronto this morning occasioned much sorrow among his numerous friends in this city. Mr. Spence had appeared on the temperance platform on several occasions in the city and he was a man who was much admired.

He was the brother of Rev. Ben. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Alliance.

Deceased was a brother-in-law of Ald. A. A. McIntyre.

PEDLER HAD TO RETURN COUCH

OWNER OF FURNITURE WILL PAY HIM THREE DOLLARS.

Thomas Hubel, a local pedlar, undertook to move the household effects of a lady who lives on the south side. When the work was completed the charges he made for the work were thought excessive by the woman who refused to pay. Thomas took a couch and disposed of it to cover his expenses.

This morning he appeared before the magistrate to explain why he had taken the matter in his own hands. The statements of both parties decided the magistrate to order the return of the couch and the payment of $3 to Thomas.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1917

THE BANQUET TONIGHT.

MAYOR DUFFUS will entertain some of the leaders of local-labor unions at a banquet tonight, and following the program laid out for such functions, the guests will be invited to make suggestions with regard to the management of city affairs. This banquet is likely to be an affair of peculiar interest, and those in attendance are certain to voice some sound and practical ideas.

The workingmen of Peterborough have one serious grievance that they are in the habit of parading whenever the opportunity offers. In common with a portion of the employing classes, they complain that the tax rate is too high. Every married man is ambitious to own his own home, but the tenants declare that under present conditions this is impossible, and that it is vastly cheaper to pay rent than to be called upon to meet the annual tax levy.

There is certainly something wrong with the civic machinery. The house owners appear to be getting the worst of it, and owning property for renting purposes is far from a tempting enterprise. An organization that was left a block of real estate by a wealthy member is not able to realize more than one per cent. on its holdings. This is by no means an unusual case. The tax rate is held responsible for these conditions.

There is no community so permanently prosperous none where the residents are more content, than the town or city in which a majority of the wage-earners own their own domiciles. When the workingmen pay their share of the taxes they will take a more active and intelligent interest in municipal affairs.

PETERBOROUGH'S NEW INDUSTRY.

PETERBOROUGH'S latest industry has come to the city without effort on the part of the Manufacturers' Committee or any other promoting agency. There has been no demand for a free site, bonus, tax exemption or any other privilege. The company recognized the advantages of this city as a manufacturing centre and governed themselves accordingly.

The Milk Products Company should prove a veritable temporal blessing to the farmers and to the city residents. It will give lucrative employment to a large staff of workers. It will furnish the consumers of milk and other dairy products with pure commodities and will give the farming community such a boost as it has not known for years.

Behind this enterprise, too, are some of the most substantial business men in the city, men who never associate themselves with anything that is not strictly according to code, and any representations they may make to the public can be accepted without the slightest hesitation.

STUDYING PUBLIC QUESTIONS.

"WOMEN ARE NOT sufficently versed in political questions to intelligently exercise the franchise" is a stock argument that has been used for years by the anti-suffragists. The women themselves quietly answer this objection.

Since it has become a matter of certainty that women are to be given the right to vote, the suffragists have done more to fit themselves for the duties of their new citizenship than man has done in all the years he has been voting. Mrs. Plumptre, one of the outstanding figures in Canadian womanhood, who has frequently appeared on the platform in this city in connection with Red Cross and kindred works, recently published a letter in Toronto paper calling upon the women of Ontario to qualify themselves as electors. Whoever heard of men finding themselves for the first time in possession of the franchise adopting such a course as this?

The young man who on attaining his majority gets the franchise rarely has a proper sense of his responsibilities. In a percentage of cases he is led to the polls like an ox to the watertrough, and casts his vote unable to justify his action except by pleading that his father before him always voted that way.

The alien may not be able to read at all and can only indifferently speak the English language. He first of all, as a rule, concerns himself simply with the market value of his new possession. He knows nothing of the questions at issue, and yet it is a well-known fact that, in close constituencies especially, it is the alien vote that is the deciding factor. The government of the Western Provinces is largely controlled by the vote of the illiterate and marketable foreigners. The young men and the aliens never meet together in orderly organizations as the women of Ontario are doing to get a clear understanding of the duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

In the larger cities women for years have had their political organizations maintained on party lines. The members of these societies certainly know something of political problems. There are other societies of women in which public questions have been studied and debated. When have the men of Canada ever organized for such a purpose? The two regular party organizations are all the male voters have to show in this regard.

A lady reader in St. Thomas writes The Review that while the women are pleased to receive the franchise, some of them believe that certain restrictions should be imposed, such as an educational test or the earning capacity of the new electors. She appears to hold the opinion that it is hardly fair that the maid's vote should have the same effect as that of the mistress.

There is no discrimination in the case of the men, why, then, should any such conditions be imposed on women? The laborer can nullify the vote of the millionaire, the workingman that of his employer. The man who cannot read is of as much importance at the polls as the college professor. The working girl, perhaps more than the members of any other class, has reason to complain of her present environments, just as the male wage-earners may have. One way in which she can remedy these conditions leads up to the ballot-box.

MORE TALK OF CHURCH UNION.

THE PRESENT-DAY TALK of church union is not confined to Canada and three religious denominations in this country. The war has revived the agitation in favor of an amalgamation of the Greek and Roman Catholic Churches, nd if this is ever effected, the strongest religious orgnization in the world will be the result. A breach that dates from the early years of the second century will be healed.

The Greek or Eastern Church is that of the old Eastern Empire, which prior to the Turkish conquest had its metropolis at Constantinople. It is distinguished from the West Church, which had its capital at Rome. The people of the first spoke the Greek, those of the latter the language of the Roman nation.

The first dispute arose over the time of keeping Easter, but the disputes which followed were generally with regard to personal dignity. As long as Rome was the metropolis of the empire, the Bishop of Rome had indisputably the most important see in the Church; but when, on May 11, 330, Constantine removed the seat of government to Byzantium (Constantinople), the bishop of the new metropolis became a formidable rival to his ecclesiastical brother at Rome. In the second General Council, that of Constantinople, 381, the Bishop of Constantinople was allowtd to sit next to the Bishop of Rome; by the 28th canon of the Synod of Chalcedon, 403, he was permitted to enjoy an equal rank. In 588, John, Patriarch of Constantinople, assumed the title of œcumenical or universal bishop, for which he was denounced by Pope Gregory the Great. The last General Council in which the churches of the East and the West were united was the Seventh, or Second Council of Nice, 787. The feud continued through the 9th and on to the 11th century. In the 13th an effort was made by Michael Palæologus to promote a reunion of the two great churches at the Council of Florence, but all was in vain. They have remained separate till now. Efforts are said to be on foot looking to the union of the Greek and Roman Churches.

With the Greek Church the Bible is the rule of faith. Regarding the Trinity, the Divinity of Christ, the Atonement and the work of the Holy Spirit, the Greek Church holds the ordinary faith of Christendom. With regard to the decrees of God, the Greek tenets are now what would be regarded as strongly Arminian. Worship is rendered the Virgin Mary, to saints and angels. Images are in use. The secular clergy are enjoined to marry once and with a virgin. The communion is administered even to the laity. The doctrine of purgatory is not accepted. Baptism is by immersion, followed by anointing.

Excepting the Church of Rome, the Greek Church is the largest Christian organization, though is would be only the third if the several Protestant Churches were united. It is composed of eleven Patriarchates, or divisions, of which that of Russia is by far the largest and most influential. It has, too, a large following in the Turkish Empire, and has a patriarch at Constantinople. There are, too, numerous Austrian adherents of the church. In Russia the people from Emperor to peasant delight to call it "the orthodox faith."

Church union in a new and broader sense than ever attained in Canadian General Assembly or conference may yet be born of the war.

Reciprocity in Honors.

(Toronto Telegram.)

When a great Canadian is offered a peerage in the House of Lords at Westminster, an equally great Old Country man might be made a baron of York County council, an earl of the Woodbridge Fall Fair, or a duke of the Canadian National Exhibition, with the right to attire himself in one of Hon. Col. Joseph Oliver's castoff khaki suits—if it fits.

Discretion in War Time.

(New York Sun.)

The practice of most of the Canadian newspapers may be regarded as a good example to follow. They print plenty of news, fill their papers with interesting and timely information and interviews, but carefully avoid publishing anything which it is their business to conceal from the enemy with whom they are at war.

Eat Rice.

(New York World.)

Why should anybody eat potatoes at $1 a peck when rice can be bought for 4 to 8 cents a pound? One way to curb rapacious food purveyors is to revise diet. It's the surest way to revise prices.

WHO SLUGGED ALCOHOL?

The wave of prohibition that is passing over the United States has the support of all the leading statesmen and newspapers. Prominent and influential among the latter is the New York Sun, from which the following is taken. This, as every other question, has two sides and, as usual, The Sun presents both fairly. The text of the editorial is as follows:—

King Alcohol, if he is not on his last legs, is groggy. The Drys have battered him blind and his power of resistance is palpably failing. Nothing his second can do serves to revive his strength, and unless he shows an unlooked for power of recuperation he is bound to take the count. And, curiously enough, while the victory of the Drys will not be popular, nobody who has not a bet down on the King will grieve over the delivery of the knock-outblow.

Yet time was when the King had many friends who were willing to go to the front for him, and who celebrated enthusiastically each advantage he gained. Once, in a past not too remote, he was requisitioned to pay the pastor's salary. He was in demand at every raising. His respectability was beyond question. In the most ideal of democracies he was a potentate highly esteemed; governments popular in theory and in practice leaned on him; he was officially employed to hearten the soldiery, to reward the sailor and to encourage the laborer. Socially he held an apparently unassailable position. If any member of society could be said to be firmly established he was the fortunate individual. But today he is one hair's breadth from being an outcast, and the distance between him and destruction is decreasing.

Unquestionably the medical fraternity and the efficiency experts have done something to undermine his throne. Business took its cue from them; competition called for heads clear and hands steady when work began and when quitting time came. Religion and its agents got after him in the name of good morals. The State joined in the cause of better citizenship. Here were enemies of power and influence; in spite of them a great majority of folk refused to be weaned from their toddy, and while the art of fine drinking is said to have decayed in recent years the record for consumption has not been impaired. If the grand wines our fathers knew and boasted of knowing have fallen out of fashion, the common beverages, malt and spirituous, have kept their favor.

In spite of this King Alcohol is unable to stay on his pins, and nobody, save only those whose pocketbooks are affected, shows any serious compunction. How came a champion so ardently followed to be bereft of disinterested friends?

The reason is not hidden. King Alcohol's abandoned state is directly due to the character of his interested defenders; to men who have made fortunes, large and small, out of him, and in their greed have failed to play the game fairly. He has had in his train a crew that has made it impossible for decent men and women to join in his support, although his downfall means to them the loss of innocent pleasures, and according to their best judgment will not eliminate but merely change the form of the evils that are charged to him. If today this sorry potentate could rally to his support all those—who esteem a cocktail a pleasant thing, who gaze with gratitude upon a glass of wine, who take their beer with satisfaction, who use whisky in moderation, who look forward through dinner to the aromatic pungency of a cordial, he would be invincible. But he cannot. If they have not joined with his enemies they have stood mute, ready to give up something themselves rather than align their influence with that of the disreputables who stand under his banner.

For King Alcohol's record is a sorry one. Wherever his commercial exploitation has been undertaken—and where has it not?—a story of wretched villainy has been written. The custodians of his business interests have shown themselves ready always and everywhere to ally themselves with the worst elements of the community. Wherever a disreputable den needed a friend one of the King's fatuous men was sure to volunteer. Wherever conditons became so bad that a community rose in wrath to abate intolerable nuisances one of his court was at hands to combat cleanliness and bolster up vice. Wherever weakness and ignorance gave some little sign of striving for better things, some retainer of this arrogant monarch was at hand to stifle it. Not a bad cause lacked support from his well stuffed coffers, not a good movement enlisted their assistance. Corruption has recruited its first lieutenants, its captains, its generals in chief from his train; every opportunity for dirty work has been seized by them greedily, every indecency of business, of politics, of humanity at large has been bolstered and upheld by his retainers.

Consequently King Alcohol finds himself dependent for his defence in the hour of his extremity on persons whose very occupations taint their efforts and repel the aid they ask for. Some of them have at last opened their eyes to the conditions under which they must labor. They are striving handsomely to erase the past. But they cannot curtain the swinish debauchery that has alienated from their cause practically all right thinking men, or cover the history of a trade that for years has deliberately and in all its branches identified itself with criminality and vice. The stench of its past is not to be overcome by the disinfectant of promises of good behaviour. The penalty visited on it has been earned by its blind and senseless depravity.

We are under no delusion as to the character of the reform that is making. We look for no radical betterment of the race through the substitution of drug madness for drink madness, though it be achieved at the cost of inconvenience, annoyance and impaired personal liberty among sensible folk. We foresee the diversion of the activities of numerous fat and well clad professional reformers, lobbyists and other parasites to other fields; tobacco, we understand, it already marked as a rich province for unctuous and well rewarded labor. These are subjects for consideration at another time. The interesting fact at present is, that King Alcohol, once a world-wide autocrat, has been reduced to the precarious status of a constitutional prince likely to be banished at any moment because his courtiers were stupid, vicious and offensive to the moral sentiment of reasonable men.

One of the recruiting canvassers in an English provincial town was a well-known magistrate. In most cases he succeeded in obtaining the promises he wished, but at last he knocked at one cottage door which was opened to him by a sturdy son of the soil.

"My man," said the magistrate, in his most persuasive tones, "are you willing to fight for your King and country?"

"No, I beant, sir," was the prompt reply. 'An' I be surprised at you askin' me to do it. Two years ago come next month you yourself fined I twenty shillings for fighting wi' Bill Smith, and you said it wor wicked to fight, an' I promised you as I wouldn't repeat the offence, and allus kept my word."

He had opened up a fish shop and he ordered a new sign painted, of which he was very proud. It read, "Fresh Fish Sold Here."

"What did you put the word 'fresh' in for?" said his first customer. "You wouldn't sell them if they were not fresh, would you?"

He painted out the word, leaving just "Fish Sold Here."

"Why do you say 'here'?" asked his second customer. "Your'e not selling them anywhere else, are you?"

So he rubbed out the word "here."

"Why use 'Sold'? asked the next curtomer. "You're not giving them away, are you?"

So he rubbed out everything but the word "Fish," remarking:

"Well, nobody can find fault with that sign now, anyway."

A moment later another customer came in.

"I don't see the use of that sign 'Fish' up there," said he, "when you can smell them a mile away."

ATHLETES' HONOR ROLL

Young Canadians Killed in France in '16

IN the past two years many comments have been made upon the splendid response of the athletes of Canada to the call of their country. Young men who had kept themselves physically fit felt that they were ready to go, and they went. That is perhaps the reason why most of the widely-known Canadians who fell during 1915 were men whose fame came to them on the playing fields, and all of them were exponents of our national games. Nick Carter, the great Vancouver lacrosse player; Art Muir, the Winnipeg Rugby star; Jeff Taylor, the Toronto oarsman; Alan Davidson, the Kingston hockey comet — all these men were known by name in every part of the Dominion. They gave up their lives early in the conflict. In 1916, the war took its toll of our athletes also, though probably there was no quartette on the honor roll of the year quite so well known as the men mentioned above. It also indicates the relation of national sports to the national life that practically all who were killed played our Canadian games.

It may be said without much fear of contradiction that the soldier who was the most outstanding star in his own particular pastime was A. M. Mackenzie, the Toronto Canoe Club paddler who fell at St. Eloi. Among the solo performers in canoes, there were few men in Canada who could contend against him, but paddling is a remote sort of contest, and people do not become familiar with the faces of those who excel at this form of racing. The name of Mackenzie was doubtless known to many persons who would have passed him on the street without recognizing him as the invincible speed artist.

The name of Gordon Southam of the Hamilton Tigers was one to conjure with in Rugby circles a few years ago. He died going into action with the 40th Battery of the Canadian Field Artillery, and his death carried the minds of people back to the days when gridiron fights were the most exciting warfare of each Canadian year. Gordon Southam made his reputation as a kicking and running half-back when he played on the University of Toronto team, but it was in 1907 that he made the most sensational play of his career in a game against the Montreal team on the M.A.A.A. grounds. The Big Four League had just been formed, which gave the teams an opportunity to settle an argument which had raged for many years as to whether the brand of Rugby played in Montreal and Ottawa was better than that played up around Hamilton and Toronto. Feeling was running very high that October day in Montreal, and at half-time the score stood 7 to 5 against the Tigers. Things looked rather gloomy for the Jungle Terrors, as their chief star, the reliable Ben Simpson, had been injured, and Southam showed signs of wearing down under the heavy treatment he was receiving. The Montreal team held the Tigers well out from their line, and all their tricks and bucking tactics could not break through. Then it was that Southam pulled a surprise that put a different complexion on the game. He kicked a beautiful goal from near centre field, and the Tigers were able to hold the advantage thus gained, winning one of the most exciting games in the history of Canadian Rugby.

Another old-timer among Rugby players who gave his life during the year was Peter Ferguson, who played in the scrimmage of the Ottawa Rough Riders about six years ago, when the team at the capital was at its strongest. "Pete" Ferguson was a big, good-natured Highlander, and made his home in Ottawa after fighting in the South African War. He took kindly to Canadian Rugby, and was with the Rough Riders from 1904 to 1911, years in which the game saw great development. He played in two Dominion finals, in both of which the Ottawa team went down to defeat. He was on the team that went down before 'Varsity in 1905, in the sensational game that Casey Baldwin, the aviator, has always been credited with winning by his individual brilliance. In 1911 the Rough Riders were defeated by 'Varsity a second time in a Dominion championship game, a struggle that revolutionized the method of play in our Rugby, being a triumph of new tactics over old. Pete Ferguson was playing when the "full back" became a thing of the past and the "flying wing" sprang into existence. It might also be added that he introduced a little wrinkle of his own in the way of a trick. It is said that he was the first man to try playing the position of quarter back so that he could make short kicks over the scrimmage and then use his weight and speed to secure the ball himself.

If anybody had asked who was the particular find of the Rugby season of 1914, the answer would have been "Colin Simpson of the Toronto Argonauts." He jumped into the game without any previous reputation, and became known in a couple of months as the tall, slight scrimmager who was one of the most deadly tacklers in the game, as he always [illegible] under the ball, and seldom missed his man. Lieut. Simpson was killed last July, and Sir Douglas Haig, in a despatch published since Christmas, mentioned this young Canadian for conspicuous bravery. Don Brophy, the Ottawa aviator who was killed while flying in England during the last week of December, had been regarded as a future Rugby star. He was attending McGill University in 1913 when that team won the intercollegiate championship, and he showed up so well that he made a place on the Ottawa back division a year later.

As lacrosse is the most typical of all Canadian games, it is only natural that the Honor Roll should contain many names of men who have starred with the gutted stick. It is sufficiently eloquent to say that sixty per cent. of the men who played lacrosse in Ontario in 1915 were in khaki in 1916. One of the most widely known of lacrosse players to lay down his life was Pte. Arthur Long, son of the Rev. J. A. Long, of Weston. He was killed by a shell explosion during a bombardment on March 29th last. Art. Long played with the Weston team and later on a number of Toronto line-ups, and in 1914 the professionals wanted him in their ranks. He was a strong, fast, and willing defence fielder, and made a great lacrosse player because he would put up a fight all the way. He never consented to quit, and that characteristic stuck to him until the end. After receiving his mortal wound, he said to his comrades with the spirit that had pulled out many a game on the lacrosse fields of Ontario, "I know I am going to die, boys, but avenge my death."

A less aggressive but very effective lacrosse player was Johnny Rowland, who met his death in France on September 18th. Rowland came of one of the greatest lacrosse families produced in Toronto in recent years. He learned the game with the Maitlands on Cottingham Square, where all the Rowland brothers played. Cottingham Square is a name eloquent with meaning to all Ontario lacrosse players. It is a spot where the game has never been played with kid gloves. There was a time when no visiting team ever dreamed of winning on "the square"; the best they hoped to do was to "make a showing." Any lad who received his schooling there knew the science of the national game and also knew how to take his bumps. Rowland went over to the Tecumsehs to play on the defence field, and was with them when they won the championship of the N. L. U. in 1911. He accompanied the Indians to the coast to play against Vancouver for the Minto Cup, but the joy ride was fruitless. Any Tecumseh fan will tell you that Johnny Rowland was the best looking boy on the line-up that year. When leaving Canada with the 35th battalion, he remarked to one of his old lacrosse pals, "Yes, it will be a great game, but it won't take much more nerve than playing against Cornwall or going up against the Nationals in Montreal." And he knew whereof he spoke.

Another lacrosse enthusiast who had more than a local reputation was Captain R. E. Horkins, a medical graduate of the University of Toronto. He was serving as a doctor at the front when killed. Dr. Horkins learned the game in Campbellford, where they have always known how to play lacrosse, and while studying in Toronto he had a place on one of the senior amateur teams of the city. In peace times, a 'Varsity team used to make a missionary journey once a year through the United States to demonstrate the Canadian national game. It has been taken up in a number of Uncle Sam's college centers, and their teams like to try conclusions occasionally with twelve boys from the Dominion. Dr. Horkins was captain of one of these Canadian teams. He was known as a clean, effective, and reliable player.

Hockey, the cold weather cousin of lacrosse, has also lost numerous exponents, the best known of them being Frank McGee, of Ottawa, one of the greatest hockey stars ever developed in Canada. He played with the celebrated Silver Seven that held the Stanley Cup for many years. Just at the beginning of the present century, hockey was in its prime, and McGee was one of the outstanding men of those glorious days. Historians of athletic events say that he twice saved the Stanley Cup for his team, the first time being in 1903, when the Winnipeg Rowing Club visited Ottawa in a vain effort to capture it, and again three years later when Kenora was the challenging team. McGee lost the sight of one eye through an accident in a hockey match, and it was fear of an injury to the other eye that made him give up the game in which he had few peers. He has never been surpassed among the athletes of the Dominion for gameness and brilliant cleverness.—Toronto Saturday Night.

PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO

FOR

BOYS AND GIRLS

UNDER FIFTEEN YEARS OF AGE IN THE CITY AND COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH

DRAW A MAP OF CANADA AND WIN A BEAUTIFUL WRIST WATCH.

EARN WHILE YOU LEARN

This is the biggest, most interesting, instructive and profitable competition of the kind on record.

It is open to all boys and girls under fifteen years of age in Peterborough County.

BEAUTIFUL WRIST WATCHES

Awarded for the most accurately drawn maps of Canada.

Never before have the boys and girls of Peterborough County been offered the opportunity to enter a competition that contained so many advantages and inducements.

AN EQUAL CHANCE FOR ALL

No favoritism can be shown as each competitor is known only by a number. Drawings will be judged and prizes awarded according to merit.

Competitors divided into three classes according to age, thus affording all an equal chance—

Class Number One
Under 15 years and over 12 years of age.
Class Number Two
Under 12 years and over 9 years of age.
Class Number Three
Under 9 years of age

"If at first you don't succeed Try, Try Again!

No one knows what they can do until they try. You cannot expect to succeed unless you try your very best. You have as much chance to win as anyone. Do not lose courage if your first efforts are failures. Discouragement means complete failure. Keep on trying - trying all the time. Your last effort may win a prize.

"Do Something - Be Somebody"

Make a free hand drawing of the Map of Canada, showing the chief cities, principal rivers, lakes and mountain ranges. The winners in this competition will command recognition and applause. Someone will win these honors and prizes. Why should the "SOMEBODY" not be you?.

"I Will Succeed"

That is the spirit of determination which has helped thousands of ambitious boys and girls to overcome the obstacles that beset the path of victory. If you have this spirit your success is assured in

THE Peterboro Daily Review Map Drawing Competition

WHAT YOU HAVE TO DO

Fill out the entry blank, and bring or send it to us, together with 25c to pay for one month's subscription for The Daily Review. Notify your teacher, your parents, your friends that you have entered this competition. Ask them to assist you in your efforts to win a prize. You will be surprised to find how anxious they will be to help you. If your parents are already subscribing for the The Daily Review and are not prepared to extend their present subscription, get busy and secure the subscription of your uncle, your aunt or one of the neighbors.

Enrol today. Do not delay. Do it now!

TO WIN A PRIZE

Make a Free-Hand Drawing of the Map of Canada, showing the chief cities, principal rivers, lakes and mountain ranges. The Maps must be free hand drawings and the unaided work of the competitor. No tracing of any kind will be allowed.

RULES AND REGULATIONS GOVERNING THE DAILY REVIEW CANADIAN MAP DRAWING COMPETITION

The competition is open to all children under 15 years of age in the County of Peterborough. The subscription price of 25c for The Daily Review for one month must accompany each entry. Upon receipt of application the candidate will receive a number. This number must be used instead of name and address when sending in drawings. Candidates may send in as many drawings as they please. Assistance may be given candidates to help them learn how to draw maps, but the maps submitted to the judges must be the unaided free-hand efforts of the candidates. The drawings submitted must not exceed 16in. by 20in. in size. No tracing of any kind will be allowed. The decision of the judges will be final.

All entries must reach The Review Office before 6 p.m. on March 10th, 1917.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 6.

WET-NURSE. If for any good reason the baby cannot be nursed by his own mother, milk should be secured from a wet-nurse. The most important requisite in an otherwise satisfactory wet-nurse is that she is well, and especially that she has no disease such as syphilis. To be certain of this a blood test should be made in every case. The wet-nurse's baby must be well and near the same age as the new baby to be nursed.

Weaning the Baby. The period of weaning should occupy two or three weeks. It must not be carried out suddenly. A bottle feeding should be substituted for a nursing every third or fourth day until all the feedings are from the bottle. Thus the baby has gradually become accustomed to the change, and the mother's breasts will not give any trouble if she is careful to limit the quantity of food she has been taking. Every baby should be weaned by ten months, and in no case should a baby be nursed longer than a year. It is best not to wean the baby in the hot summer weather.

Proprietary Foods. The writer has little use for the numerous so-called baby foods on the market. They are of two kinds, those to be added to cow's milk and those without. The former simply add greatly to the expense of cow's milk without increasing its value as a food, and those made without milk are not satisfactory. Some of the proprietary foods are exceedingly expensive. If they are used at all it should only be in cases where the baby cannot digest cow's milk, and then only on the advice of a competent and responsible physician. Just here I might remark that for some reason or other, (perhaps indifference or a lazy mind), some doctors are too ready to advise the use of these patent foods. They should think twice or three times before doing so.

Substitutes for Cow's Milk.

Condensed Milk. Condensed milk is milk from which the water and often some of the cream has been removed. In many cases sugar has been added and the condensed product is frequently made from an inferior grade of milk. It should not be used as infants' food except in travelling or in countries where it is impossible to obtain fresh cow's milk.

Goat's Milk. The milk of goats and asses may be used where cow's milk cannot be obtained, but strictly under the advice of a physician.

Feeding for Hot Days. On very hot days, etc., baby should not be urged to take too much. Give him cooled boiled water frequently. Dilute the feeding by replacing one ounce of the formula with one ounce of boiled water in each bottle.

Hours of Feeding. The hours of feeding for a bottle-fed baby are the same as for a breast-fed baby. By the end of the third day he should be fed every two hours in the day time and every four hours at night, ten feedings in the twenty-four hours. At one or one and a half months he should be fed every two and a half hours, or nine feedings in the twenty-four hours. At about five or six weeks or as soon as possible the time should be changed to every three hours. The feedings will then be at 6, 9, 12, 3, 6, 10, and 2 a.m. The latter feeding should be omitted as soon as the baby will go from 10 at night to 6 in the morning. After nine or ten months the baby will usually sleep through the whole night. Then the 10 p.m. feeding will be omitted.

Things to Remember.

Buy only clean milk, from a clean milkman. Keep it clean in your home.

Buy for the baby the freshest milk you can get, but not necessarily the richest milk.

If your town has not a Milk By-Law, or if it is not enforced, have the mothers unite and get after the town council about it.

Endeavor to have milk delivered in bottles. Bulk milk is not safe. Dirt and flies are sure to get into it. When milk is received put it on ice at once and keep it there until used. Warm milk soon spoils, and spoiled milk is sure to make the baby sick.

Never leave an open pitcher out of doors for the milkman to pour the milk into, and never allow milk to stand about the house in open vessels or on the steps in the sun.

If you must feed your baby on other than breast milk don't use a bottle with a tube. Use rubber nipples and go to the greatest trouble to see that nipples, bottles, and all utensils used are absolutely clean.

IS THE BIRTH OF YOUR BABY REGISTERED?

WOMEN DENIED RIGHT TO SIT IN LOCAL ASSEMBLY

Rowell Bill is Given Six-Months Hoist—Teachers' Pensions Again Taken up—Dr. Pyne Explains.

TORONTO, March 8 — Premier Hearst last night rejected Mr. N. W. Rowell's bill to remove the disqualification of women as candidates for the Legislative Assembly. Seconded by Hon. Dr. Pyne, Sir William moved to give the bill a six-months' hoist. The galleries were crowded with ladies when the leaders spoke.

The Government intimated that at the next sesion a bill will be brought in giving women the represenation now asked for.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, introduced the teachers' superannuation bill, and expressed the hope that it would make the profession of teaching more permanent and attract more men then of late years. In reply to Mr. McDonald of North Bruce, who asked what the main features of the measure were, the Minister stated that the teachers would pay 2 1-2 per cent. annually of salary and the Province would provide 2 1-2 per cent., making 5 per cent. in all. Provision would be made for teachers with 40, 30 and over 15 years' service receiving annuities, which, of course, would vary according to salary and the length of time the teacher was employed. There would be a minimum superannuation of $365 and a maximum of $1,000 per year, the amounts between these figures depending upon the circumstances as to time of service, etc. Another point was that any teacher who had over six years' service and desired to leave the profession would get their contributions returned. This, of course, would depend upon the actuarial stability of the fund Every three years there will be an actuarial valuation of the fund.

HURLED EGGS AT SLACKERS

SOLDIERS WHO MADE THE ATTACK FINED IN POLICE COURT.

The present system of recruiting does not appeal to some of the young men who have enlisted with the 234th Battalion, and they have sprung a new one, which, while it does not cost the government at Ottawa anything, is rather expensive for the individuals who undertook to put it into practice, and the results hardly warrant them in continuing it, says the Bancroft Times.

Three young men from Highland Grove were in town on Friday last, and the usual arguments were presented to them as to why they should put aside their glad rags and attire themselves in a more befitting costume. They failed to see the force of the arguments, however, and four young soldier, forthwith procured a dozen eggs and proceeded to apply them in their raw state to the persons of the unresponsive ones. It was splendid target practice and the boys are credited with making 12 bull's-eyes. If they score as well when they get to the trenches the Huns will have to keep dodging. However, as a sequel to the little escapade there was a police court case, and the egg throwers paid for their fun to the tune of $4.25 each and hen fruit is worth forty cents a dozen just now. Mr. I. A. Eby, J.P., was the adjudicator.

FOLKLORE OF LONDON

Superstition of a Girl Who Has Been Jilted

Italy and the East-end of London may especially be considered to be homes of the folklore of the world according to Mr. Edward Lovett, a member of the Folklore Society, who gave a lecture at the Horniman Museum. When a young girl in the East-end is jilted by her lover she invariably proceeds to the nearest chemist's and purchases some auris root, which she takes home without speaking to anyone and burns it. The one who has jilted her is then sure to repent of his unfaithfulness and return to her. Amongst the Jewish community charms are largely used. One of the most important is that which is hung around the neck of young boys when born. It generally bears the words, "May this boy grow up in Thy law and guard him from the evil eye." The broken horn charm is considered the most lucky one in nearly all countries. The balls made of glass which we see here in some sweetshops are hung up in grain fields in Italy to prevent the witches from damaging the crop, in the East-end they are considered to bring good luck to the owner of the shop. In the East-end the coral necklace is put round the necks of children with weak eyes. It is regarded as better than any doctor's prescription. The coral being the color of blood, brings pure blood to the eyes, and so strengthens them. Throughout London placing a cork in the bed is regarded by hundreds as a sure preventive against cramp.

Queen's Guests Disturbed

Queen Alexandra quite upset her guests at a house party in Norfolk by appearing at the breakfast table. This would not have been so serious had the dowager been in the habit of doing so, but it was the first time she had thus come down from her bed chamber in the morning for twenty-five years. The women at the house party had not brought any breakfast gowns.

The Queen was much amused at the perturbation of her guests, but as she herself appeared in only a dainty white satin and lace blouse and navy blue, black braided skirt, their plight was not so terrible.

THE HISTORIC FIGHT AT NEUVE CHAPELLE

Artillery Battle Unique in Annals of Warfare Followed by Terrific Charge of Troops

The first independent detailed account of the British victory at Neuve Chapelle, reproduced in part from The London Times, is a thrilling story of real modern warfare:

Of a sudden the deep boom of a British gun struck on the ears of our waiting troops. But the bombardment was not yet. For an hour or two the guns boomed intermittently, "registering," as it is called—that is, making sure of their respective ranges—rather like a cricketer having a few balls at the nets before he goes to bat. Then dawn broke softly, the shadows melted, and the clouds drifted away and here and there a British aeroplane sailed pluckily forth over the German lines, to be greeted by white balls of shrapnel smoke hanging motionless in the clear morning air. Then hell broke loose. With a mighty, hideous, screeching burst of noise, hundreds of guns spoke. The men in the front trenches were deafened by the sharp reports of the field guns spitting out their shells at close range to cut through the Germans' barbed wire entanglements. The din was continuous. After the first few shells had plunged screaming amid clouds of earth and dust into the German trenches, a dense pall of smoke hung over the German lines. The sickening fumes of lyddite blew back in the British trenches. In some places the troops were smothered in earth and dust or even spattered with blood from the hideous fragments of human bodies that went hurtling through the air. At one point the upper half of a German officer, was blown into one of our trenches.

Signal For Assault

Words will never convey any adequate idea of the horror of those five and thirty minutes. When the hands of officers' watches pointed to five minutes past 8, whistles resounded along the British lines. At the same moment the shells began to burst farther ahead for, by previous arrangement, the gunners, lengthening their fuses, were "lifting" on to the village of Neuve Chappelle so as to leave the road open for our infantry to rush in and finish what the guns had begun.

The shells were now falling thick among the houses of Neuve Chapelle, a confused mass of buildings seen reddish through the pillars of smoke and flying earth and dust. At the sound of the whistle our men scrambled out of the trenches and hurried higgledy-piggledy into the open. Their officers were in front. Many, wearing overcoats and carrying rifles with fixed bayonets, closely resembled their men.

It was from the centre of our attacking line that the assault was pressed home soonest. The guns had done their work well. The trenches were blown to irrecognizable pits dotted with dead. The barbed wire had been cut like so much twine. The Lincolns and the Berkshires were off the mark first, with orders to swerve to right and left respectively as soon as they had captured the first line of trenches, in order to let the Royal Irish Rifles and the Rifle Brigade through to the village. The Germans left alive in the trenches, half demented with fright, surrounded by a welter of dead and dying men, mostly surrendered. The Berkshires were opposed with the utmost gallantry by two German officers who had remained alone in a trench serving a machine gun.

Fierce Bayonet Fighting

But the lads from Berkshire made their way into that trench and bayoneted the Germans where they stood, fighting to the last. The Lincolns, against desperate resistance, eventually occupied their section of the trench and then waited for the Irishmen and the Rifle Brigade to come and take the village ahead of them. Meanwhile the 2nd 39th Karhwalis on the right had taken their trenches with a rush and were away towards the village and the Bies Wood.

There was bloody work in the village of Neuve Chapelle. The capture of a place at the bayonet point is generally a grim business, in which instant unconditional surrender is the only means by which bloodshed, a deal of bloodshed, can be prevented. It was indeed a scene of desolation into which the Rifle Brigade—the first regiment to enter the village—raced headlong. Of the church only the bare shell remained, the interior lost to view beneath a gigantic mound of debris. The little churchyard was devastated, the very dead plucked from their graves, broken coffins and ancient bones scattered about amid the fresher dead, the slain of that morning grey green forms asprawl athwart the tombs. Of all that once fair village but two things remained intact two great crucifixes reared aloft, one in the churchyard, the other over against the chateau. From the Cross that is the emblem of our faith the figure of Christ, yet intact though all pitted with bullet marks, looked down in mute agony on the slaying in the village.

Mercy! I Am Married

Many strange incidents were observed. In one cellar a portly German was found dancing about in an agony of fear, screaming in a high-pitched voice in English: "Mercy, mercy! I am married!" "Your missus won't thank us for sending you home!" retorted one of the men who took him prisoner, and his life was spared. A Rifle Brigade subaltern, leaping over a sandbag into a German trench came upon two officers, hardly more than boys, their hands above their heads. The faces were ashen grey, they were trembling. One said gravely in good English: "Don't shoot! I am from London also." They, too were mercifully used.

Spare the Rubbing

Soak clothes overnight to loosen the dirt, and wring out into hot soapy water next morning. Instead of putting the washboard into the tub and rubbing the clothes up and down upon it, lay the board across the tub, and having soaped the piece to be washed scrub it with a nail brush or a small ordinary scrubbing brush. This is quicker, saves the hands, and the garments will last longer than when rubbed upon the board.

To Keep Young

Keep in the sunlight.

Don't be afraid. Fear is one of the greatest enemies we have.

Avoid excess of any kind. Don't overeat, eat the wrong thing, or eat in an irregular way.

Don't think on your birthday that you are a year older; you are only one day older than the day before.

Like a child, live simply, and keep clear of entanglements and complications of all kinds.

Cultivate contentment. Dissatisfaction brings age furrows prematurely to the face.

When you go to bed at night, make a habit of throwing off all the cares of the day. Just rest.

A Time-saving Hint

A handy holder for string is made with a tin funnel. Drill three holes close to the top, pass a piece of thin wire over the top to hang it up by, and through the centre hole draw the end of your ball of string.

FRENCH WAR VESSEL SUNK

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED MEMBERS OF CREW PERISHED.

PARIS, March 8.—The torpedo-destroyer Cassini, of the Mediterranean patrol service, was torpedoed by a submarine on Feb. 28. According to the official announcement the vessel sank in two minutes, the powder magazine having exploded, and the captain, six officers and 100 of the crew perished.

"BILLY" FEE IS REMEMBERED

CLUB BAG ON BIRTHDAY FROM RAILWAYMEN.

Last night a number of the G.T.R. boys spent a delightful evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fee, King St. West. It was the occasion of Mr. Fee's birthday, and on behalf of the fellows Mr. Ralph Clarke presented Mr. Fee with a beautiful club bag as a token of the appreciation in which he is held by the men of the road.

Mr. J. McMahon read an appropriate address, in which the recipient of the gift was fittingly eulogized. The ladies gave Mrs. Fee a handsome bouquet.

"Billy" responded in his own happy style, thanking those present for their gift and kind remarks.

Refreshments were served and the evening was spent at cards and dancing.—Lindsay Warder.

GIPSY SMITH GIVES TWO ADDRESSES AT OMEMEE

Ladies Defeat Young Men in Hockey Match.

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, March 7. — The Methodist Church was jammed to the doors on Sunday night when, according to announcement, the famous Gipsy Simon Smith preached. The large congregation listened with great interest as he preached in his simple yet eloquent style, his subject being "Conversion." Mr. Smith sang twice during the service. He possesses a sweet, clear tenor voice and his singing greatly pleased his hearers.

On Monday evening, in spite of the drifted condition of the roads, a full church greeted the Gipsy when he gave his lecture "From Gipsy Camp to Pulpit." Many humorous and many pathetic incidents were related during the evening. The boyhood home of Mr. Smith was Epping Forest, on the outskirts of London, England. It is of interest to note that their caravans are not makeshifts, such as the would-be Gipsies of this country use, the cheapest of them being valued at $500. One caravan built of mahogany with brass and copper fittings cost the tribe $1500. The real Gipsies have a language of their own, the Romany language. The Gipsies of this country do not speak any particular language, so that, according to Gipsy Smith, we have not met the real thing.

During the evening the choir rendered two numbers. Mr. Smith sang two solos, and also a duet with Mr. E. Bushnell, after which, by special request, he repeated a solo he had sung on Sunday night, "Don't Forget the Promise Made to Mother." The proceeds of the lecture amounted to fifty dollars.

Mr. Jas. Laidley, Swift Current, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Laidley. It's 13 years since Mr. Laidley has visited here, and consequently the changes in his old home town are many.

The return hockey match between the ladies and gentlemen was held last Thursday night. The boys again appeared in ladies' wearing apparel with one arm strapped down. The game resulted in another win for the girls, the score being 3-2.

Capt. Thorn of Kingston spent the week-end with his wife and family

Mrs. Mark of Lindsay is spending a few days with Miss Davidson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Bradley, Dunsford, visited friends in Omemee on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Hore, Little Britain, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Hore's father, Mr. T. J. McConnell.

Some of Lindsay's citizens claim to have seen robins nearly a month ago, but the first herald of spring for Omemee arrived on Monday when Miss Tom, milliner for T. A. MacPherson, returned to the village to start work on new creations for the spring and summer headgear.

Mrs. T. A. MacPherson is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Jack Coulter is visiting Bethany friends.

An Irish social will be held on March 16 in the basement of the Methodist church under the auspices of the adult Bible class. A feature of the evening will be a debate, Resolved, That Woman Should Follow the Fashions of 1917." Two gentlemen and two ladies will settle the question.

Mr. Leonard Sandy of Youngstown Ohio, accompanied by his mother and his sister, Mrs. Larson, Buffalo, visited at the home of Mr. Eli Williamson during the past week.

Miss Edna Bell of Peterborough is the guest of Mrs. R. J. Weir.

Mr. and Mrs. Fallis of Franklin are the guests of Mrs. Bradburn.

Mrs. Jones of Bethany is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Shield.

The 252nd Battalion held another recruiting meeting in Coronation Hall on Tuesday evening, March 6th when a number of new war slides were shown. Sergt. Allin sang several times during the evening. Lt Reid delivered a rousing recruiting speech. Pte. Hopkins presided at the piano. Local ministers spoke in behalf of the battalion. Lieut. Reid sang and recited, much to the enjoyment of the audience. His song "The Bully, Bully Sergeant," took the house by storm. We are pleased to say this battalion is going ahead rapidly due to the great courtesy of the recruiting officers.

Miss Pearl Rehill of Peterborough returned home Wednesday after a pleasant visit with Misses Parsons.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

MARCH IS HARD ON THE EYES

The sun's strength increases fast in March, and the glare from the melting snow is very hard on the eyes, especially if they are at all weak. Dr. Fowler fits the eyes with glasses that are the proper strength, and rendered opaque to keep the glare from the ice from injuring the eyesight. He will gladly explain their features.

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

594 CHAMPLAIN ST., MONTREAL.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen. A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". Women in Conventions

The Liberals of St. Catherines and Lincoln county are among the first in the Province to recognize the new position which women are taking in the public affairs of Ontario with extension to them of the franchise. An invitation has been given publicly to them as new electors to attend the Liberal convention.

PLACES AND POSITIONS FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Applications Should Be Made at Office of Patriotic Fund.

The breaking up of the winter will afford much more employment than during the winter. So the calls are coming in for men, and returned men have the preference, so long as they will try to make good.

Most, nearly all, men returned disabled with hurts or wounds received in service are placed, but those who return "medically unfit" and who have to get back into civil life will have to be placed.

There are openings for men having knowledge of carpenter work, tinsmiths and iron work. Men who will pay attention to instruction will be taken on and trained. Once trained there is the new trade available. Now is the chance to acquire something that will give an earning power for the balance of life, instead of laborer's work.

A painter is wanted at the Canadian Canoe Co. Four men wanted to sell goods on commissions. Though this latter ocupation does not promise very well to the man who needs a stated wage, try it if you like.

Apply at the Patriotic Fund office for all information.

New War Loan

Fourteen tons of application forms, literature, stereotyped advertisements, etc., in connection with the new domestic war loan are being sent out by the Finance Department to banks, post offices, financial houses, newspapers, etc., throughout Canada. The loan is to be placed on the market on Monday next.

Women Should Get This Habit As well as Men

Don't Eat Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Glass of Hot Water.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions, instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limstone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who pratice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside clealiness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

HORSE MARKET.

Toronto, May 7. — There was a fair trade done in Toronto horse markets last week, and with a continuance of the healthy demand for shipment to the West, there are indications that the Ontario trade has already got under way for the season. French government buying of artillery and transport horses continues at a normal rate. The greatest event of interest to the horsemen throughout the province is the annual sales of Clydes and Percherons which opens at the Toronto Union Yards Horse Exchange on March 13. A great many inquiries have already been received, according to Mr. W. Harland Smith, and the prospects are that all former sales will be eclipsed this year. There will be about 100 horses on sale, and many of these will be of extra choice quality.

At the Union Yards last week there was a shortage of horses, as more could have been sold if they were available. About 110 were sold, including some specially good horses. One pair weighing 1,500 lbs. each brought $425, one chestnut gelding of 1,500 lbs. brought $425, one pair of geldings $490. The average run of the horses weighed 1,300 to 1,500 lbs. and sold at $127.50 to $200. One load went to Calgary on Monday of this week, and two other loads went to Saskatchewan points. There promises to be a continuance of the Western trade for at least four more weeks. Western men are still in Toronto, and they are particularly desirous of taking good mares for farm purposes.

From the Repository two loads were shipped to the West, mostly in small lots, at prices ranging between $110 to $155. The Westerners are buying all over the province as well as in Toronto. The fact that this buying has been quite extensive is shown by a shipment of five cars from Mitchell one day last week, representing purchases in that district for the last few weeks.

SPRAINS AND FRACTURES

What Can be Done Until the Doctor Comes

A sprain is due to the stretching and tearing of the ligaments around a joint. It is usually accompanied by great pain and swelling. Hot water applications are the best to relieve the pain and to reduce the swelling. The joint should be kept absolutely at rest. A very good way to secure this is to strap the joint for some distance above and below, with adhesive plaster, layer upon layer. If there is a weak spot in the dressing it can be strengthened by an extra layer or two. Care should be taken that the strapping is not so tight as to interfere with the circulation. It is comparatively easy to determine this by noting whether the part below the strapping remains warm. If it does not, you may know the circulation has been seriously interfered with. Loosen the bandage sufficiently to allow the blood to move. Remember that a severe sprain often takes longer than a fracture to heal and at best is a difficult thing to treat satisfactorily.

Amazing Marches

In the matter of the rapid movement of great bodies of troops the record seems to be with Napoleon. In 1805 he crossed the Rhine on September 26th, was in Vienna on November 13th, and on December 2nd crushed the united armies of Russia and Austria at Austerlitz. Almost incredibly swift was Napoleon's swoop on Prussia in the following year, when, crossing the Saale on October 9th, he defeated Hohenlohe's army at Jena on the 14th, and was in Berlin on the 25th, with all Prussia at his feet. Three years later he broke even these records by returning from France to Spain on April 17th, rushing to the Austrian frontier, defeating the enemy five times in as many days, and entering Vienna on May 13th.

Prisoners of War

The Czar approved the decision of the Cabinet regarding the employment of prisoners of war at work in the fields. The Imperial ukase authorises the Zemstovs to engage principally prisoners not of German or Magyar origin, paying them such wages as they shall think fit, and retaining the cost of their food and maintenance.

Coal For Britain's Fleet

In order that the fleet may be instantly coaled at any port in Great Britain, a huge number of railway trucks—the total runs well over six figures—are kept constantly loaded on sidings ready to be taken to any particular port, and thence transferred to the ship of war.

A Successful Organizer.

Mr. S. A. Armstrong, who for many years has been Assistant Provincial Secretary in charge of the hospitals and prisons of Ontario, has been transferred to Ottawa to become Director of the Military Hospitals Commission of Canada. Under Hon. W. J. Hanna Mr. Armstrong has had in hand the important work of prison reform in Ontario along with the reorganization of the hospitals for the insane, and was instrumental in the development of the large industries connected with the reformatory at Guelph, which with the adjoining farm has enabled the Province to carry on a work of prison reform that has made Ontario a name to be conjured with the world over. In becoming Director of Military Hospitals Mr. Armstrong will bring to bear upon this important branch of Canada's war organization the experience that has been so successful in Ontario. Not only will the efficiency of hospital management be increased, but the benefits of the most approved methods of treatment will be available for the soldiers who return to Canada.

Sugar Kings' Three Straights

LAST GAME WAS WON ON THE FINAL FRAME.

Last night the Sugar Kings took three straight from the King Pins. The last game was won on the last frame by the Sugar Kings by a small margin of five pins. Fitzpatrick had the high count for the Sugar Kings with 529 and Solomon for the King Pins with 569. Outram and Dorensen also topped the 500 mark.

Tomorrow night De Laval will meet C.G.E. and a good game is expected.

The scores:—

PUCKERINGS

Jerry Laflamme's Dentals cleaned up the senior O.H.A. championship at Toronto last night, winning the round by three goals. The win is a popular one down this way.

Bob Armstrong serves the bouquets. George Evans is also entitled to the plaudits of the throng. The local lad has played an effective game this season and could always be relied upon to produce in the pinch. He worked himself almost to the point of collapse at Hamilton.

Kitchener will have to go some and then some more to stop the Hams on their championship grind. The Westerners will face a big task on the soft ice.

BOUQUETS FOR ARMSTRONG

George C. Dawson, of Sarnia, a member of the O. H. A. committee, was a spectator at last night's game. He is making the rounds of the towns where the championships are being decided.

During a conversation after the game he voiced the opinion that Bobby Armstrong, the Peterborough centre player, who was unable, owing to injuries, to play here last Friday night, is the best player in the O. H. A.

"He is fast, has a wicked shot, and everything else that goes to make a real star. He is not quite as speedy as Box, of the Dentals, but I regard him as the best boy in the O. H. A.," said Mr Dawson.

There is no better posted hockey man in the province, so there must be something in what the Sarnia official says.—Hamilton Herald.

Curlers Behind in Games at Toronto

In the first of the home-and-home games for the Capon-Waddell trophy at Toronto yesterday the Peterborough rinks were defeated by the Toronto curlers by a total score of 63 to 41.

J. W. McDermid was five up, W. G. Morrow twenty-six down, R. M. Waddell one up, G. H. Giroux two up, and R. Hicks tied his opponent.

THREE NEW MODELS.

Something Different From the Ubiquitous Blue Serge.

There are three frocks that the woman tired of dark blue will be interested in hearing about. First, the skirts are several inches longer than last season's frocks, and there is a noticeable fullness in the long sleeves, and in each one of the three there is the ubiquitous touch of fur. One, of mustard colored broadcloth, had a perfectly plain bodice, finished at the neck with a wide standoffish kind of collar trimmed with skunk tails in front in lieu of a cravat. At the natural waist line there was found a delicious shade of blue satin, quilted, and from the back came a narrow belt of the cloth, which ties very low in the front. The ends of the belt were finished with an attractive ornament. Pockets on either side were also trimmed with the skunk fur. Until the weather becomes very cold a dress of this description can be worn without an extra wrap, but effective accessories are a muff of skunk fur and a bag trimmed with the same peltry.

Of bottle green panne velvet and gray chinchilla fur was the second frock, that looked for all the world like a smart coat suit. In this frock the bodice was also very plain, buttoning down the front with four rather large buttons. Two narrow belts hugged the waist closely in the front, but were interrupted in front of the hips with peplums of the velvet bead trimmed in a small pattern. The peplum reached halfway to the knees and was edged with the chinchilla. A deep turnover collar of the fur and narrow cuffs formed the only other trimming on this smart coat dress.

The third frock of this trio was fashioned of chestnut colored broadcloth.

The bodice of this frock was also very plain. The only thing to break the plainness was a narrow band of embroidery that extended below the waist line at least six inches. The wide standoffish collar was formed of fur, as were the cuffs. A wide crushed girdle of the broadcloth fastened at the side with an oval buckle. The skirts of all three were very simple, merely hemmed, with the exception of the bottle green panne velvet, which had peeping below the very edge of the skirt a narrow fringe of exactly the same color.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

(By the "Y." Scribe.)

Mr. F. S. Shepard, of the National Council, was a visitor in the city on Tuesday, en route to Campbellford where the overseas work of the Y.M.C.A. will be presented in the churches next Sunday. Mr. F. D. Kerr will address two of these meetings in our neighboring village.

◆ ◆ ◆

The meeting in the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon will be devoted to music. Several new hymns will be tried out, and special patriotic selections will be rendered on a phonograph.

◆ ◆ ◆

Joseph Wearing, Esq., will address the senior Collegiate Club Friday on "The Law as a Profession." Every member of this club should be present.

◆ ◆ ◆

Several vacant lots have been listed with the Association up to date and the leaders are now looking for a piece of land of from five to ten acres, which can be plotted out in connection with the effort. A field near the river or canal is most desired, so any owner of such piece who would give the free use of the same, or allow it to be used for the taxes or a moderate rental, is invited to communicate with the Y.M.C.A. this week.

◆ ◆ ◆

Three [illegible] of five dollars each one of ten and one of fifteen dollars are needed to obtain the best results in the garden plot contest, so friends who will set up these prizes are requested to communicate with the Y. M. C. A. officers in the near future.

An Impertinent Advertisement.

When many are endowing advertising with the attributes of the arts and sciences it comes as a shock to find a regalia company in an American city making merry, in a Canadian circular, over the fact that Canada is at war and the United States is not. The circular is sent to heads of fraternal societies in the Dominion, and it declares in jingle that the coin is easier than the sword. "But war don't worry us a bit, no chance—for we are out of it." In this kind of banter the jingle runs on, filling Canadians with wonder at the impertinent stupidity of the man who hopes thus to sell regalia in Canada. People must wonder what is wrong with the mind of that man in the United States who hopes to sell regalia by bantering and ridiculing Canadians for being at war, while chuckling with delight over the recalcitrance of his own country. If this is the new advertising, the old will be found more effective.—The Globe.

RUTH LAW FLIES 590 MILES WITHOUT STOPPING

Travelled Without a Hitch from Chicago to New York

Ruth Law—when she is not flying she is Mrs. William Oliver—weighs 125 pounds and is five feet five inches high. "I don't think I grew or I lost any weight on my trip. These were the figures when I left Chicago," she said after her amazing flight. The twenty-eight-year-old woman who flew 590 miles, from Chicago to Hornell, N. Y., just because she made up her mind she would and who asked for a powder puff when she was unstrapped from the seat of her biplane at Governors Island, wore her new laurels as carelessly and as becomingly as she wore the gray Shetland cap which topped her fluffy wind blown yellow hair. She was found behind a screen in an out of the way corner of a New York hotel dodging congratulations, telephone calls, invitations to star in the movies or go into vaudeville. She had just returned from a shopping trip, in which she had bought a very becoming white satin waist.

MISS RUTH LAW.

"That," she explained of her opal ring, "was my talisman on the trip from Chicago to the statue of Liberty. It came out of a ring my husband gave me the day we were married. After it was broken I made up my mind to carry it in my pocketbook just for luck. They say I've broken three records, but this trip makes four, for I've smashed the opal's reputation for bringing bad fortune."

A sister of Rodman Law, famed as the "human fly" and parachute jumper, Miss Law, whose full name is Ruth Bancroft Law, was born on March 21, 1887, in Lynn, Mass. She received her pilot's certificate on Nov. 20, 1912, four years ago, taking her tests with a Wright biplane. Since that time she has made thousands of exhibition and passenger carrying flights.

She broke the altitude record for women on May 27 of this year. In company with several other aviators she appeared at the military tournament at Sheepshead bay. They all competed in the altitude contest, and Miss Law set the high mark for women by flying 11,200 feet.

For Sister.

Smart motor scarfs are knitted in gay silk of one color or a color with white. They are made a yard and a half long, twenty inches wide, with a deep fringe on the ends. Knitted turbans are smart, of silk, Angora or ordinary wool.

The monogram, two inches long and a half inch wide, with the letter of the surname an inch long in the middle and the other two initials three-quarters of an inch long linked in the top and bottom in outline effect, is very new. This is usually printed at the upper left hand corner of a kerchief.

Three initials in Gothic or Old English lettering are always in good style and less subject to the caprice of fashion.

Christmas Shopping List.

Furs, opera glasses, party bag, feather boa, evening slippers, stationery, subscriptions to magazines, odd pieces of furniture, like chairs, table, bookshelf for her room, fancy or sewing outfits, outfittings for her favorite sports or hobby, as drawing or music, may relieve the young man's suspense week before Christmas.

Buy handkerchiefs this year. Buy them because several who know say that war has made the linen supply meager.

Relieved.

"Where did you get these examples of faultily constructed sentences?" asked Dr. Campbell, the great rhetorician, of a student.

"Out of one of your books, doctor."

"What! Out of one of my books?"

"Yes, sir; out of your 'Rhetoric.'"

"Out of my 'Rhetoric'!" roared the doctor. "Impossible! Never did I make use of such language. You are mistaken, badly mistaken. But—but—where in my 'Rhetoric' did you find such composition?" he demanded angrily.

"In the part 'Sentences to Be Corrected.'"

"O-h-h-h! A-h-h-h! Yes, yes," said the relieved doctor.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

EARLE—WOOD

A very quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, Feb. 28, at the residence of the bride's parents, Springville, when Miss Alma Emmeretta, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Wood, was married to James Richard Earle, of Ida. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Clark, of Cavanville Methodist Church. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of white silk crepe-de-chene, with lace trimming. Miss Wood, sister of the bride, who was bridesmaid, was dressed in flowered crepe. Mr. Russell Earle supported the groom. Miss Queenie Matchett, of Peterborough, played the wedding march, and during the signing of the register Miss Mary Southem, of Springville, sang several well selected solos.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wood, Otonabee; Mr. G. Ivey and daughter, Campbellford; Miss May Ivey, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Springville; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Earle, Ida.

The costly and beautiful presents received show the esteem in which the young couple are held. One of the gifts was a handsome marble clock, a token of appreciation from the Sunday School in which the bride has been organist for some time. The happy couple left on the evening train for a tour through Niagara, St. Catharines, Hamilton and Toronto, bearing with them the best wishes of a host of friends.

CARVETH—IVEY.

A quiet wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage, Regina, Wednesday, February 26th, when Miss Elva E. Ivey, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Ivey, Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr Melvin G. Carveth, of Claydon, Sask

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Rothwell of Regina.

Mr. and Mrs. Carveth will reside in Claydon, Sask.

The many friends of Miss Lillian Calder are congratulating her upon passing the Senior Rudiments examination with honors at the Toronto College of Music. Miss Calder is a pupil of Miss Olive Johnston of the local Conservatory staff.

Mrs. H. J. Tennant, who has been appointed director of the womens department of National Service in Gt. Britain, is the second wife of Right Hon. Harold John Tennant, former under-secretary for war, and secretary for Scotland. He is a brother of Lord Glenconner. Mrs. Tennant, who was known before her marriage (in 1896) as Miss Edith Abraham, is a daughter of Mr. George Whitley Abraham, of Rathgar, o. Dublin. She was formerly a government superintendent inspector of factories. Mr. and Mrs. Tennant have four sons and one daughter. The eldest son, Henry, is a lieutenant in the Dragoons.

Mr. Edwin Schimpf, a prominent Christian Scientist of Uniontown, Pa., is in the city. He spoke last night at the regular weekly meeting of the local society.

Miss Agnes Graham, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. J Armstrong, Margaret Ave., returned to her home in Melborn, Man., this morning.

Mrs. D. Johnston, Miss Johnston and Master Albert Johnston of Campbellford, are visting in the city before leaving for Winnipeg to reside.

Mrs. R. N. Jones and other members of Golden Link Rebekah Lodge I.O.O.F., were in Millbrook this week, assisting in the organization for a local circle. The Millbrook Reporter says: Mrs Jones and staff of the Golden Link Rebekah Lodge, Peterborough, handled the ritualistic work in a very creditable manner.

Mrs. A. J. Bolwell and little son Bruce, of Hunter street east, left today for a visit with her cousin, Mrs. L. Corrin, Oshawa.

Miss Dorothy Allan has been engaged by the choir of Knox Presbyterian Church, Owen Sound, as one of the artists to sing at their annual concert on the 15th of this month Miss Allan, along with Miss Jessie Alexander and Mr. Ruthven Macdonald, will provide the entire program

Mr. John Allan has been engaged as organist and accompanist for the performance of Gaul's "Holy City' to be given by the Simcoe Street Methodist choir, Oshawa, on the 3rd March.

Rev. John Galt is conducting special services near Brighton. S. S Bates, D.D., of McMaster University, will preach on Sunday evening, 18th March, at Gilmour Memorial Church the subject being "German Education and the Present War."

A very pleasant day was spent at Mrs. Kerr's, "Maple Grove," Cavan, on March 1st, when the family and grandchildren gathered together and partook of a fowl dinner. The evening was spent in music and games

MILK PRODUCTS STOCK ON SALE

CITIZENS AND FARMERS INVEST READILY IN THE NEW CONCERN.

Secretary J. A. Morden and Mr. G. A. Bull of Brampton are in the city offering for sale stock in the Peterborough Milk Products, Ltd., the new local company which has just been organized, and of which G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., is president. The gentlemen are meeting with encouraging success both in the city and among the farmers The authorized capital of the company is $250,000 and it is divided into 10,000 shares of $25 each, so as to give those of limited means a chance to invest. The stock is being taken up rapidly.

Object to German

The night shift at the Canadian Buffalo Forge Company's plant at Kitchener refused to start work owing to a former inspector being placed in charge of the men. The men allege that the inspector is a German.

A WILY AMBASSADOR

GERMAN OFFICIAL BOASTS HE OUTWITTED BRITISH AND JAPANESE.

The China Press, a Shanghai newspaper printed in English, tells the story of the new German Ambassador to China, Rear-Admiral von Hintze. At the outbreak of the war Von Hintze was Minister to Mexico. He was anxious to get back to Germany, and requested the Kaiser, who is a personal friend, to put him on active service in the navy. The difficulty was to get through the cordon which everywhere surrounded Germany and the Germans. He crossed into the United States from Mexico without much trouble. He shipped across the Atlantic in an English vessel, his English accent passing him without suspicion, although Germans and Austrians in the States to the number of some 300,000 were unable to do so In England his accent also carried him through.

The difficulty was to find an excuse to give to shipping clerks for wanting to go to Rotterdam. He got there, though how he refuses to state. It is surmised he went as a stoker. Once in Holland be stepped across the border into Germany and was safe. He found the Kaiser at Mainz and told him his adventures. The Emperor laughed and said:

"Well, if you can do it once, you can do it again, so I will send you to China."

Von Hintze wanted to serve in the fleet, but this was the order appointing him Minister to China. He accordingly returned to England, crossed again to the United States, booking by the steamship line which had taken him over in the first place.

In California he was suspected, and after be had taken passage for China some American newspapers printed a story that a noted German secret service agent had sailed for the Orient. His vessel, though routed direct, disappointed him in that it put into Japan for coal. Being a naval officer he was fair game, and could be made a prisoner of war.

The ship was searched by leading Japanese secret service officers, but no person resembling the admiral was found. A Dr. von Scharf was arrested in Japan on suspicion of being Von Hintze, but the description didn't fit and he was released. The cargo of the ship was searched, even to the coal bunkers, where Jap officers poked long iron bars through the coal to detect possible hiding places. How Von Hintze evaded the searchers is not told. His arrival in Pekin created such interest that a large Japanese delegation came to the train to see what manner of man it was that had eluded the secret services of both Great Britain and Japan.

Von Hintze was naval attache to Russia, and speaks Russian like a native, as well as English and French.

CAPTAIN LAUDER KILLED

Was the Only Child of Mr. Harry Lauder

The innumerable friends of Mr. Harry Lauder sympathised with him in the loss of his only child, Captain J. C. Lauder, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who was killed in action. Although only 24 years of age, he had won his captaincy after good service in the field, where he had previously been wounded three times. He had only been back at the front for a brief period after recovering from his third wound.

Captain Lauder was intended for the Bar and was educated at Jesus College, Cambridge, where he took a B.A. degree. When war began he was in Australia with his father and took the first available boat home. He joined the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, and did some months' training at Bedford, where he was visited by his father, who won the hearts of the men by singing to them.

The news of his death reached his father in a telegram from Scotland which contained only the words, "John killed." Mr. Lauder was badly shaken by the news. In his son all his hopes for the future were centred, and it was for him that he bought an estate in Scotland. His son's fiancee stayed with him throughout the day. The Shaftesbury Theatre, where Mr. Lauder was appearing as leading comedian in the revue "Three Cheers," was closed for a day.

Women Admitted to Primary

The first Southern State has been added to the suffrage ranks. That State is Arkansas, and it has discovered a new kind of suffrage for its women, the right to vote in all primary elections. Such a measure, passed in a State where one party is constantly in power, and where a nomination is as forceful as an election, is considered as practically equivalent to the extension of full suffrage to women.

WILLYS-KNIGHT COUPE USED FOR NAVAL RECRUITING IN TORONTO

A unique feature of the recruiting campaign now being conducted in Province of Ontario is the Willys-Knight Coupe used by Commodore Aemelius Jarvis of Toronto.

This coupe was purchased by Commodore Jarvis from the Willys-Overland, Ltd., of West Toronto, a short time ago. Since then Commodore Jarvis has been able to cover more ground and with more effect than by depending on railways to go from one point to another throughout Ontario.

"Recruiting with a Willys-Knight Coupe," says Commodore Jarvis, "is far different from the recruiting service of yesterday.

"We go from place to place with dispatch. We can spend as much time as is required en route without thinking of railway connections. It was no fun to make an address and then jump up at 4 a.m. to catch a train for the next place. When we would reach it we would be more tired and fatigued by the hot, stuffy trains.

"In the first place, it is a comfortable vehicle. Our experience has shown us the fallacy of the belief that a coupe is not fit to stand the grind of a long journey. Recently we have plowed through drifts, sending the snow clear over the roof. We have found the coupe far more satisfactory for our purpose than a touring car

"Then the Knight motor is a revelation. We have now a better running engine than when we first received the car. After the first thousand miles the car ran smoother than when new; it now runs far better than it did at a thousand miles."

FRENCH WON BRILLIANT SUCCESS

LABOR RAISES ITS VOICE IN SUGGESTIONS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF CITY

Workmen Say Police Force Should be Reduced.

Mayor Duffus' banquet to the workingmen of the city last night was successful in every way and the chief magistrate went to bed satisfied that the "men behind the guns" were ready to do all in their power to boost the city along. The suggestions by the different speakers were good ones and amply demonstrated the close touch that the members of the Trades and Labor Council keep with things civic.

Everyone agreed that the idea of the Mayor in holding the three gatherings representing the different elements of the citizins was novel as well as a step in the right direction and, as was the case at the other gatherings, a current of feeling that it should not be the last was noticeable. It provided the spirit of unity and co-operation which was necessary in order that the progress of the city could be sustained and when the reconstruction period at the close of the war started, Peterborough would be in line bigger and healthier than ever.

After partaking of the splendid lunch prepared by mine host Tom Hooper, Mayor Duffus opened the discussion by proposing a toast to the King, to which all responded heartily. His Worship then gave a short outline of the growth of the city since he entered the municipal arena. He gave praise to the past mayors and aldermen and reiterated his remarks regarding careful management of the city's finances. The causes which led up to the present tax rate were carefully explained as well as the debenture indebtedness of the city.

Mayor Duffus pointed out how the members of the Trades and Labor Council and the workingmen could unite for Peterborough's benefit. The suggestion was made to encourage conventions and excursions as a means of keeping Peterborough to the fore. The efforts made to keep the Quaker Oats Co. here, the owning and development of the street railway, and the necessity for Government owned railways were favorite topics to the men present last evening.

President Hartley

J. J. Hartley, president of the Trades and Labor Council, started the ball rolling at the Mayor's request. On behalf of the workingmen of the city he thanked Mayor Duffus for extending an invitation to discuss municipal affairs with the idea of bringing out suggestions for improvement. The Trades and Labor Council were thought by some to be nothing but a body of fault-finders. This was not the case. The members were intelligent men who met together for the benefit of the masses. All interests were considered and their motto was "Fair play and a right chance."

In municipal affairs the Trades and Labor Council were greatly interested. Everyone wanted to see the city prosper and in order to get this going it was very necessary that the capitalists, the manufacturer, the merchants and the workingmen

SILENT WORK OF POLICE FORCE

Police Chief Thompson appreciates the expressions of opinion at the Mayor's banquet last night in regard to a reduction in the police force, but he has this to say of the department's activities. The police force does a work that is not purely local, as in the case of, say, the fire department, whose activities are confined to the limits of the city. The police force, in order to get the best results, must co-operate with outside departments and assist in the detection of crime and the apprehension of wrong-doers, so that should the Peterborough department require the assistance of authorities in this province, in the Dominion, or as is often the case, in the United States, to get information or to make an arrest action is promptly taken on request. The same thing applies on a request to the local department from an outside source, all of which works out for mutual success.

The Police Chief had a big bundle of communications before him this morning. He has queries from provincial and Dominion and from United States points and several from England. The police force today is down to nine men, due to two of the members being ill.

BATTLE-SCARRED HEROES RETURN TO THEIR HOMES

Pte. Glendenning Had Part in Somme Fighting.

Peterborough soldiers with battle scars arrived in the city this morning from Kingston. Several of the heroes were greeted by relatives and friends, while others could not have received a cooler reception had they stepped from a train in a city of the Huns. The reception committee had not been informed from Kingston that the men would reach the city this morning.

Corp. George Lightheart, Rink St. and Pte. Bruce Clarke, Rogers St., Ashburnham, were two of the fortunate soldiers, as members of their families were at the station. Both soldiers were wounded in the fighting of last summer and have since been in hospital. They will not be able to resume overseas service.

Another returned man was Pte. Walter D. Harkness, a member of the 93rd band, whose home is in Millbrook.

A fourth returned soldier is Pte. J. Glendenning of the 21st Batt., who was wounded in the fighting on the Somme River. He is visiting at the home of Mrs. A. Webb, 555 Sherbrooke Street. Pte. Glendinning lived in Peterborough prior to enlisting at Montreal.

Pte. Frederick Barnes, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion has been promoted to sergeant drummer.

Mr. John Jones, of 216 Park St. has received a letter from his son Charley, who has been for some time in a Berkshire county hospital in England, suffering from wounds received in active service. The letter says:

Dear Father: Just a line or so. I am still here. I met Leo Tobin here the other day when he came here. This hospital is for convalescents. I don't think he was wounded, but is sick. You may not remember him but there are four brothers of them here from Ashburnham.

Jack McFadden is here yet, but I think they will send him back to Canada, for he won't be able to do any fighting for some time to come.

I don't know yet what they will do with me, but I guess they will send me back to the front as soon as I can make it again.

I hear that some of the officers have gone back to Canada. If they came over here to fight, why did they go back to Canada? I didn't know there was war started in Canada. You can put that in the paper if you like. I do not know why they send men like them back when they need men in France. I suppose you will see them and hear them talking about fighting.

PTE. BRUCE CLARKE
Who has returned to his home at 633 Rogers Street, with the scars of wounds received while fighting in France.

CHARLEY JONES.

Now that the 200 mark is passed the officers are looking for another goal to reach. This morning John Millon of Montreal signed up.

Ptes. A. B. Frank, L. S. Bristow, D. McLeod and C. G. Pilkey have all been promoted to lance-corporals.

Major Campbell, chief recruiting officer, and Lt. Freeman, of Kingston were in the city last night and had a conference with the officers at the Armories.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman is in Toronto today on official business.

It is published for the information of those concerned, that any moulders among the returned soldiers can obtain information regarding employment by communicating with the Assistant Adjutant-General, Military District No. 3, Kingston.

PEACE WILL PUT END TO KAISER; HE'S VERY ILL

EXCITEMENT KEEPS EMPEROR ALIVE, WRITER SAYS.

WAR NEARING END.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 8.— A despatch from Savanna to the Herald says a prominent Spaniard there has received a letter from his uncle in Madrid who has just returned from a trip to Germany, where he talked with Emperor William. The letter says the Kaiser is in wretched health and is kept going only by most powerful stimulants. Physicians are administering morphine in large doses as the only means of affording him rest and sleep. Excitement keeps him alive. "I am confident the war is nearing the end and that the Emperor will not live six months after peace is declared," says the writer, who is the head of one of the most illustrious families in Spain.

BODY OF THIRD MATE IS FOUND

TORONTO MAN SERVED ON FURNESS LINE STEAMER.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 9.— The Furness Line steamer Rappahannock, which left Halifax last November with a big cargo of apples for England and was never heard of again except through a German report that she had been torpedoed. Word has now been received here that the body of her third officer, Edward Seymour Gage, was picked up on the shore at Ilfracombe, England, on Jan. 8. Gage was formerly mate with a master's certificate on the steamer Garden City, running between Toronto and Port Dalhousie. A brother went down on the cruiser Good Hope in the South Pacific and another is in France with the Canadian Engineers.

$1,000,000 FIRE LOSS

Elevator With 300,000 Bushels of Wheat Destroyed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

DETROIT, March 9.— A million dollars' loss resulted from a fire at noon today which destroyed Detroit Railway Company's elevator containing 300,000 bushels of wheat, and adjacent property. The cause is believed to have been spontaneous combustion.

Mary Pickford is Sued for $103,750

NEW YORK, March 9 — Mary Pickford was the defendant in a Supreme Court action filed yesterday which was likely to make her fee more than ever in touch with the woes of her current character, "The Poor Little Rich Girl." "Little Mary," whose receipts from screen productions put her in the royal class as regards income, was legally requested to hand over $103,750 to Mrs. Cora C. Wilkening, agent for authors and actors.

Mrs. Wilkening wants just about ten weeks of the little star's salary because as set forth in her complaint for the past three years she was employed by Miss Pickford as general manager and personal representative. She declares she was retained on a commission basis.

"There is no basis for Mrs. Wilkenin's demands," was the statement made by the attorneys for the actress. "She was never Miss Pickford's official representative. She would have liked to be her agent, and last year tried to negotiate a contract for our client. But all Miss Pickford's contracts, when she was with the Famous Players Company, were made through us with Mr. Adolph Zukor, the company's president."

Mrs. Wilkening also sued Lady de Bathe (Lily Langtry) for $2500 for professional services.

GERMAN NAVAL OFFICER HELD

WANTED IN CONNECTION WITH PLOT TO DESTROY WELLAND CANAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—Capt. Fritzen, said to be a German naval officer, was arrested at Hartwood, near here, late last night, by a special agent of the Department of Justice, and held on suspicion of felony. The authorities said he was wanted in connection with the alleged plot to destroy the Welland Canal.

BROKE LINES OF THE ITALIANS

BUT AUSTRIANS FAILED TO HOLD GAIN.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, March 9 — Bad weather caused yesterday's artillery activities to be limited, says today's war office statement. There were some minor engagements favorable to the Italians. On the Carso, an enemy detachment penerated the Italain lines west of Castagnavidza but was immediately repulsed.

Infammation Cause of Zeppelin's Death

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9.— A Reuter despatch from Berlin says Count Zeppelin underwent an intestinal operation to relieve a complicated case of dysentery and was recovering when mumps and inflammation of the lungs interveped, and caused his death.

INTEREST THE SCHOOL PUPILS IN GARDENING

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN WILL SUPPORT THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The Local Council of Women will work with the National Council in bringing before the Provincial Government the question of the care of the feeble-minded, with the object of having remedial legislation passed.

The Local Council also will extend its support to the Board of Education in the matter of interesting the pupils of the schools in the question of back yard gardens and to make use of the vacant lots to increase production. Mrs. R. H. Parsons is convenor of the committee appointed.

There were two important matters dealt with by the Local Council at their regular meeting in the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon. Miss Hatton gave a carefully prepared address on the subject of the Care of the Feeble-minded.

The following letter received by Mrs. (Dr.) Neal, President of the Local Council, was read to the meeting:

Dear Madam,—There seems to be a general feeling abroad among women that there is need for conference and mutual advice as to our new rights and duties. It seems right that the National Council of Women through its local councils and affiliated societies, should endeavor to meet this need, and therefore at the request of Mrs. Torrington, president of the National Council of Women, I am calling an informal conference on Tuesday next, March 13th, at 3 p.m at St. James' Cathedral parish house 65 Church street, Toronto (Church or Harbord Car), to which you and any of your officers or members of your affiliated societies are cordially invited. I know the difficulties of travel and how busy everyone is, but we don't want this invitation to be confined to Toronto women, and if you are not able to come or send representatives, we should like to have a letter from you giving your ideas as to the best use to which women can put their votes, and what our attitude should be with regard to existing political parties.

Please see that your council is represented either by a member or by such a letter as I have asked for.

Yours sincerely,
A. M. PLUMPTRE,
Vice-Pres. for Ontario

ICE ON TRACKS HALTS TRAFFIC

G.T.R. TRAIN FROM TORONTO WAS HELD UP AT UXBRIDGE.

The 11:40 G.T.R. passenger train from Toronto was more than three hours late in reaching the city today due to ice on the tracks at Uxbridge. The water flooded the rails and froze when the mercury dropped this morning.

It is reported cars of a passenger train from Midland to Blackwater were derailed this morning owing to ice on the track.

Attack by French Was a Brilliant Success.

COUNTERS FAIL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 9. — (Official Statement.)—Supplemental information has been received showing the attack made yesterday by our troops between Butte de Mesnil and Maisons de Champagne was a brilliant success. Notwithstanding the snow which rendered operations difficult, our troops blew up enemy positions on a front of 1,500 metres, varying in depth from 600 to 800 metres. Late in the day the Germans delivered a violent counter offensive on the left of this sector. After a furious contest with hand grenades we repulsed the enemy, who suffered heavy losses. We took 136 prisoners, including three officers. Attacks by the enemy on one of our trenches at Avercourt wood, on the left bank of the Meuse, were repulsed.

Elsewhere there was intermittent cannonading.

The earlier report said: In the Champagne region the French have re-won from the Germans a salient captured on Feb. 15 between Butte de Mesnil and Maisons de Champagne taking more than one hundred prisoners.

BERLIN REPORT.

BERLIN, March 9. — A headquarters statement says the French succeeded in entering Height 185 and at Maisons de Champagne. They were repulsed from the latter place and counter-attacks recovered for the Germans trench sections on dominating Height 185. French attacks against German lines on Hill 304, on the left bank of the Meuse, failed. Germans captured six prisoners and two machine guns in Avercourt wood.

In the Somme sector there were repeated clashes with the British.

On the Eastern front between Trouts and Usual valleys Germans stormed a height and took a strong Russian position with 600 prisoners.

Yarrowdale's Crew Have Left Germany

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9. — A Berlin despatch to Reuter says the American, Spanish and Brazilian prisoners on the British steamer Yarrowdale, hitherto interned at Brendenberg, left Germany on Wednesday, going to Switzerland.

Sighted Raider

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 9.— Captain Nicoll of the American steamship Surnga, which arrived today, reports having sighted on Feb. 20 what he took for a German commerce raider, north of Azores, on the lane travelled by the New York-Mediterranean trade.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1917

LABOR FEASTS AND REASONS.

THE THIRD BANQUET tendered by Mayor Duffus last night, when the leaders of the local labor movement were his guests, revealed the fact that the workingmen of the city are just as skilled in oratory, just as well posted in municipal matters, just as ready with practical suggestions in regard to civic management, as any class in the community. Criticism was diverted from the aldermen and other civic officials by A. J. Bolwell, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Council, who, as a printer, was naturally interested in the line of industry which most concerns his welfare. He believes that the merchants of the city do not extend to the newspapers the support to which they are entitled. Goods are not advertised as they should be for the benefit of the purchasers, and the result is that a large business with the mail order houses in Toronto is carried on by the local residents. Job printing is sent out of the city, and some classes of dealers have entered into an agreement that none of them shall advertise. If one showed any enterprise along these lines, the rest, as a matter of self-protection, would be obliged to adopt the same course. The local papers from time to time publish appeals to the residents to patronize home industry, but this does not seem to move the merchants for whose benefit the appeals are framed.

Mr Bolwell is right. There is, unfortunately, too much money sent out of Peterborough to the mail order houses, money that is lost to this city forever. The merchants have no one but themselves to blame. They could save the cash diverted to Toronto now, if they advertised on anything like the scale adopted by the outside firms. The public spirit of the local press is not to be questioned. No newspaper in the city can be induced to carry the advertisement of a mail order house on any terms If they did, the newspapers would probably be made the victims of a boycott carried on by the home merchants. The advertisements of the outside firms, however, do reach the citizens in the columns of the Toronto papers and in the form of catalogues, so that the sacrifices made by the local press really fails of its purpose.

The interests of the city merchants and the newspapers is identical. There should be co-operation between them. The merchant who sends an order for job printing to Toronto because he may get the work done at a slightly lower figure, should remember that the same argument is used by the citizen who patronizes a mail order house. These concerns have built up their business largely by the unlimited use of newspaper advertising space, and the lesson should not be lost upon the local dealers.

In every proposition to advance the interests of Peterborough, the local papers seem to be left out of the calculations. This is probably due to the fact that their support is counted upon as a matter of course At the first banquet given by Mayor Duffus, a prominent citizen who holds a Federal position, suggested—and his suggestion seemed to meet with approval—that when the Trent Canal is finally opened for traffic, some leading magazines be paid to write up the proceedings, to publish cuts and advertise the Trent Valley, from one end of the American continent to the other. Of course, the news of Peterborough and Canada would do all of this just as fully as the magazines, as a purely business enterprise and without extra remuneration. The accounts published in the daily papers would have vastly more effect with the people, would be more widely read than the paid matter buried in the pages of a magazine.

But the members of the human family are just as prone as ever to put little store upon anything that comes to them without cost.

MUNICIPAL COAL YARDS.

SOME OF THE GUESTS at the banquet last night were in favor of municipal coal yards, apparently regarding that as the only true solution of the fuel problem

A municipal coal yard will avail little so long as the source of supply is controlled by private corporations, especially when these are located in a foreign country. It would not have relieved the local situation this year. The prestige of the city was employed to little purpose to increase the importation of coal. Private dealers have as much influence in such matters as any municipality, and even if the city did control the business it would be a question whether the fuel could be delivered at any lower rate than that charged by the merchant.

BIG MEN AND BIG ISSUES.

ALL THE SIGNS POINT to an election for the Dominion early in the coming summer. The present Government has outlived the term for which it was elected, and for the past year has held office by courtesy of the Opposition, who consented to an extension rather than risk another disastrous defeat by forcing an election. This arrangement cannot continue indefinitely The Liberals seem still wary of an election, but have given the other side to understand that they will consent to another extension of the life of the present Parliament only on condition that a coalition—or national—government be formed. To such an agreement the Administration has already indicated its unwillingness to become a party.

The very fact that the Liberals are shy of facing the people is all that is required to convince the country that Sir Wilfrid and his followers have no faith in their platform, that they lack a single hope of success. The Borden Government is safe on its war record alone. The Liberals, since the breaking out of hostilities, have done nothing to indicate that they are a party to be trusted with the control of the State's affairs ni a crisis like the present.

There will be big issues before the people in the next Federal election. The country has incurred enormous financial responsibilities on account of the war. Petty questions of race and creed have been buried out of sight by the momentous events that have transpired since August, 1914. The politician of small-bore dimensions has been lost in the shuffle, overshadowed by the statesmen of large attainments who have risen to the occasion. The nation has made heavy sacrifices in human life and treasure on behalf of all the citizens, not for the sole benefit of any party, race or language. Canadians at the coming election should meet their obligations as members of a brotherhood rather than as factions, one of which is striving to place the other at a disadvantage. Malice and hate should be replaced by sentiments of unbounded loyalty to the Empire. The candidate with the spiel on creed or who is loaded with jingoistic oratory, will find that for some reason or other the old tricks of a campaign are worthless.

STATE-OWNED RAILWAYS.

MAYOR DUFFUS showed last night how three lines of railway along the lake front are a detriment rather than a blessing to business, as the Railway Board had to sanction an increase of rates in order to save the roads from financial ruin. The freight tariff is higher now than it was when there was only one road. The Mayor sees nothing for it but the nationalization of these utilities.

Can the State make these railroads pay when the private companies have failed to do so? The State, unfortunately, has yet to prove the superiority of its business accomplishments over those of corporations in the management of transportation lines. There is hardly a doubt but that the Canadian Government will soon be called upon to take over at least two lines of railway. It will be a matter of Hobson's choice. A private citizen may be compelled to assume the ownership of property he would rather be without simply because the man whom he financed has defaulted in his obligations.

WOMEN IN THE LEGISLATURE.

WOMEN MAY REST ASSURED that in due season they will be given the privilege of sending representatives to the Legislature. Premier Hearst can be counted upon to do the right thing at the right time, just as he has done in the past. The women have every reason to hope that at the next session of the Legislature a bill will be brought down opening the doors of the legislative halls to duly elected members of their sex. No good would have been accomplished by adopting the Rowell amendment at this stage of the proceedings, as there is to be no election for the Legislature in this province for another year at least.

When such legislation is introduced, it will come from the Government side. Mr. Rowell was simply making a cheap bid for fame, a play to the ladies' gallery, as it were. It is easy for a member of the Opposition to anticipate legislative action well on the way and endeavor to appropriate credit for a measure by cutting in ahead of the Government. Premier Hearst has the responsibilities of office. Mr. Rowell has not. If the Administration is to be held accountable for all legislative acts, it is only fair to allow these measures to originate with them. The granting of the franchise to women is one of the most drastic and far-reaching reforms ever introduced into Ontario, and it is as well to make haste slowly. Give women at least a year to become accustomed to their new honors, and then there will be ample time in which to add to these, instead of thrusting every form of distinction upon them at once.

BOOSTING NEW INDUSTRIES.

MAYOR DUFFUS asked the members of the Trades Council at the banquet last night to co-operate with the city officials in securing new industries for Peterborough. Right here there is likely to be a hitch. Union labor is opposed to the principle of bonusing factories, believing that every manufacturer should be willing to start up on the merits of his concern alone and should not look for special inducements in the way of fixed assessments, tax exemptions and the like.

The promoters of a new enterprise or the heads of a concern seeking a change of location offer themselves to to the highest bidder. If the system is wrong it will never be abolished until all the municipalities enter into an agreement to grant no more bonuses or exemptions.

THE INFLUENCE OF MINORITIES.

HOW IS IT THAT, while the minority is almost powerless to accomplish anything of moral value, it is generally successful in working mischief if not positive evil?

Judas Iscariot would probably have been mobbed and drummed out of membership in the little band of followers if he had attempted to win his eleven companions over to his way of thinking Yet, acting on his own initiative and entirely alone, he was able to precipitate a tragedy so dark that its shadows still linger in the corners of the earth.

The Central Powers formed a minority of the civilized world, but that minority prevailed to bring a war that counts its victims by the millions.

Teutonic senators in the United States, by standing out against a solid combination of eighty-four who fought them, dragged the honor of their country through the slough.

In Canada a minority of one province in a Federation of nine really holds the balance of power in the nation, and politicians of both parties bend their knees before her in mawkish obeisance or with courage sustained by discordant whistling, traduce the province on the pedestal to the rest of the people.

Conscription, the true and only logical solution of the recruiting problem, is denied the rest of Canada, in spite of insistent demands, simply because while one party is afraid to take the bovine by the horns the other lacks even the spirit to urge their opponents to act.

Important Plans Made by Ontario for Returned Men

IN a recent address before the Social Service Congress at Toronto the Honorable G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in Ontario, spoke of the problems of providing for returned soldiers. Without any ostentation Mr. Ferguson declared that no class of citizens of the Empire deserved more generous, kindly, or sympathetic treatment than the men who had been fighting in the interests of the Allied cause; and no men indeed had done as much for the Dominion of Canada.

"There now lies before us the acute question of how to deal with these men on their return. The moral and social side is really of more importance than the material side. It is easy to furnish land and means for soldiers, but the moral problems will be the decisive factors of our future citizenship."

The Honorable Mr. Ferguson pointed out that Ontario would have a tremendous amount of responsibility to bear. Half of the men who went overseas were from this Province, and in addition to these would be the great number of immigrants who would seek homes in this country when the war was over.

A new means of earning their livelihood would have to be provided for many of these men. Fortunately, in Ontario greater facilities existed for education and training than could be found anywhere else on the continent of America. The scheme proposed was embodied in the opening up of Northern Ontario. There was a dual advantage in putting the soldier on the land. In the first place it would assist in his rapid, moral, and material betterment and in the second it would insure increased agricultural production.

"With this end in view we thought it necessary to establish training schools on our demonstration farms. A selection system would be instituted so that each man might fit into his own particular niche."

The land would be divided into eighty-acre farms. Ten acres would be cleared off the front and assistance given to the men to erect buildings. The farms would be absolutely free, and the man would be paid for his services while preparing the land; money would be given him to buy stock, implements, seed, etc., and due provision would also be made to carry him over the period between seed time and harvest.

There was also the problem of the wife and family. Perhaps surroundings in Northern Ontario would be quiet at first, but the success of these efforts by the Government would depend largely on the social environment provided. It was proposed to introduce moving pictures, travel talks, and otherwise contribute to the social life of the community through the church and school, and develop forces that would bind the community together and create a spirit that would add to the contentment and prosperity of these people.

In addition to the foregoing announcement reference was made to the work of The Soldiers' Aid Commission appointed by the Ontario Government, of which the Honorable W. D. McPherson is chairman. It is expected that twelve thousand soldiers will reach Canada within the next few months. An average of seven hundred Ontario men have been coming back each month for some time. Sixty-five branch offices have been established by the commission in different centres, and these will be increased up to three hundred if the demand warrants it. During the past year work has been provided in the province for over two thousand men.

And then, besides, it can't be noticed that things to eat taste any better now that they cost so much more.

Hard work always seems to have a direct relation to hard times even if you are out of a job.

A Dainty Gift

Buy some inner soles and sew pink ribbon about four inches wide around them, closing at the back with an overhand seam. On the upper edge of this ribbon, about a half inch from the top, make a small tuck through which you run a rubber cord that will draw up the ribbon to the foot.

On the toe put a blue daisy, made of loops of pale blue baby ribbon, with a flat yellow button in the center.

The New Color

"I suppose," said the new saleswoman, "that you want a suit that will make you look attractive to your husband?" "Attractive to my husband!" echoed the shopper. "I should say not. He wouldn't know if I wore a suit ten years old. What I want is something that will make my next-door neighbor turn a pale pink green with envy."

If, instead of throwing away used corks, they are kept in a jar with a little coal oil, they will be found a great help when lighting fires. Also orange and lemon peel, when dried, quickly ignites, and there is not so much wood needed.

Wellington's Height

The height of the great Duke of Wellington was discussed by readers of the London Spectator, several of them with personal knowledge, for three of them had seen him. One old veteran of 84—evidently in good spirits still wrote:

"It makes me laugh to read this controversy as to the Duke of Wellington's height. Why not ask somebody who had been in the habit of seeing him? Surely I cannot be the only person now living who was well acquainted with him. He was an intimate friend of both my parents and was constantly at our house. You may, therefore, believe me when I say that he was neither tall nor short; medium height, in fact, but had a habit of inclining his head forward, so that he looked shorter than he really was. I am certain he was very much taller than Napoleon."

Another, who as a boy frequently saw the Duke in the Green Park, says he was 5 feet 8 inches or 5 feet 9 inches.

The granddaughter of Wellington's elder brother says he was always said in the family to be 5 feet 10 inches.

Navy is Popular.

Seven hundred men have joined the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, according to figures of enlistment up to the end of the year just closed. These are recruits enlisted in Canada for service in the Royal Navy. Although taking their places in the crews of Old Country ships, the men are paid by Canada at Canadian rates of pay. Captain the Hon. Rupert Guinness, who came to Canada some months ago for the purpose of organizing this volunteer reserve, has returned to Ottawa after a recruiting trip from coast to coast, during which he addressed a large number of meetings and found a ready response to his appeal for recruits. The Province of Ontario leads in the contribution of the men for this service. The enlistments at the various district headquarters throughout Canada have been: Sydney, 18; Charlottetown, 20; St John, 35; Halifax, 31; Quebec, 7; Ottawa, 15; Montreal, 5[illegible]; Toronto, 290; Winnipeg, 88; Regina, 39; Edmonton, 47; Vancouver, [illegible]; Esquimalt, 13.

A Crying Grievance.

A Montreal politician of some years ago, in discussing party matters with Mr. S. [illegible], editor of the Gazette, [illegible] tone of deep conviction: "The trouble with the Conservative party in this town is that it's run by a little clique." Then, in a voice which betrayed indignant resentment and positive sense of injustice, he added: "And I'm not in it."

The Only Thing to Do.

Liberal newspapers are still endeavoring to make capital out of the circumstance that the new Postmaster General ordered that letters addressed to Berlin should be sent to Kitchener instead of to the Dead Letter Office. The regulation that they should be sent to the Dead Letter Office was illegal. It was contrary to the treaty with the United States and contrary to the regulations of the Universal Postal Union. Indeed the Department was in receipt of a letter from the United States postal officers at Washington asking for an explanation as to the grounds why these letters had been returned. It created a great deal of confusion and put a great many innocent people to much trouble, and in many cases financial loss. It can well be understood that not only in the United States but in Great Britain and elsewhere a great many wrote letters to Berlin in ignorance of the fact that the name had been changed. The Honorable Mr. Blondin was informed by the Deputy Postmaster General that the Act was illegal, that it contravened the regulations of the postal union and treaty rights of the United States as well as the domestic law of Canada, and that the law clerk, Mr. Stafford, advised that it was illegal. The new P. M. G. therefore decided to rescind that regulation, and Kitchener is now being treated the same as every other post office in Canada has been or would be treated in like circumstances.

The Department of Agriculture Tells Us How to Preserve.

THE WAYS TO SAVE SUGAR.

Fruits Put Up Without Sirup Do Not Retain Their Color Well, but They Are Excellent For Sauces, Salads and Desserts That Are Sweet Enough.

In these days of high prices, with sugar foremost on the aviation list, many housewives have taken serious thought as to the advisability of putting up less fruit than usual.

This is a pity, because home canned fruit is not only safe and sure, but most delicious. It need not be as rich as preserves. In fact, many epicures regard fruit as refreshing in exact proportion to the smallness of the amount of sugar used to preserve.

Fruit for use in pie or salads or as stewed fruit can be put up or canned without the use of any sugar at all. The canning specialists of the department of agriculture advise the housewives who, in order to economize on sugar, have been thinking of reducing the amount of fruit they put up, to can as much of their surplus as possible by the use of boiling water when sugar sirup is beyond their means.

Any fruit, say the specialists, may be successfully sterilized and retained in the pack by simply adding boiling water instead of the hot sirup.

The use of sugar, of course, is desirable in the canning of all kinds of fruits and makes a better and ready sweetened product. Moreover, most of the fruits when canned in water alone do not retain their natural flavor, texture and color as well as fruit put up in sirup. Fruit canned without sugar to be used for sauces or desserts must be sweetened.

Can the product the same day it is picked.

Cull, stem or seed and clean the fruit by placing it in a strainer and pouring water over it until it is clean.

Pack closely in glass jars or tin cans until they are full, using the handle of a tablespoon, wooden ladle or table knife for packing purposes.

Pour over the fruit boiling water from a kettle; place rubbers and caps in position; partially seal if using glass jars; seal completely if using tin cans.

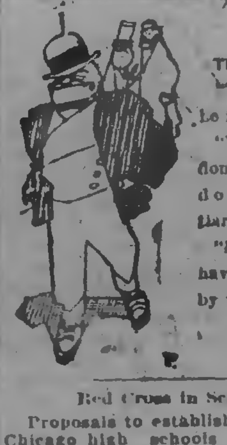
Place the containers in a sterilizing vat, such as a wash boiler with false bottom, or other receptacle improvised for the purpose.

If using a hot water bath outfit process for thirty minutes, counting time after the water has reached the boiling point. The water must cover the highest jar in the container.

After sterilizing remove packs, seal glass jars, wrap in paper to prevent bleaching and store in a dry, cool place.

If you are canning in tin cans it will improve the product to plunge the cans quickly into cold water immediately after sterilization.

When using a steam pressure canner instead of the hot water bath, sterilize for ten minutes with five pounds of steam pressure. Never allow the pressure to go over ten pounds.



Thorough Job.

"They tell me he is a jailbird."

"Yes; he has done time in a dozen penitentiaries."

"He ought to have it well done by this time."

Red Cross in Schools.

Proposals to establish a course in Chicago high schools in military work for girls, teaching them to act as Red Cross nurses and first-aid workers, is under consideration by the local board of education as an adjunct to the plans for military training for school boys, now under way. If the plans are accepted by the board of education all the work will be done by the women teachers.

The woman who never knew why and never could understand probably never tried to understand, but most men would be willing to go bail that she didn't neglect to ask why.

Emergencies have a way of disappointing those who are ready for them and making flying visits to those who never thought of them.

A very clever and certain way of keeping out of debt is to be sure that you have no credit.

Don't take so much credit to yourself. You probably have had many a boost that you never even said thank you for.

The man who marries for money probably thinks there are easier ways of earning it that he would now be willing to try.

House of Commons Shocked.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, in T. P.'s Journal, tells of a scene one night in the House of Commons, "caused by nothing greater than some form of beetle that had strayed on the floor of the House. The beetle was large, light in color; it fascinated and concentrated the attention of the whole House; it looked, indeed, almost as if it were some rattlesnake or some other noxious animal that benumbed its victims before it attacked them. And just as the House was engaged in this extraordinary forgetfulness of its real business there walked up the floor of the House a daring member; he saw the beetle or whatsoever the ugly and affrighting thing was, and trampled on it with a particularly broad and thick-soled boot. At once there rose from the whole house a groan of disapproval, and the poor member had to hurry to his seat, [illegible] and [illegible] by this chorus of disapproval.

unite and put thir shoulder to the wheel for one great shove.

Mr. Hartley dwelt briefly on the high cost of living. The workingman was better off ten years ago than he was today. The speaker referred to the price of potatoes, the "poor man's friend." There were more than Irish who liked potatoes.

Don't be Dictated To

A man who went into public life must be able to stand criticism. There never was a city council that someone did not find fault with, and the speaker ventured the advice to aldermen, "Don't be dictated to by Tom, Dick and Harry." Peterborough had been favored in many ways. Good railways, good industries meant increased taxes, but the mayor and aldermen would not find them kicking in this regard. Money must be spent if we want to grow. The steady growth of the city was pointed out and not a little credit was given to the fact that the workingmen had played in assisting the development.

The workingmen were entitled to every consideration at the hands of the public men. The man who dug a sewer is just as good as any man on the fact of the earth. The mechanics were men of intellect. The railways came in for a jolt when the president referred to them wanting to raise their rates, but never wanted to raise the workingmen's pay. This was not fair play. The man is worthy of his hire. He hoped to see the day when all would practice the golden rule "Do unto others." There was too much selfishness in the world today.

After paying a few complimentary remarks to Tom Hooper, Mr. Hartley concluded his address.

Overlooked the Newspapers

A. J. Bolwell, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Council, took advantage of the occasion to rap the merchants and citizens for not supporting the newspapers of the city better. Wherever you go the class of the newspaper in a place is a good criterion of the class of the city or town. Peterborough had three newspapers but they were not getting the support of the merchants. The owners of the papers were trying to make them second to none, but the merchants generally did not advertise. The progressive and up-to-date stores were the ones found in the newspaers. A great mail order business was done in Peterborough by the Toronto departmental stores, due to the people not knowing the same goods could be bought at home and just as cheap. The speaker knew of combines among certain merchants against advertising. The papers were boosting the "buy at home idea" in order to help the local merchants and manufacturers was not Eaton's and Simpson's. A little more advertising would bring results at home. The ordering of printing from Toronto and other places by merchants nad manufacturers was not helping to boost Peterborough. The speaker suggested that it would be a good idea to have a column of Peterborough's advantages in the newspapers every day. Visitors were bound to notice it.

Possibilities Unparalleled

William Stevens was greatly pleased with the motto, "Peterborough possesses possibilities unparalleled." He would be glad to assist in any way to help the Mayor boost the city. More factories meant more men, more men mean a higher cost and a higher rent meant higher wages and that was what the workingmen were after. After expressing himself on the great courtesy of the city officials, he started in on a little criticism which he hoped would not be taken offensively. He referred to the condition of the city streets after a snow fall. "Let the snow ploughs out earlier so the women and girls, boys and men will not have to break a path for themselves," was a suggestion by the speaker. He also advocated united action to have the Trent Valley Canal completed, an overhead bridge to East City, steps to re-establish the Quaker Oats plant here and a spirit of "Peterborough first, last and always."

Might Have a Ring Also

Joseph Crowe, who at one time served as alderman, told of the difficulties of working against the "ring." The workingmen were handicapped to a great extent in civic affairs by not having sufficient time to devote to them. He hoped the time would come when the workingmen would have a "ring" also. Mayor Duffus' gatherings were much appreciated. The mayor was a workingman, was in the ranks yet, and he hoped to see him stay there. The speaker isued a warning that he, as chairman of the Trades and Labor Council's municipal committee, was going to be at the City Council meetings to criticize. Peterborough had much to do be thankful for compared with other places. It was a good place to live, had good factories, and he felt sure that the workingmen would not kick if a raise in taxes brought new industries with it.

Cut Down the Police

The police force of the city could well afford to be cut down. With the liquor traffic done away with there was no necessity for a large force. Other cities were cutting down their forces and the men laid off were making just as much, if not more, in assisting the production of the country. Particular attention was paid to the man who raised a large family. In the opinion of the speaker the large family man was the asset of the country and should have more consideration in the tax rate than the man who did not have any children. He advocated municipal coal and wood yards and felt sure when inaugurated would be a greater success than hydro. "Do something to bring people here," he said; "get away from the old rut."

Boost the City

George L. Myland was glad of the opportunity to discuss municipal affairs. When he had first come to the city there were no paved streets and be wondered at it. People were always referring to the high tax rate. There were plenty of places where the population was only 4,000 that had a tax rate of 30 mills and referred to Wallaceburg. The city should not stand still by reason of the war. People will pay the taxes without a murmur. The necessity for supervised bathing places as a preventative of drowning and increased school accommodation was pointed out.

Referring to the fire department, Mr. Myland was for efficiency in every town. How much apparatus would the city buy if the 22 lives lost in the Quaker Oats fire could be restored? The people who bought from the Toronto departmental stores were not Peterborough boosters. The mail carriers of the city were loaded down the last few days delivering 4,500 catalogues from a Toronto departmental stores. Peterborough's load was made heavy for the benefit of a Toronto store. Let the merchants here advertise their wares and keep the money at home. He felt sure that if all took an interest, the council would take more vigorous action for a larger and better Peterborough.

Combine Departments

Arthur B. Meyer stated that the Trades and Labor Council was primarily for the benefit of organized labor, but the city's business came next. He hoped to see the property qualifications removed so that the workingman would have a better chance in the municipal field. The city should be advertised; there were more ways than one of doing this. One of the best ways to advertise was for the city to start something new. Peterborough had been too ready to follow in some others foot steps. He compared the estimates of the police and fire departments, and he thought that the $14,500 required was altogether too much when compared with $19,000 for the fire department. The latter had five more men, and horses to provide for and worked longer hours. He advocated the abolition of the Police Commission and control of the department placed with the Council.

For the consideration of the city officials he suggested a combined fire and police force, with duties taken in turn, so that every policeman would also be a trained fireman and every fireman a trained policeman. This would give an improved service all round at a smaller cost and would also give shorter and regular shifts for the firemen the same as policemen now have.

Work Hour Tickets on Street Cars

M. H. Gainey was strong for the extension of the street car lines to Cobourg, Port Hope and the back lakes. His remarks regarding low rate street car tickets for workingmen was recived with great favor. He hoped to see East City connected up with the street railway, even if a

RATS IN THE TRENCHES

TWELVE HUNDRED DOGS TRAINED TO DESTROY THESE VERMIN.

Trench rats seem to go for everything. They have rendered captive balloons useless and even attacked sleeping soldiers. The evil is all the more serious because the rats are active propagators of diseases. The military authorities have made several attempts to get rid of the plague. There was a talk of utilizing the virus which the Pasteur Institute produced thirty years ago, and which gave excellent re[illegible] everywhere. The virus which inoculates the rats with a fatal malady has only been employed in isolated cases in depots and sheds.

During the war, after laborious researches, the Pasteur Institute has produced a poison which is causing havoc among the rats while it causes no inconvenience to men or dogs. In one night it destroyed in the corner of one single trench no less than 420 rats. But the rats are wily. They will not go to the same bait twice and it is necessary to vary the lures. But the fight against the rats will go on mercilessly and the rat fighters will be reinforced by 1,200 dogs which have beenn mobilized by the military authorities.

PLUM PUDDING.

Here's a Rich One For Snappy Winter Weather.

One cupful ground suet, one cupful breadcrumbs, one cupful flour, one cupful sugar, one cupful seeded raisins, one cupful currants, one half cupful finely cut citron, one half cupful finely cut figs, one tablespoonful finely cut orange peel, one tablespoonful finely cut lemon peel, one half teaspoonful ground cinnamon, one half teaspoonful ground ginger, one-fourth teaspoonful ground cloves, one-fourth teaspoonful grated nutmeg, one-fourth teaspoonful ground mace, one tablespoonful salt, one cupful grape juice or any fruit juice. Put the suet, breadcrumbs, flour, sugar, cinnamon, ginger, cloves, nutmeg, mace and salt into a bowl and mix thoroughly. Wash and dry the raisins and currants and then add the figs, the citron, orange and lemon peel, add one cupful water and the fruit juice and mix thoroughly. This should be a stiff dough. If there is not enough moisture add more water. Brush mold or kettle with a little melted butter and put in the pudding. The mold should not be quite full. Boil four hours as soon as they are filled. These should be prepared a week ahead of time and cooked; then boil one hour before serving. You may add one-half cupful chopped and blanched almonds to this if desired. Serve hot with hard or lemon sauce.

GUELPH'S PLAN FOR NEW CIVIC RULE REJECTED

Rotary System of Municipal Government Does Not Appeal to Legislative Committee ---Patriotic Speeches by Leaders.

TORONTO, March 9.—A proposed new form of municipal government for Guelph was defeated by the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature yesterday. What was wanted was a Council of twelve, elected for a term of three years, one-third of the members to retire annually. These twelve are to appoint four more aldermen, making a total Council of sixteen members. The Mayor would be elected annually by the Council. It was further asked that the powers of all the public utilities commissions of the city be transferred to this Council. It was stated that the scheme had been submitted to the electors and approved by a majority of 300.

The new method of electing the Mayor was rejected by the committee, and the bill was withdrawn with the exception of a section allowing the city to impose a tax of four mills on the dollar to provide for patriotic funds.

The bill to incorporate Welland as a city was passed.

Faithful to the End

The Legislature, with unstinted enthusiasm, recorded its approval of the Allies' war policy, expressed appreciation of the heroic services of Canadians on the battlefield, and called upon the people of the Province to keep the successful prosecution of the war above all other considerations. Earnest patriotic speeches were delivered by Sir Wm. Hearst and Mr. Rowell, who moved and seconded the resolution respectively and other members of the House. After the resolution was adopted the legislators sang God Save the King.

Sweet Potatoes a la Dixie.

Boil two medium sized potatoes until barely tender, remove the skins and slice about a quarter of an inch thick. Lay in a baking dish, alternating the layers of potato with layers of butter and sugar, having butter and sugar on top. Consult taste as regards the amount of sugar, but do not be too sparing with the butter. Add a half cupful of water and bake very slowly until the potatoes have absorbed the sirup. Allow them to brown at the last and serve very hot.

Cork Carpet For Nursery.

The ideal nursery floor is covered with cork carpet, and it is as well to lay this betimes, because at first it has rather an objectionable smell, which wears off after it has been in use. Cork carpet is warm and clean. It can be wiped over with a damp cloth each day, which keeps it sweet and fresh, and it is quite warm to the touch, so that a child is not chilled when sitting on it. A few small rugs can be thrown over it at convenient spaces.

Spring Suit; Coat, and Blouse Models of Supreme Interest

There is one word that finds its full meaning in this store—"DISTINCTIVENESS." When buying stock it is often the word that condemns some particular garment. It may be pretty in an ordinary sense, but if it is to take its place in our cases, it must be extraordinarily pretty. Hence our desire for you to see the inimitable Spring Styles in this, The Redfern Store.

Navy Suit $33.00

To say that it is all wool would sound almost untrue. Nevertheless, it is — and, what's more, it is French serge. The youthful young woman was the one for whom it was especially designed. Coat shows a girlish amount of fulness; fastens with fancy belt at the waist; wide sailor collar partly concealed by an additional white silk collar. Skirt has becoming fulness at back, and fancy belt; side closing. Price $35.00

Serge Suit at $20.00

The suit is made of a weight suitable for spring. The coat immediately conveys the impression of smartness. Possibly the wide collar and fancy belt, which secures its charm from fantastic stitchings of silk, are responsible; but the pearl buttons are justified in claiming a portion of your praise. Skirt is much on the order of coat. Price $20.00

Handsome Coat $39.00

We'll call the color yellow gold and the material velour, for such they are. Every stitch has been made with care; the finish is perfect. The material is pleasingly supple—lined with floral silk poplin; deep roll collar that lends itself to either high or low effect; wide cuffs; shoestring girdle encircles, and ties gracefully at the waist. The heavy tailored stitching of self-same color makes an effective trimming throughout. Price $35.00

Lingerie Blouses $1.98 to $5.00

To complete the effectiveness of the suit we would suggest a blouse. You owe this to the suit skirt, when you enter the house and throw off the coat. See that the skirt has a fit companion.

White voiles in the plainest and fanciest models imaginable. Each model has an individual charm: beautifully trimmed fronts and large fancy collars. Prices from $1.98 to $5.00

THE COMING SERIES OF LECTURES AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The series of lectures to be given under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter of the I. O. D. E. deserve more than a passing mention. The idea of instituting such a course during the Lenten season was derived from Trinity University, where it has been in vogue for over twenty years and has proved an abundant success. The custom has been to obtain the services of men best qualified to speak on certain specific subjects and in this way to bring the public more in touch with matters of current interest and modern thought. The speakers who have kindly consented to give their services on the present occasion are all gentlemen eminently fitted for the task, as their names testify. A double object will be gained by hearing them. In the first place, much needed help will be given to the causes for which the members of Otonabee Chapter are working so ungrudgingly and untiringly in the war, and, in the second those who avail themselves of the privilege of attending are assured of receiving a very great deal of valuable information and instruction. The members of Otonabee Chapter look forward with a considerable amount of pleasurable anticipation to the scheme proving a great success. The meetings will be held every Saturday afternoon in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library from 3:45 to 4:45 o'clock.

GEORGE NEWTON.

Mr. George Newton of Belmont died at his home on Tuesday night. The funeral was held yesterday.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

A NICE COMPARISON

If you were buying apples, you would be interested in getting the best quality, and you could tell at a glance which of two or more samples you preferred. It is just as interesting to be shown the difference in the grade of glasses used in "PEBLO" Lenses and that of other makes. See the glass in the block at Dr. Fowler's. The easily apparent first quality of the "Peblo" glass will be recognized at once.

THE SINISTER SECOND

Wilhelm II., King of the Huns, is said to be exteremely superstitious, and to pay great heed to omens and signs. It may, therefore, interest his Hunship—and us—to note how extremely unlucky "II" is to kings. Harold II. was slain in battle, repelling invasion. William II. was murdered in the New Forest, whilst hunting. The one and only Wilhelm II. is fond of hunting!

Edward II was deposed and murdered. Richard II was forced to abdicate, and then murdered. James II lost his throne. Henry II.'s reign was very unhappy. Charles II. was plotted against, and nearly murdered. George II.'s reign was a miserable one.

In other countries, also, it is extraordinary to note how the "II.," with very rare exceptions, was a far from lucky number for kings. Precedents cannot be sought in Germany, for the German Empire is only a modern creation. And as Wilhelm II. is the eldest son of the eldest child of the late Queen Victoria, and, according to his own opinion, ought to be King of England, he must, naturally, look for the omens of the sinister "II." in English history.

REGIMENT ADOPTED BABY

Kind-hearted Russians Looking After Helpless Turkish Infant

"Our regiment has adopted a two-year-old Turkish girl baby," writes a Cossack who is serving with the Russian army of the Caucasus. He explains:

"During our forward movement one of our men found in a farm house this baby, which had been abandoned by her fleeing parents. The starving little creature was cleaned, clothed and fed and then taken to the staff headquarters. In the Greek church of the village the foundling was christened according to the rites of the Orthodox church, the commander of the regiment acting as godfather and Princess Gelovanna, a Red Cross nurse and wife of a member of the Duma, as godmother. The child was named Alexandra Donskaia, after the name of the regiment.

"The officers and men of the regiment subscribed monthly amounts sufficient to pay for rearing and educating their regimental daughter."

Among the poor fishermen of the Labrador, $1.500 was collected for the Patriotic Fund.

CHARMING CONSORT OF ENGLAND'S NEW PREMIER

Little is Heard About This Welsh Woman.

Born Margaret Owen, and wife of England's famous Liberal since 1888, Mrs. Lloyd George has not been featured widely except as the mother of two sons and three daughters. The eldest daughter of the house has become her father's "right hand man," assisting him in public duties and ministering to his comfort and health in his home.

MRS. DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

The prime minister is a man of highly nervous temperament, and occasionally he has to have a day in bed, where he receives his private secretaries and attends to the routine of business. At such times his daughter assumes full charge of his room, allows the secretaries just as much time as her father's strength will allow and then politely but firmly ends the day's work.

She has the knack of understanding her father's moods, and he insists upon having her near him when every one else is excluded from his room.

When he is in good health the two are companions for long walks or at golf. In the summers Lloyd George has been fond of going with his wife and daughters upon camping excursions, living out of doors and cooking the meals in gypsy fashion. He returns from such holidays with his nerves much strengthened.

His daughter is a wholesome looking girl, with a highly intelligent face, and is the "apple of his eye" to her father.

Money Won't Stay In It.

"My purse annoys me greatly."
"What is the matter with it?"
"It leaks."

The Holiday Spirit.

Loosen up on Christmas day.
 Spread a little cheer
Down the dull and dreary way
 Of the passing year.
Search for some neglected, shy
 Child of care and strife
That you may infuse thereby
 Sunshine in his life.

You to whom the fates are kind,
 You who have to spare,
Search the lowly walks and find
 One your joys to share.
Do not treasure all the crumbs
 Far beyond your needs.
Get the peace of mind that comes
 From unselfish deeds.

Do not lock your heart and throw
 To the winds the key.
On the hapless ones bestow
 From your bounty free.
Do not with a miser's hand
 At your purse strings clutch.
To the friendless of the land
 It will mean so much.

Loosen up on Christmas day;
 Tap that useless tank.
Make the little children gay
 If you break the bank.
On your friendliness fellow men
 Wa[illegible] worthless gold.
You [illegible] it back again—
 Yes, a hundredfold.

GUELPH'S PLAN FOR NEW CIVIC RULE REJECTED

Rotary System of Municipal Government Does Not Appeal to Legislative Committee ---Patriotic Speeches by Leaders.

TORONTO, March 9. A proposed new form of municipal government for Guelph was defeated by the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature yesterday. What was wanted was a Council of twelve, elected for a term of three years, one-third of the members to retire annually. These twelve are to appoint four more aldermen, making a total Council of sixteen members. The Mayor would be elected annually by the Council. It was further asked that the powers of all the public utilities commissions of the city be transferred to this Council. It was stated that the scheme had been submitted to the electors and approved by a majority of 300.

The new method of electing the Mayor was rejected by the committee, and the bill was withdrawn with the exception of a section allowing the city to impose a tax of four mills on the dollar to provide for patriotic funds.

The bill to incorporate Welland as a city was passed.

Faithful to the End

The Legislature, with unstinted enthusiasm, recorded its approval of the Allies' war policy, expressed appreciation of the heroic services of Canadians on the battlefield, and called upon the people of the Province to keep the successful prosecution of the war above all other considerations. Earnest patriotic speeches were delivered by Sir Wm. Hearst and Mr. Rowell, who moved and seconded the resolution respectively and other members of the House. After the resolution was adopted the legislators sang God Save the King.

Sweet Potatoes a la Dixie.

Boil two medium sized potatoes until barely tender, remove the skins and slice about a quarter of an inch thick. Lay in a baking dish, alternating the layers of potato with layers of butter and sugar, having butter and sugar on top. Consult taste as regards the amount of sugar, but do not be too sparing with the butter. Add a half cupful of water and bake very slowly until the potatoes have absorbed the sirup. Allow them to brown at the last and serve very hot.

Cork Carpet For Nursery.

The ideal nursery floor is covered with cork carpet, and it is as well to lay this betimes, because at first it has rather an objectionable smell, which wears off after it has been in use. Cork carpet is warm and clean. It can be wiped over with a damp cloth each day, which keeps it sweet and fresh, and it is quite warm to the touch, so that a child is not chilled when sitting on it. A few small rugs can be thrown over it at convenient spaces.

Spring Suit; Coat, and Blouse Models of Supreme Interest

There is one word that finds its full meaning in this store—"DISTINCTIVENESS." When buying stock it is often the word that condemns some particular garment. It may be pretty in an ordinary sense, but if it is to take its place in our cases, it must be extraordinarily pretty. Hence our desire for you to see the inimitable Spring Styles in this, The Redfern Store.

Navy Suit $33.00

To say that it is all wool would sound almost untrue. Nevertheless, it is — and, what's more, it is French serge. The youthful young woman was the one for whom it was especially designed. Coat shows a girlish amount of fulness; fastens with fancy belt at the waist; wide sailor collar partly concealed by an additional white silk collar. Skirt has becoming fulness at back, and fancy belt; side closing. Price $35.00

Serge Suit at $20.00

The suit is made of a weight suitable for spring. The coat immediately conveys the impression of smartness. Possibly the wide collar and fancy belt, which secures its charm from fantastic stitchings of silk, are responsible; but the pearl buttons are justified in claiming a portion of your praise. Skirt is much on the order of coat. Price $20.00

Handsome Coat $39.00

We'll call the color yellow gold and the material velour, for such they are. Every stitch has been made with care; the finish is perfect. The material is pleasingly supple—lined with floral silk poplin; deep roll collar that lends itself to either high or low effect; wide cuffs; shoestring girdle encircles, and ties gracefully at the waist. The heavy tailored stitching of selfsame color makes an effective trimming throughout. Price $35.00

Lingerie Blouses $1.98 to $5.00

To complete the effectiveness of the suit we would suggest a blouse. You owe this to the suit skirt, when you enter the house and throw off the coat. See that the skirt has a fit companion.

White voiles in the plainest and fanciest models imaginable. Each model has an individual charm — beautifully trimmed fronts and large fancy collars. Prices from $1.98 to $5.00

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

TAYLOR—DRUMMOND.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Drummond of Otonabee on Thursday, March 8, at 5 o'clock, when their youngest daughter, Helen Miller, was united in the hold bonds of matrimony to Mr. Fred H. Taylor of Dinsmore, Sask., formerly of Keene, Ont.

The bride looked charming in her grey crepe de chene dress and bridal veil, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations. The young couple were unattended.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McEachern of Keene in the presence of about seventy-five guests. After the ceremony the guests retired to the dining-room where dainty refreshments were served. The toast was proposed by Rev. Mr. McEachern and responded to by the groom's uncle. Numerous and costly presents testified to the esteem in which the young couple are held by the community.

Among the guests from a distance were: Mrs. H. C. Cruickshanks, Mrs Ling and Mrs. Wallace Wood, relatives of the bride, and Mr. J. W. R. Taylor, brother of the groom, all of Toronto; also Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Greenbanks, Norwood, Ont., and Mr and Mrs. Jno. Douglas, Millbrook, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will leave on the 3:43 train Saturday for their future home in Dinsmore, Sask., and will visit en route. They will be followed by the good wishes of their many Otonabee friends.

Mrs. Jno. Taylor, mother of the groom, formerly of Otonabee, now resides at 730 Bethune street, Peterborough.

Mr. Archie Henderson of Kinmount was in the city on business yesterday.

An interesting address under the auspices of Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E. on the "Responsibility of Citizenship" will be given by the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough, tomororw afternoon at 3.45 o'clock in the assembly hall of the Public Library. "Whatever makes men good Christians makes good citizens."

At the regular meeting of Norwood Royal Black Preceptory Sir Knight F. A. Robertson, the retiring Worshipful Preceptor, was presented with a Past Preceptor's jewel and a short address in recognition of his faithful and untiring labors in connection with the Order.

Mrs. J. A. Aylmer has returned from a visit to friends in Cornwall.

Capt. and Mrs. Thompson have returned to the city after spending a few days in Kingston.

Mr. Robert Stuart, of Chicago, president of the Quaker Oats Co., is in the city.

Marks Co. Get the Crowds

Another capacity house greeted the Ernie Marks Co. at the Grand last night when Above Suspicion was presented.

KEEP PROFITS IN PETERBORO

WHY CITIZENS SHOULD BUY STOCK IN MILK PRODUCTS CO.

Every dollar of Peterborough money invested in stock of the Peterborough Milk Products Co., Ltd., is so much invested to boost a local industry that promises so much in the way of local prosperity. There is another matter to be considered in this connection. The new company will pay handsome dividends, and the wealth of the city will be increased by every dollar of these profits kept at home instead of going out of the city to non-resident investors. Messrs Morden and Bull, who are selling the stock, are disposing of the shares rapidly, as every class in the community appears to have unbounded confidence in the new corporation.

The Aftermath.

Drifting back home from vacation,
Busted and weary and sore,
As for the rest they were after—
Needing it worse than before.
Back from a time that was bully,
Back from the lake or the woods,
Feeling for labor no friendship,
Hardly on hand with the goods.

Oh, it looks pleasant in prospect!
Nothing but resting and ease,
Looking in flower studded meadows,
Wading in joy to the knees,
Sitting around in a hammock,
Waving a hand painted fan
Or in the sand on the beaches
Picking up freckles and tan.

Nothing but rest on the program—
That was the word in advance.
Anything looking like labor
Stood not a ghost of a chance.
No heavy lifting or moving
Boxes as large as a shed,
And about standing in water
Never a sentence was said.

Still, what's the use of complaining?
If it was work it was fun,
And, on the whole, we are sorry
That it is over and done
But it would be so much better,
Filling the bill pretty sleek,
If when vacation was over
We could rest up for a week.

New Spring Showing

STORE EDITORIAL

The business of this store is gaining in volume every month. There may be several reasons to account for this. It may be that our store policy, with its courteous service to customers, has had much to do with our increasing business.

And it may be because this store has come to be known as "The Store of Splendid Values." For, in the face of advancing costs, we've been able to keep our prices down to a satisfying level and still offer merchandise of a satisfying and desirable quality.

We hope to maintain this increasing business by continuing the policy which has made it possible at Elliot's Store.

The First Big Showing of Untrimmed Shapes for Spring

The above headline will be welcome news to hosts of women who have been waiting to get a new shape and trim it themselves, so that their first Spring hat will cost the smallest amount possible. And here are the shapes favored by Fashion: a small turban with a very narrow upturned brim; mushroom and wide sailors; as well as in-between and oddly shaped ideas. In new and interesting colors as well.

Wonderfully Interesting are the New Sport Hats

A number are of the wide brim sailor style; others show a deft arrangement of new Hawaiian straws, which seems to be in keeping with the craze for Hawaiian music. Some are really daring in outline. Yet they are new; they are all effective, and every one fashionable. If you want to know what the new Spring Millinery looks like, an early visit is certainly advisable.

The First Breath of Spring Manifests itself in the New Spring Millinery

When women see these new straw hats with their bright colored trimmings, it will not require much imagination to picture Spring only a few short weeks away. Even now Spring is here, insofar as wearing straw hats is concerned; for women are wearing them every day. The hats that are finding first favor now are of lustrous Lisere straw, and others of combinations of satin and straw, offset with a dashing ornament, which in many cases is of a vivid color combination. Prices .... $2.50 to $7.50

ITEMS OF INTEREST 'ROUND THE STORE

"I'd Suggest that you go to Elliot's if You Want a Pretty Separate Skirt

Probably you've heard some of your friends make that same remark. For that is what brought one woman to our skirt section the other day who was looking for one of the new fashions in separate skirts. It seemed that her friend had visited our store—had become so enthusiastic over the new skirt styles, that the moment separate skirts were mentioned she could not resist the temptation to make the statement above. And really, we've rarely, if ever, seen such unusual styles—styles that were so very effective and skirts that fit so splendidly. Prices are extremely moderate $3.98 to $20

To Slip on of a Morning, Dainty Negligees

Every woman knows how handy it is to have a full length negligee to slip on when preparing breakfast or for wearing at the breakfast table. It makes her costume complete, and she has but to slip it over her shoulders. These negligees are full length, made of silk and other materials, also of crepe cloth trimmed with lace and ribbons.

Peplum Dressing Sacques at 95c

Made of white lawn and also white Swiss. Very effectively trimmed with lace and ribbons and with beading drawn; ribbon belt at waist.

Dotted Swiss Dressing Sacques at 65c

These are in various styles, but each one quite simple yet effective. Have colored borders and trimmed in lace and ribbon.

Knitted Silk Hug-me-Tights

The woman who prefers to wear the same weight underwear at all times finds these useful garments of marked desirability. She need but slip one on over her waist, and feels assured her chest and shoulders are fully protected against winds and drafts. The yarns used in these are heavy silk and some in fine wool, closely knitted and in wide choice of shades .... $2.75 & $4

Needing Aprons?

You could hardly find a better time to buy all the aprons you need for several months than right now, and this is simply because our apron stock is now at its fullest, and you can buy the kinds wanted in the various colors desired, and at prices which will not be possible when cotton goods are made out of 25c cotton.

Our Display of Undermuslins at Present Prices is Making a Distinct Sensation

Realizing that cotton materials were bound to advance in price, that the cost of undermuslins was bound to increase because labor was demanding and getting a higher price, we placed orders well in advance, and, too, at costs which would be hardly possible to obtain at this time. In most cases the garments have been but lately made up, and, in many cases, the firms from which we purchased were willing that we countermand our orders and pay us a bonus. But we had planned for a value-giving occasion for our customers, and for that reason are able to offer desirable, splendidly made undermuslins at prices which are in keeping with values such as were possible two or three years ago, when cotton was as low as 8c a pound.

Really Important!—To be able to buy Kid Gloves at Old Price

And the next thing that is important to you is to be able to find the size wanted and the color desired. We've endeavored to keep our kid glove stock up to former standards, and have it complete in size and color range. And why shouldn't a woman be able to find kid gloves when she wants them? Aren't kid gloves worn all year round? So, if you have any fear as to not being able to secure the glove you want, visit our glove section at once and make selection while the range is complete.

There is a Sense of Satisfaction in Purchasing Silk Stockings at this Store

The woman who buys stockings here is assured of satisfaction the moment she makes her purchase. So much so, that the question of satisfaction never enters her mind, as if by instinct she feels that she has secured the best silk stocking it is possible to obtain at the cost. And, feeling this way, she secures not only satisfactory service, but double pleasure in wearing. 75c to $1.25

"I Buy all the Hosiery for my Family at Elliot's"

Such was the remark made by a mother to her neighbor only a short time ago. And so impressed was the woman to whom the remark was made, that she had to visit the store and repeat it to us. She, too, is now a regular customer of our Hosiery Section. She has learned what hundreds of other mothers have learned—that hosiery purchased at this store gives satisfactory service in every detail and particularly in the matter of moderate priced stockings for women and stockings for boys and girls.

Women's Cotton Stockings are	15c to 50c a pair
Women's Silk Stockings are	75c to $1.25 a pair
Children's Stockings are	15c to 35c a pair

Girls' Middy Blouses, 95c

Made of an unusually strong galatea cloth, in plain colors and stripes. Very effectively trimmed and always favored by the young miss. Mothers like them, too, because they save clothes and launder splendidly. Large sailor collars.

A Real Turkish Towel

And what we mean is, that this is the kind of a towel that makes you almost want to get into the tub so that you can use it. The nap is coarse, and it isn't coarse; it is simply a hard nap woven by a patented process. And, when used, gets the blood circulating so that you feel good all over. Size 39 x 19 inches. Price, each 42c

A Sale of Towels and Toweling

Merely because this is the White Sale, it is possible to buy Towels at prices which will rule for the next ten days. It is not necessary to mention again that linens have advanced to the highest prices in years. So when good, desirable Towels of satisfying qualities can be bought at present costs, housewives will take heed without being urged. The details here give only a hint of the values.

Guest Towels, per pair	22c
Linenette Towels, per pair	28c
Larger Size Towels, per pair	42c

We have a large assortment of Linenette, Linen, Turkish Towels, Large Bath Towels, Towels for every need in all qualities, sizes and kinds. See the values and prices—they cannot fail to interest you.

For the Woman in Mourning

Quite naturally, in making selection of apparel for morning wear, one does not desire extreme fashions, and yet, while the garments shown here are conservative in design, they still have many little fashion touches that are appreciated by even the woman wearing black.

Mourning Dresses of Black Crepe de Chine, $16.75

Very prettily designed dresses, trimmed in effective ways with Crepe Meteor and dull black trimmings and braid.

Black Crepe de Chine Blouses, $3.75

Very desirable quality of black Crepe de Chine, trimmed with several clusters of fine tucks. Also trimmed in black beads. Very dainty design and perfect fitting.

Black Kid Gloves, $1.50

Made of a very pliant black kid with raised black stitching and black covered clasp.

Black Bordered Linen Handkerchiefs, 15c

Very soft, desirable quality of linen, with fast color black hemstitched border.

trestle bridge had to be constructed. The formation of ratepayers' associations in each ward to keep the council informed of the city's needs was another suggestions. In conclusion, he stated that Peterborough barbers were not to blame for the high cost of living.

Public Ownership

J. A. Sharpe wanted the mayor to keep public ownership under his hat at all times. He was in favor of a free market and would have returned soldiers for the clerk and assistant.

Rural Radials

B Fredericks was very much in favor of the extension of the radial railways through the country and he told of the splendid rural electric roads in New York State. It helped the merchant, the housewife and the farmer and would tend to keep more money at home. He was very anxious to see the merchants and manufacturers have their printing done in Peterborough. The advantages of the Trades and Labor Council were pointed out A lot of work was done by a few for the benefit of the whole lot. The investigation of a local baker who was selling bread cheaper at an outside town than in Peterborough and the rectifying of a condition where a local factory was paying girls 80c for twelve hours' work were instanced. He hoped that the mayor would continue holding these meetings.

Advertise Peterborough

Robt. Snelgrove would keep Peterborough to the front by all kinds of advertising. There wac no finer residential place than Peterborough and instanced the fact that he had got two families to locate here this week. He suggested the corresponding with different canning companies with a view to establishing branches here. Boost Peterborough all the time; it is getting better every day.

Till the Vacant Lots

William A. Davis would increase the production of the country by the tilling of vacant lots. More vegetables could be produced than would supply one family and the overplus marketed to advantage. He was glad the lot owners were ready to give the use of them to willing citizens. The working men should have car tickets good at certain hours at the reduced rates of 8 for 25c for 10 for 25c. Many man would ride instead of walking and it would encourage the use of the street railway.

Don't Be a Tin Horn Sport

Joseph Begley was proud to be a workingman. He would like to see everyone unite in an effort to boost Peterborough. "Don't be a tin horn sport, but be a live member. Put your schemes into execution. back them up and by getting together harmoniously put them through." Peterborough was a good city, there was a good country back of it, and with a concerted action would be by far the best town in the Dominion.

Snow Cleaning Regulation

Harry Evans advocated making the residents all over the city clean the snow off the walks. He did not mean to do away with the snow ploughs but to have the house owner widen the path left by the snow plough. He felt sure this would be a step in the right direction. He drew Mr. Stevens' attention to the fact that his house was on the tail end of the snow plough route, hence the late hour for clean walks.

Improved Street Railway

William Hartley of the Auburn Woollen Co., stated that they were making enough cloth every day to clothe two battalions. Their employees complained about the street car service and he would like to see the street railway extended across the river hTe dam was wide enough to carry a car track.

Ready to Help.

Ernest Hensley was ready to boost Peterborough He praised the City Council and the Board of Education The proposal of Mr. Eastwood for technical school education was a good one and would be a great help to the returned soldiers. The employment of the boys who have returned on the board of works garbage collection and other civic positions was suggested.

Have a Dandy Town.

Thomas Hendry was very pleased with the spirit shown by the members of the Trades and Labor Council. He had previously thought them a sort of socialist organization but was glad to confess he was wrong and gave the members his support Many of the suggestions made were good ones, and, if carried out, would make Peterborough a dandy town.

No Better City.

George Ahearn was proud of Peterborough. It was a good place to live a good place to eat. The houses were all good ones, and there were no slums here.

George Savigny was beaten out in making a suggestion. He hoped that good would result from the meeting

Not Enough Fire Protection.

H. Sherwood did not think the city had enough fire protection. He would like to see a firehall in the north and south ends.

Dan. Wires would do anything to have the municipality own the street railway and give the residents on Smith town hill a chance to ride down town. He would also urge the completion of the Trent Canal It would make fuel cheaper.

A Union Station.

H. Frost wanted to know if the Lundy shovel works could not be kept in Peterborough. He would like to see a union station here, but if raidial railways were built the necessity would be done away with.

J. F. Collins and J. Bacon were both strong advocates of the extension of the street railway lines.

A Unanimous Vote.

Messrs. Myland and Ahearn fathered a resolution similar to those passed at the other meetings tending to boost Peterborough, which was carried by a unanimous standing vote

Alderman Dobbin gave a review of the work in connection with the proposed motorizing of the fire department.

City Clerk Armstrong pointed out the benefits to be derived from a free market and the disadvantages from a financial standpoint. He gave a review of the general city business touching on every department.

J. J. Hartley and A. Meyer were the sponsors of a resolution endorsing the Peterborough Industrial Association, which carried unanimously, and the Mayor appointed Messrs. J. J Hartley and Joseph Begley as members of the executive.

After a resolution of thanks to Mayor Duffus had been passed, the gathering broke up by the singing of the National Anthem.

Those present were: Mayor Duffus Messrs. J. J. Hartley, A. J. Bolwell, W Stevens, Thos. Boll, W. Hartley T. Hendry, S. Parkes, J. F. Collins H. Sherwood, J. A. Sharpe, A. Meyer J Begley, J. Crowe, D. Wires, T Bacon, P. Murphy, M. Neary, A. J Duncan, H. Evans, P. McGrath, W. Rew, H. Jeffrey, H. Frost, A. Campbell, F. H. Dobbin, S. R. Armstrong A. Madden, G. Heinsley, R. Snelgrove, J. Butcher, G. L. Myland, H Gainey, H. Brown, G. Ahearn, B Frederick, G. Anderson, Wm. Davis G. H. Savigny, S Worsencroft.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

Caught in Shafting.

When engaged in oiling a coupling at the elevator at Millbrook Edward McMurry was caught in the shafting and had it not been that his clothing gave way he might have been severely injured.

Want Home Rule

The Australian Senate by a vote of 28 to 2 adopted a resolution calling for home rule for Ireland "without undue delay," substituting that phrase for the word "immediately."

Sectionman Found Dead

[illegible] Calvert, a well-known resident of Crookston village, a sectionman on the C.P.R., was found dead yesterday along the track at Bullers Siding, about midway between Crookston and Tweed.

The Musician's Revenge

It is reported that a certain musician, disgusted with the chattering that usually takes the place of listening during a musical performance, arranged with his violin, his violincello, and the rest that the music should suddenly stop in the midst of the laudest pasage in the piece.

It was done, and clear and distinct, above all the loud talkers' voices, these words were heard:

"We always fry ours in lard."

Woes of Victory.

The tumult and the shouting dies,
The charge and the denial.
Now at his ease the victor lies;
But, oh, this cutting pie to size
Is something of a trial.

It isn't the little you earn, but the much that you annex, that makes you rich.

Always be civil to the prosperous looking citizen. He may be the agent of the pure food commission.

If some men would only work as hard to get their work done as they do to sidestep it they might peradventure get paid for overtime.

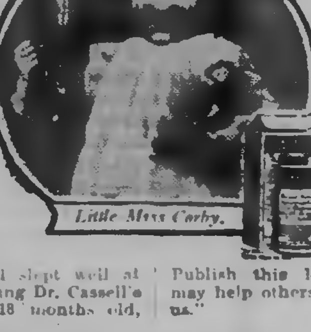
If you aren't satisfied with your lot build a flat building upon it and try to keep the tenants that you may get satisfied.

We find that the great influence that many people talk to us about is mostly with themselves.

Weak From Birth

Harriston (Ont.) Child Saved by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

MR. CORBY, HARRISTON P.O., ONT., writes: "Just a few lines in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. Our little girl was weak from birth, and though we tried doctor's medicine and other things she got no better. She just lay in her cot and cried, and neighbours all said we could not save her. Then I read about Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I said to my wife, 'while there's life there's hope'; we will try these Tablets. We did, and from the first box we could see a change in the child. She seemed to rest more comfortably, and slept well at night. We kept on giving Dr. Cassell's Tablets till she was 18 months old, and now at three years I don't think there can be a healthier child in the whole Dominion.



Little Miss Corby.

The doctors said she had stomach trouble, and that her chances were small, yet Dr. Cassell's Tablets cured her. They have been worth their weight in gold to us, for we were just giving up hope of saving our little daughter. I don't think there is any other medicine for children like Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I may say my wife has taken them for nerves, and they have built her up splendidly. Publish this letter if you like; it may help others as the Tablets helped us."

Bright, healthy, happy children, full of life and activity—every mother wants her babies to be like that. Are yours? If they are not, if they are weakly or fretful—we say it in all sincerity—the surest way you will ever find to build up strength and vitality in their little frames is a course of Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

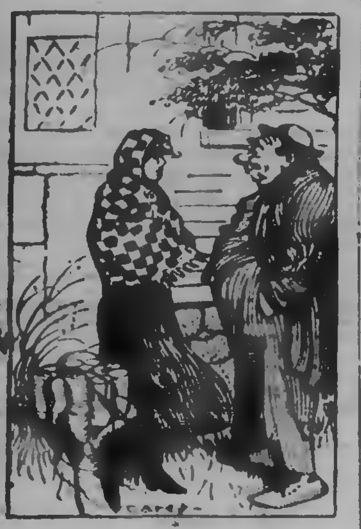
BOWSER'S SIDE OF IT

He Avers Mrs. Bowser Made Mistakes

Readers of the Bowser sketches cannot have helped but notice that Mrs. Bowser always twists everything around so as to appear one of the smartest women in the land, while I am held up to scorn and contempt as a faddist and an incompetent. I have stood this as long as I shall stand it. Mrs. Bowser is a very good woman, but I shall not longer allow her to boost herself up at my expense. If I have made mistakes she is also guilty of the same thing and should share the blame with me. She has related in these sketches thousands of my blunders, but I shall content myself at present with relating only a few of hers.

One evening last fall as we sat enjoying our home life I observed that I must soon see about the winter's supply of coal for the furnace. She replied that I was an overworked man and that it was her duty as a wife to take all the burdens off my shoulders she could. I needn't bother about the coal, for one thing. She would not have me strain my voice at the telephone for fear of producing some lasting injury to my vocal cords. I might go right along in peace and contentment and on the morrow she would order the coal. She looked at me so lovingly and her attitude was so confident that I left the business to her.

I shall not state that I expected she would blunder about it, but between you and me I looked for some calamity. On the next morning as soon as I left the house she got into communication with our coal man and asked him over the telephone:



"I HAVE BEEN A HOUSE PAINTER FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS."

"You have got coal, I presume?"

"We have kept coal for twenty eight years," was the reply.

"Then I want five tons of it."

"Very well, madam. It shall be up today."

That was just like a woman just like Mrs. Bowser. There are about a dozen different brands of coal. She did not specify whether we wanted it for the range or the furnace or a steam boiler, and as a consequence five tons of pea coal came up. Pea coal is the smallest size, you know, and will almost sift through a pepper box. The men had deposited half of it in the bins when she discovered her mistake. That pea coal would last about as long in the furnace as so much sawdust, and it cost her $4 in cash to have it reloaded and taken back to the yards, and she paid the money out of her weekly allowance and bribed the cook with a new pair of stockings to say nothing to me.

And again. When she tells me that we are out of butter I go over to the grocer and say, to the swindler who runs the concern:

"Look here, Brown; I want five pounds of butter."

"Yes, sir."

"I want butter instead of lard, wagon grease or margarine."

"Yes, sir."

"I don't want to find any coat buttons, peach stones or vest buckles in it. I want good creamery butter and less than a hundred years old. If you attempt to swindle me I will make Rome howl around this old shebang. You know me, sir. My name is Bowser. I am a desperate and dangerous man!"

And wouldn't he have sent me the sweetest, nicest, slickest, juiciest five pounds of butter that two horn cows ever produced on this grassy globe? Sure he would.

And what did Mrs. Bowser do? She waited until she saw a farmer driving past on our street. Farmers occasionally come our way to dispose of their products. She rushed to the door and called to this farmer, and when he had come up the steps she asked in the gentle tones of an angel if it so happened that he had a crock of butter which he would be so kind and courteous as to sell to her for 2 cents over the market price. Yes, sir, that's just what she did instead of calling him a fraud and a robber to show him that he could not be deceived. The farmer replied that he had such a crock and it was such butter as had never been offered for sale in the city before. He brought in the crock. It looked good to Mrs. Bowser. Because it looked good on the surface she made no investigation. Because the farmer looked childlike and innocent she did not doubt his word. She bought that crock and paid cash down for it, and all day long she was smiling and chuckling and thinking of how she would boast to me of her bargain.

Some butter was wanted for dinner, and the crock had been brought out and a nice chunk lifted up just as I came in. I could not help but see it. I must have been stone deaf not to hear the gasps of surprise and chagrin uttered by Mrs. Bowser and the cook. About two inches of nice looking butter had been spread on top of a crock almost full of dirt, and Mrs. Bowser had been made a victim of a bold faced villain. He had never been on our street before and didn't intend to ever drive there again.

Did I use sarcastic words then to Mrs. Bowser? Did I say that she ought to have known better? Did I say that it served her just right? No! No, I did not even look sarcastic at her and had not a single word to say. We had no butter for dinner, but not a kick from me, and Mrs. Bowser has never mentioned this incident in print, but on the contrary every time I brought home a dozen eggs, and she has found a bad one in the lot, she has told of my utter failure as a business man.

And speaking of eggs reminds me of an occasion when she asked me, in a soft, bland voice, why I didn't buy them at wholesale instead of retail. I replied like any conservative husband would have done, that I would think the startling suggestion over for awhile, but she could not be content. She was in our family grocery when the grocer offered a crate of twelve dozen eggs at wholesale price. She did not ask if he would warrant them fresh eggs, but closed the bargain at once and was very proud of her economy.

Mrs. Bowser wanted to make an egg omelet for dinner, and the first nine eggs out of that crate proved to be bad ones. Out of the twelve dozen eggs she found later on about three dozen good ones that is, they were not so bad but what they could be forced down the throat. Now, then, how would I have proceeded to buy twelve dozen eggs? I would have entered that grocery and said to the swindler who runs it:

"I want to buy a crate of eggs at wholesale. I want them for 10 cents a dozen less than retail price. I want every egg to be as fresh as the summer dew on a pumpkin vine. If there is a bad egg among them, or a shortage in the count, I will come in here and work such destruction in this old shanty of yours that you will have to go into bankruptcy inside of an hour. Don't think you can swindle me, you old hyena. I am up to the games you practice on innocent customers! Twelve dozen eggs, sir, and every one of them a fresh egg."

And wouldn't every egg have been fresh, and wouldn't I have saved a [illegible] or more where Mrs. Bowser lost two or three. Of course I would—of course. And has Mrs. Bowser ever told the public of the swindle in eggs? She has not even hinted it that such a thing occurred, and she never will.

One evening not so long ago she observed that our front steps needed repainting and that she wished I would employ a painter to do the job. I was about to declare that I would do it myself and thereby save $100, when she swished off on some other subject and shut me up. On the next day when a big tramp came along and begged for something to eat she asked him if he had ever done any painting.

"I have been a house painter for over twenty years," was his reply.

"How much will you ask to paint the front steps?"

"Only $3, ma'am, if you will furnish the paint. I wouldn't do it for any one else for less than $7."

We had five or six different kinds of paint down cellar, and Mrs. Bowser brought them up and mixed them altogether. There was no oil to thin them down, and so she poured in a pint of kerosene. The cook said that oil of some kind was highly necessary, and so she emptied a bottle of castor oil in on top of the kerosene, and the tramp went to work.

Were those steps when finished a thing of beauty and a joy forever? Not hardly—not as you could perceive. There were streaks of green and red and purple and lead color and white. There were spots of oil here and there. There were spots of the old paint showing through the fresh coat. They were variegated front steps. They were such as no house ever had before. This incident occurred days and days ago, but the steps have not been in use since, and they may not be for years and years to come.

The tramp had got his money and gone when I reached home, but a crowd still lingered in front of the house. I borrowed a ladder and climbed up to the chamber window to get in and found Mrs. Bowser mentally perturbed. But did I say anything to add to her sufferings? Not one single word. In fact, I patted her on the back and told her this was a good world to live in. She made the most of it when I bought a dozen hens and none of them laid an egg. But did I try to avenge on her when those steps were painted? Not a try!

I am still entering and leaving my house by way of the ladder and the window. But am I saying or doing anything to humiliate Mrs. Bowser? Not a thing. On the contrary, I am saying that she is a nice woman—a very nice woman—and I don't see how I could get along without her. She has her faults, as we all have, but I can excuse and overlook each and every one of them.

Will Marry Malay Princess.

Wallace Saunders, son of W. H. Saunders, of London, Ont., who many years ago was one of the big operators in the Petrolea oil fields, has landed at New York on a freighter after a 13,000-mile voyage from the Island of Java, accompanied by his bride-to-be, Princess Constanca Pappenheim, of the Royal house of the Malayan Islands. Three years ago Saunders left his Canadian home for Java, where he became chief driller for the Batavia Oil Company. He is bringing the Baroness that his mother may see her before the wedding, which he plans to stage at his old home.

Never before have the boys and girls of Peterborough County been offered the opportunity to enter a competition that contained so many advantages and inducements.

AN EQUAL CHANCE FOR ALL

No favoritism can be shown as each competitor is known only by a number. Drawings will be judged and prizes awarded according to merit.

Competitors divided into three classes according to age, thus affording all an equal chance—

Class Number One
Under 15 years and over 12 years of age.
Class Number Two
Under 12 years and over 9 years of age.
Class Number Three
Under 9 years of age

WILL CLOSE AT 6 p.m. MARCH 10 1917

ONE DAY MORE——ONE DAY MORE

THE Canadian Map Drawing Competition has created intense interest among the Boys and Girls both in the city and the County of Peterborough. The excellency of many of the drawings is really surprising. The Teachers whose scholars have sent in their drawings are deserving of great credit for the standard of attained by their pupils.

SAVOURY SCRAP SALT MEAT

This is a Scotch recipe. Chop finely the remains of cold salt meat and boil double the bulk of potatoes. Along with the potatoes parboil a small onion. Mash potatoes, chop onion, and mix these with chopped meat—the fat of the latter being utilized also. Season with pepper, and with floured hands make into meat cakes. Bake these on a greased tin in the oven for ten minutes or so until lightly browned.

PORK LOAF

Four pounds of fresh shoulder, one package of gelatine (no flavor), one onion, butter about the size of an egg. Take skin off shoulder, cut shoulder into pieces; fry in butter until brown on both sides, put into a saucepan; put in onion, salt and pepper; put the skin and bones in to give flavor. Cook until tender, then drain. Dissolve one envelope of gelatine into one-half cup cold water. Put in gelatine dissolved into gravy; put meat in bread pan (leave out skin and bones), then your mixed liquid (gelatine and gravy) on meat.

ONE FAMILY BUDGET

The woman who keeps household and personal accounts is less likely to lose money than the person who never has an idea how much or how little her purse contains. For the very fact of keeping accounts tends to make a person more careful in other ways, while it undoubtedly imbues one with a keener sense of the spending value of the dollars.

One household, where the annual income is approximately $1500, plans the disposal of the money on the following basis of percentage. While reading it, keep in mind that there are only two people in the family. If the family were larger and still subsisting on a similar income, there would be a bigger outlay for food necessary.

One Family's Budget.

The following is a rough estimate of their budget:

Food, 15 per cent.
Rent, 22 per cent
Clothes, 10 per cent.
Furniture, 7 per cent.
Operating expenses, 6 per cent.
Insurance (fire and life) 6 per cent.
Advancement in expenses, 5 per cent.
Savings, 14 per cent.
Christmas and other gifts, 3 per cent.
Holidays, 3 per cent.
Luxuries and amusements, 4 per cent.
Incidentals, 5 per cent.
Total, 100 per cent

In working out a system of keeping accounts, the important things are first to adopt a simple plan, and then to adhere to it strictly. Nothing will be gained by jotting things down whenever you happen to think of them. It must be systematic, and it will be found useful to keep a small book in which each day's expenses are written down.

Balance Is Important.

It is important, then, having totalled the day's expenses, to balance the cash on hand. If you started today with $30 and at the end have but $20 with expenses remembered of only $7, do not let it rest at that. For your own satisfaction find out what you did with the remainder of the money. You cannot otherwise estimate in your annual budget how the money should be aportioned.

In looking over the disposal of money shown here, you will find that the daily expense of food for two people is something over sixty cents. Compare your expenses with the budget presented here and see where you differ and where you agree.

CHEESE A SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT

We all remember the story of the grand dame of the Frensh Revolution, who, when she was told the people in the street were clamoring for bread, asked in surprise, "But why do they not eat cake?" With less disastrous results than followed the remark of the French queen, we can when deprived of our customary meat diet, find a substitute, in part, in cheese.

We need not rush into revolution and ruin the meat barons or berate the cold storage business but remember that when one article of food soars a lower priced one of similar nature can usually be found. Cheese is always considered an excellent meat substitute, and since France and England are sending their output to their men in their trenches, a goodly number of our neglected cheese factories have been re-opened and we can buy excellent cheese now at about 30c a pound, which is reasonable when the high nutritive value of this article is considered.

Happy indeed is the experienced cook when she finds a bit of stale cheese on hand. With it Welsh rabbit is possible, and cheese fondu, to say nothing of toasted cheese. But there, that is just the trouble, no one every says anything about it, and so only a few of us ever have it right. First, you must have cheese dry enough to grate. Mix three tablespoons of the dried, grated cheese with the yolks of two eggs and two tablespoons of fresh butter or salad oil. Season with a pinch of cayenne and salt. Toast the bread and spread the above mixture on it thickly. Put the slices in a dish, or pan, with a tight cover, and place in oven until hot through. Now take off the cover and brown the cheese lightly. As Dickens said, "After eating this the only things in life worth quarrelling with are the two lower buttons of your waistcoat."

For a creamy, smooth and rich Welsh rabbit try using fresh cream cheese some time. This rabbit will not have the snap to it that men folks insist upon, but why should all the cooking be done with the fear of what "they" like? Put half a cup of cream into a chafing dish with a cup of fresh cream cheese broken into bits, add two tablespoons of butter and light the heater. Stir until the butter, cream and cheese are melted. Have waiting the yolk of an egg beaten light with two teaspoons of mixed mustard, a half teaspoon of salt, a pinch of paprika, a bit of white pepper and another tablespoon of cream. Add these quickly and beat the mixture rapidly until it is well mixed. Serve on hot toasted crackers.

FOR HASTY IRONING

When you must launder a garment in a hurry, wash it as usual, then wrap up tightly in a Turkish towel. This will soon absorb the water and make it easy to iron.

If any piece to be ironed has been washed and is dry, wring a Turkish towel out of warm water and wrap the garment in it a few minutes. This will dampen it easily and make the ironing easy.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Whole Cornmeal

Q.—Throughout your article you have placed a great deal of emphasis on the merits of whole wheat and only occasionally extol the virtues of whole cornmeal. Does this mean that whole wheat is better than whole cornmeal, —Ashburnham.

There is no appreciable difference as far as nutrition is concerned between whole wheat and whole cornmeal. If whole wheat is mentioned more often in our articles than whole cornmeal, it is because whole wheat was chosen as a convenient example of an ideal whole grain. Whole wheat is representative of all whole grains, and so anything said about it is more or less true of grains in general.

Boil or Poach the Eggs

Q. What is the best way to cook eggs?

Mrs. H. B., McDonnel St.

It is much better to eat boiled eggs or poached eggs than the fried. It makes very little difference whether the eggs are boiled soft or hard although it it possible that the former possess some special merit.

Buttermilk Alone for Man

Q. What is the difference between buttermilk and sour milk?

D. L., Mark Street.

Sour milk is the broader term of the two and includes buttermilk. The latter is usually a carefully prepared beverage in which a pleasant sour taste is developed by the buttermilk bacillus. It may or may not contain fat.

Milk in which any of the numerous fermentative bacteria have done their little job is sour milk. Discolored milk, stringly milk, ropy milk, bitter milk, all produced by bacterial action. In short, any spoiled or decomposed milk may be properly termed sour milk. The only sour milk fit for human consumption is butter milk.

WHAT STAGE FOLK EAT

It is something of a shock to learn that Riccardo Martin's favorite dish is smothered sausages, and the sensitive will shudder when Elsie Janis frankly suggests "Add the onion." None of the stars will seem quite the same to you after reading celebrated Actor-Folks' Cookeries, devised by Mabel Rowland for the benefit of the Red Cross and the Actors' Fund.

Charlie Chaplin expresses a preference for apple roll. Bertha Kalich is the one who recommend custard. The charming Miss Martha Hedman, of The Boomberang, is one and the same person as the young lady who sends in a recipe which begins ominously. "Remove the skin and bone from a half dozen salt herring." After the thing is done you call it "sillsallad." "This is one of the dishes we like best in Sweden," writes Miss Hedman. "Nearly every household has it for a week-end dish."

Laurette Taylor recommends a dish called Bortsch Polonaise, and the ingredients read like the contents of a Christmas basket for a family of deserving poor.

You can't even begin to worry a Bortsch Polonaise until you have one small duck, one pound brisket of beef, one boquet-garni, consisting of fennel, marporam, thyme, bay leaf, carrot and parsley; two cloves, three fresh cup mushrooms, two ounces butter, one small beetroot, one leek, one cabbage heart, one onion, two quarts clarified beef broth (white consomme), one-quarter pound Italian sausage, sour cream and seasoning. And all you get out of that is just soup.

Theda Bara loves contrast. She will quit the rehearsal of a vampire picture any time to eat snails. Marjorie Rambeau, who has figured in many newspaper and magazine pictures as a housewife, has nothing more startling to suggest than fried bananas. William Courtleigh, the matinee idol, takes a chance when he begins "rub the chafing dish with a piece of garlic," but it all simmers down to nothing more than poached eggs.

If you must know how Lillian Russell defies time and all that sort of business, it's because she eats creamed mushrooms.

DRINK HOT WATER

A cup of hot water before breakfast is beneficial. It helps to loosen up mucous accumulations in the stomach and to dissolve and carry off refuse matter. Many cases of dyspepsia and weak stomach have been cured by the hot water habit.

BUTTER SCOTCH

SOFT MOLASSES COOKIES

Add to one cup molasses one and three-quarter teaspoons soda and beat thoroughly; add one cup sour milk, half a cup of shortening melted, two teaspoons ginger, one teaspoon salt, and enough flour to make a fixture that will drop easily from a spoon. Let stand several hours in a cool place to thoroughly chill. Toss half the mixture at a time on slightly floured board and roll lighty to one-fourth inch thickness. Shape with a cutter dipped in four, and bake on buttered pan.

OYSTERS IN CHAFING DISH

Two tablespoonfuls of butter, one eighth teaspoonful of white pepper, one teaspoonful of salt and one pint of oysters. Put the ingredients, except the oysters, in the chafing dish, and when this is hot add the oysters. Cover, and shake the pan occasionally. When the oysters are plump, add enough cream to make one cup of liquid. Serve hot with toast or crisp crackers.

No Grant for Batt.

Peterborough's tax rate for 1917 will be 28 mills on the dollar, the same as last year. This was decided on at the Committee of the Whole Council last night, when the aldermen met to consider the appropriations for the present year. The pruning knife having been applied at the different committee meetings, it was a comparatively easy matter to deal with the special grants and other expenditures of the municipality, and while the figures total up about seven-tenths of a mill higher, the members of the council decided that they can manage to cover all emergencies by allowing the 1916 rate to remain.

The Board of Works is provided with about $6,000 more spending facilities than last year. Ald. Weir, the chairman of the board, thought that his department being the last considered was going to come in for the axe instead of the knife, but the estimate of $35,880 was agreed on without a murmur. The appropriation last year was $29,928.

Ald. McIntyre as chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, will have an extended appropriation of $1,000. The committee making the estimate $1,500 instead of $500 so as to get after new industries.

The legal and reception committee had their appropriation increased $400.

In the treasury department several salary increases were provided for. F. J. A. Hall, the auditor, will get $400 instead of $300. Miss Swinton gets a $50 increase, the committee fixing her salary at $750. Miss Burgess, the stenographer, gets an increase of $100. These increases take effect from Jan. 1.

Children's Aid Grant

The Children's Aid Society wanted a grant of $800 for the care of the children at the shelter. Last year the city granted $300 and the Council decided to double the grant, and it passed at $600.

Ald. Smith had some fault to find with the workings of the society and was against Ald. Dobbin's suggestion to make the grant $700. The $600 motion was carried, Ald. Dobbin, Weir, Stratton and Duncan voting for the higher grant.

$850 for Parks

The Horticultural Society grant came in for considerable discussion. Ald. Dobbin thought that as the city had to pay $125 damages last year for carelessness on the part of the society, that this sum should be taken out of whatever grant was made this year.

Mayor Duffus would like to see every encouragement given to the beautifying of the city. The society would have the two parks to look after this year.

Ald. Saunders and Dobbin moved that the grant be the same as last year, $750.

The society asked $1200 owing to cost of labor material and improvements contemplated.

Ald. McIntyre and Smith moved that the grant be $850 and they had the support of Ald. Stratton, Weir and Taylor, and it carried.

Exhibition and Bands

The Peterborough Agricultural Society was voted a grand of $600 and an appropriation of $600 was set aside for band purposes.

The Poultry Association were also voted $75.

Remove Slush From Walks

The snow plowing contractors will have to make a tour of their routes during the slushy weather. Alderman Weir, chairman of the board of works, promised to see that this work is done. Several aldermen at the meeting of the committee of the whole last night had received complaints about the condition of certain streets, and a personal investigation showed that the condition of the streets justified a very strong protest.

SYMPATHY FROM SOLDIERS AT THE BATTLE FRONT

PTE. LESLIE HOWDEN WAS KILLED BY BULLET FROM RIFLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howden, Romaine Street, have received a letter signed by Pte. J. W. Ebbs and a number of Port Hope and Peterboro boys in which is extended to the parents the sympathy of the comrades of their late son Pte. Leslie Howden, who was killed in action:

"I am writing a few lines which on any other occasion would be a great pleasure but now is a matter of deepest sorrow and sympathy," writes Pte. Ebbs. "I am writing to let you know how your dear son met his death on the battle field in the fight for freedom and justice. It will help to comfort you to know that he suffered no pain as he was hit on the head by a rifle shot and lived only forty-eight hours never regaining consciousness. The best medical skill did not avail. He was prepared to meet his Judge and was at church service the morning previous.. Your son was a friend with all of us and his kindness and manly ways will live love in our memory. It was the will of God, and, as the Scriptures say, "Thy will be done." We all join in sending our most heartfelt sympathy to you and your family in your sad beravement. — (Signed).

Port Hope boys—Ptes. Cavanagh, Smith, Towsley, Jordin, Clark, Bryan, Staples, Curry, Johnston, Emrie and Humphreys.

Peterborough boys — Ptes. W. Ebbs, D. F. Robertson, E. Denstead, B. Wattley, J. W. Herron and C. orman.

A line of sympathy is also written by Lieut. H. O. Ross.

CANADA MUST GIVE BRAWN AND MUSCLE

LT. R. R. SPARKS TO RECRUIT HERE FOR FORESTRY BATTALION.

The call has come from over the sea for 5,000 Canadian bushmen to work in the forests of Great Britain and France.

Lieut. R. R. Sparks of Ottawa has recently been authorized to raise a forestry reinforcement draft in Military District No. 3 and will be in Peterborough on Monday in the interests of his unit.

Premier Lloyd George has announced in the British Parliament that no importation of timber will hereafter be permitted until the tonnage problem has been solved In consequence of this an appeal has been made to Canada to supply the brawn and muscle to fell the trees and make the timber in the British Isles and in France. Men who have been rejected for combatant units may now have an opportunity of serving their country as the physical standard for forestry is much less exacting. The age limit is also raised to 48 years. Lt. Sparks may be seen at the Oriental Hotel on and after Monday, March 12.

CANADIANS SING "PUT ME IN MY LITTLE NEISSEN BED"

Premier Borden and Party Review Canadian Troops and Bugle Band Plays "Jingle Bells."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 10. — (By Stewart Lyon.) — In honor of Sir Robert Borden, whose last visit to the front took place in 1915, when the Canadians held the Ypres salient under conditions that made their exploit history, a review took place at the Canadian headquarters in France on Friday morning. The famous 1st Brigade of the original division marched past the Premier and his party, which included Prince Arthur of Connaught and Hon. Robt. Rogers and Hon. J. D. Hazen. Relatively few men were at Ypres, but reinforcements maintain the glorious tradition when the occasion served.

Since the Somme battle the Canadians have been treated with the greatest respect by the enemy, and their losses have been relatively light. The men reviewed were splendidly fit, and the entire corps is in a similar condition, and look forward confidently to the end of the present inactive period.

The party later visited part of the front and obtained a general idea of the configuration of ground held by the Canadians, and gained a view of the German lines. Watchful aviators hovered over to prevent the enemy from observing any unusual movement of troops or from learning where to plant an admonitory shell. During the march past a bugle band of an Ontario battalion played "Jingle Bells," which the cold weather rendered appropriate.

A recent invention adding greatly to the comfort of the soldiers is the "Neissen Hut." It is semi-circular and looks like a gigantic piece of stove-pipe half buried in the earth, with doors and windows at the end. Each holds twenty-five men and one thousand huts have been ordered. They are easily transported and very rapidly erected, which means sleep under cover for many who would otherwise bivouac under the sky. Already "Put me in my little Neissen bed" has become a popular song.

FATALLY INJURED

W. H. Staples of Cavan Hurt in Woods, Succumbs.

A very serious accident occurred in Cavan yesterday morning which resulted in the death of Mr. W. H. Staples, a well-known and prosperous farmer of the township.

Mr. Staples was in the woods, a short distance from his residence, engaged in felling a tree. In the fall a limb rebounded and struck him on the side of his head, fracturing the skull.

He was removed to the house in an unconscious condition and medical aid was summoned from Peterborough. Dr. Eastwood arrived and gave the injured man attention. Mr. Staples never regained consciousness and passed away about ten o'clock last night.

A Successful Farmer

Deceased was a prominent, progressive and at the same time very successful farmer, taking a deep interest in the welfare of the community and was active in the affairs of of the Durham Agricultural Society. In religion he was a Methodist centring his activities in the Cavanville Methodist Church, where he was Sunday School superintendent for over 30 years.

Politically, Mr. Staples was a staunch Conservative and was at all times a strong adherent to the policy of his party. He was born in Manvers a son of the late Samuel Staples. Surviving are Mrs. Staples, two daughters, Miss Muriel of Winnipeg and Elsie, who is attending the Lindsay Collegiate Institute, and one son, Mr Melville Staples, who was interned in Germany when war opened and is now attached to the Canadian Patriotic Fund office, Ottawa.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock from the family residence, Lot 17, Con. 10 of Cavan, and proceed to Little Lake Cemetery.

OWNER SICK IN BED WHEN HOUSE BURNS

DWELLING OF T. SPENCER IS DESTROYED BY FIRE.

By a fire that it is believed had its origin in a defective chimney, the home of Thomas Spencer on the 11th Concession of Smith was destroyed yesterday. Mr. Spencer was ill in bed but was removed to safety and is now at the home of a neighbor. Some of the contents of the home were saved.

The fire was first noticed by Mr. Jacob Snelgrove, who was on his way to attend an auction sale. When he reached the house the upper rooms were in flames.

The house was of brick construction and was on the property known as the John Rogers farm. It was the first brick house erected in Smith and at that time was considered the finest residence in the township. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Only three weeks ago Mr. Spencer buried his eldest daughter, Mary Spencer.

MISS KEMP WILL SING

By special request Miss Etta Kemp will sing the famous English recruiting song, Carry On, at the meeting at the Armories on Sunday night.

Speakers' Patriotic League Call Important Meeting for Monday

To the Citizens of Peterborough:

At the meeting at the Armories last week to discuss the recruiting situation in Peterborough with Major Campbell, the recruiting officer for this military district, a resolution was passed asking the executive of the Speakers' Patriotic League to be a committee to call a meeting of the manufacturers, storekeepers and business men generally for the purpose of settling ways and means for more efficient co-operation between the business men of the city and the officers of the 247th Battalion.

It has been decided to call this meeting for Monday, March 12th, at 8 p.m., in the recreation room at the Armories, and all manufacturers, storekeepers, business men generally and all others interested in the share Peterborough should take in the defence of the Empire are urged to attend.

This is a matter of vital importance to the city. The military authorities have stated most emphatically that unless the people of Peterborough show more real interest in the local battalion it will be moved from the city. We have been given a few weeks to make good. It is up to us to do it.

The time has come for all patriotic people in the city to join hands in the common cause of upholding the honor of Peterborough and in the infinitely greater common cause of upholding the honor of the Empire. There are still fourteen hundred eligible young men in the city, and the 247th Battalion needs nine hundred more to bring it to strength. Let us not wait for the Government to disgrace these young men of our city by forcing them into the ranks. Let us rather persuade them to join now as free men, ready without coercion to do their bit and prepared without the ignominy of conscription to fight for King and Country.

Be on hand at the Armories Monday night without fail.

PLAN FOR EXTENSIVE SHIP-CONSTRUCTION IN CANADA FOR BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, March 10. — An extensive program of shipbuilding for the British Government in Canada is in contemplation, announces a London cable to the Montreal Star. If plans which are now in view are carried out successfully, the existing shipyards in Canada will all be utilized for the construction of steel steamers of large carrying capacity, while new industries along the same line will be established on a large scale. It is learned that the British Government, in utilizing the resources of Canada in this way, is acting through the Imperial Munitions Board, and there is reason to believe that with the available resources of raw material there may be developed in the Dominion a steel shipbuilding industry equalling in extent the vast enterprises of the munitions business.

TRIAL BY ORDEAL IS SUGGESTED TO COURT

By Mohammedan Counsel for Wheeldons Charged With Conspiring to Kill Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 10. — Summing up the case of the four prisoners charged with conspiring to murder Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson, S. H. Riza, the Mohammedan lawyer acting as attorney for the defence, startled the court room by suggesting a trial by ordeal. He referred to the mediaeval form of judicial trial in which, in the place of evidence, supernatural aid is invoked as in a test by fire, water, poison or other agencies.

Attorney Riza had been endeavoring to impress the jury with the alleged sinister significance of the failure of the Crown to produce certain witnesses against the four prisoners, Mrs. Wheeldon, her two daughters and son-in-law. This person, he said, was "a man who should have been its principal witness, namely, the mysterious secret government agent known as Gordon." The attorney declared that Gordon was a police spy who had started the whole plot, who had lured the defendants on, and then, when he had got them well within his net, had handed them over to another agent named Booth, so that his own connection with the case would not be so flagrantly apparent.

"Why was it not possible for Gordon to come into court and face the jury?" asked Riza. "Because from him," he continued, "the jury would have drawn a different version of the case. It rests on the evidence of Booth, who, moreover, was allowed to read the whole of his evidence. In the absence of this mysterious Gordon, this trial is not a trial. Before the jury commits the defendants it should insist on the production of Gordon in the interests of the public and the safety of the country."

SOME NEW PROGRESS BY FRENCH

Germans Attempt to Recapture Ground in Champagne.

ALSO ATTACK ON VERDUN FRONT

Penetrated Trenches But Failed to Hold.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 10. — Violent fighting occurred in the Champagne last night in consequence of a German attempt to recapture ground won by the French between Butte de Mesnil and Maisons de Champagne.

Today's official statement says that after several desperate charges had been made with alternative advances and retreats, the French succeeded in holding all the ground they had gained, and in making fresh progress.

On the Verdun front Germans attacked trenches recaptured by the French north of Caurieres wood. They penetrated these positions at some points, but were ejected by a counter-attack.

French continued their raids, penetrating German positions east of Armancourt as far as the third trenches and taking prisoners near Crouy, northeast of Soissons.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1917

NO BATHING BEACHES.

AJAX BUILT UP a reputation for courage by defying the lightning. Certain of the city aldermen as recklessly wooed disaster and tempted fate by voting against the motion of Alderman Stratton to grant $2000 to establish municipal bathing beaches. With them, economy, a fraction of a mill off the tax rate, is of more moment than cleanliness and the safety of the boys and girls of the city. Practical godliness does not appeal to the unterrified. The dauntless five are Aldermen Dobbin, Saunders, Langford, Duncan and Taylor, and the only reason they could give for the faith that is in them is that the present time is not opportune and that the expense should be put off until a more convenient season.

Every woman in Peterborough, whether spinster, wife or widow who expended so much time and energy in working up this proposition and laying the case before Council, will have a vote at the next municipal election, and the new voters will treasure in their memory what was done by the city fathers last night.

The matter would probably have been carried through if Alderman Worth had not been absent, as he has always taken an active interest in the playground movement and is an advocate of municipal bathing beaches.

A FROST FOR THE BATTALION.

ALDERMAN STRATTON at last night's meeting of Council moved that the city make a grant of $1000 to the 247th Battalion as an aid in the work of recruiting. This motion was lost on a tie. Those who voted on the negative side were Aldermen Dobbin, Saunders, Langford, Taylor and Weir. It seems that the quintette were not opposed to the battalion or lukewarm in the matter of recruiting. With them it was the method of granting aid. They were of the opinion that all financial assistance should come from the Government.

Peterborough has an interest in keeping the battalion here. It will be removed to some other place if no progress is shown in securing men here within the next two months. The battalion needs money to carry on the work. If it is taken away from Peterborough instead of being raised to its full strength, the financial loss to the city will amount to many times more than the grant proposed by Alderman Stratton. As a business proposition pure and simple, the matter was worthy of a better fate.

REMEMBER THE ORPHANS.

THE CHILDREN of this city may be bereft of their parents, but there are always the kindly and charitable ready to come forward and care for the little ones. It is one of the city's proudest boasts that the orphaned and the helpless are looked after as well as they are in any place in the world. None are allowed to suffer. State and Church co-operate in acts of kindness that have nothing of the chill of charity.

There are forty-five parentless children in the St. Vincent Orphanage. The natal day of the Patron Saint of Ireland is usually made the occasion for making collections for the benefit of the inmates of this institution. Saturday of next week will be tag day for the good of the children. For a voluntary contribution you can secure a shamrock, and the proceeds will be devoted to the noblest of all works, the care of the helpless orphans. Responses to these appeals have always been generous in the past. The needs of the institution are constantly growing, and this year the offerings should be more liberal than ever.

WARRING WITH THE INEVITABLE.

THE ORILLIA PACKET refuses to be reconciled to fate and fall in with the latest social revolution brought about by the Hearst Government, the conferring of the franchise upon women. The Packet says, with a fierceness that surprises us:

> A prominent Peterborough Conservative, who has for years taken a very active part in elections, is so disgusted and disheartened by the action of the Government and the Legislature in the matter of woman suffrage, that he writes to The Review to say that he is done with politics. The entire proceedings is a scandal and an outrage. Almost equally indecent is the conduct of the party press in general. The idea uppermost in the minds of all appears to be present party advantage. Debate on the question there has been none. Party followers have been docile to the last degree. A flock of sheep might show more independence. If we are to take our ideals of government from the course of our leaders on this question, in press and Parliament, where shall we end? If the leader of the Government, in mad haste, acts upon the orders of Mr. N. W. Rowell, and N. W. Rowell takes his direction from shrieking, unthinking and irresponsible faddists outside the Legitiature, we might as well have no government at all. Hours may be spent in a party wrangle over the expenditure of one or two thousand dollars, or an obscure section of tion of the Ditches and Watercourses Act, but a change more revolutionary and fraught with more vital consequences than any which has been made in the history of the country, is decided upon without debate, and accepted by every man in the House, Grit or Tory, without protest or question. Thousands—hundreds of thousands of Conservatives, we doubt not—would like to know from Sir William Hearst how long he intends to continue to fill the role of understudy to the leader of the Opposition. If the policy is to be permanent, Sir William's followers might, after all, accept with complacency the often talked of deposition of Mr. Rowell. Dewart, if he has less honesty than Rowell, may easily have more sense.

What surprises us most of all in reading the above is that The Packet fails to give any reason for the claim that women, now that they have the vote, will scatter ruin and desolation around them and work general havoc with the social and political structure. The adoption of equal suffrage was not unexpected by anyone who has watched the trend of events for the past few years. The fact that the party press almost unanimously supports the Government in this matter does not denote a sudden change of front on the part of the newspapers. About a year ago The Packet took The Review to task for editorial approval of woman's right to vote, and even then admitted that other journals of the same party were showing a disposition to fall from what our Orillia contemporary regards as grace. Equal suffrage may be as drastic as The Packet says; it may mean as much to the province; but one thing is certain, it does not come as a bolt from the blue.

The other day The Review asked whether, when a man spoke of deserting his party on this issue, his declaration is to be taken as a threat or a promise. With exaggerated sensitiveness The Packet brands this as an insult and says we may yet find out that it applies to hundreds of the rank and file.

It is hardly fair to take in all seriousness something that has been spoken in half jest. Yet it must be said that one great trouble with the Conservative party has been old fogeyism that looks askance at anything that bears the least appearance of newness. There are on the old ship too many barnacles that can give no reasonable excuse for their presence, too many men in the fold who have been thrust into it. Members of the party should try to break through the crusts of traditions and emerge from the fog of prejudice that envelops them. This is an age of progress, in the political as well as in the religious and industrial world. We have always regarded The Packet as one of the brightest of our contemporaries. We have prized its approval just as we have profited by its criticisms, and we are proud to be in a position to state that it has been sparing of neither. The opinion which we have formed of it as a sane authority on public questions and a champion of truth and justice makes it all the harder to understand why it should display so much fury at the very idea of women being given the right to vote.

MUNICIPAL CONTROL OF THE POLICE.

THE AGITATION for the municipal control of the police force crops up in Peterborough every spring, and extends more or less over the entire province. Time and again municipalities unite in a request to the Legislature that the change be made, but so far all such applications have resulted in failure. The move now contemplated along the same lines is almost certain to meet the same fate.

The present status of the police force in Peterborough and all over Ontario is not the result of arbitrary action. The Government is ready with valid reasons for maintaining the system as it is. The primary object in view was to keep the police force free from interference on the part of the local wire-pullers, to save it from even a suspicion of politics. The work of the police is provincial, not merely local, in its scope. The officers here may at any time be called upon to co-operate with the guardians of law and order throughout the entire Dominion.

The police differs from the fire department, the work of the latter not extending outside the city. If every building in Peterborough fell a prey to fire, the conflagration would not threaten the safety of the surrounding towns and cities. An epidemic of crime unchecked in this city would endanger the peace of the entire Dominion.

Public health has been put in the same class as public morality. Epidemics of diseases are as dangerous to the people generally as epidemics of crime. Co-operation is essential to make the province healthy, as it is to make it free of vice. That is the one great reason why the province has assumed authority over and insists upon the right to appoint the district officers of health. In purely local matters self-government is assured the cities, but in affairs of provincial scope the Legislature refuses to surrender all authority.

The city has, in the person of the Mayor, a representative on the Police Commission, the other members being the Police Magistrate and the County Judge. The municipality cannot justly maintain that the arrangement bars it from a voice in the proceedings. As in everything else, the success of the system depends largely upon the men who operate it. There should be harmony between the city's representative and those who hold office by virtue of their appointment by the higher power. If, however, there is occasional friction, such would be sure to arise under any system that could be adopted.

WHY THE TAX RATE IS HIGH.

IN THE YEAR 1900 the population of Peterborough was slightly over ten thousand. The tax rate was 17 mills on the dollar, and the per capita tax was $6 87. In the year of grace 1916, with a population of twenty-two thousand, the rate was 28 mills, and the tax paid reckoned on the per capita basis was $16 60. The same rate prevails this year.

It will be noted at once that the rate on the thousand and per capita has increased out of all proportion to the population, steady and satisfactory as that has been. The rate, however, is low when compared to that in other cities, either smaller or larger than Peterborough, and the same was true seventeen years ago when comparisons were made with other towns.

Mayor Duffus is ready with statistics to show why the rate has gone up to such an extent. The municipal officials of the past were noted most of all for economy. Even when the town attained the status of a city, progress was made slowly. There were few banquets in those days to excite civic pride and work up popular enthusiasm. Peterborough five years ago had no paved streets. All the improvements that swell the tax rate have been made within the past ten years, and now this city, in modern attire, can hold up its head with the best of them. The property owners may be inclined occasionally to grumble at their lot, but in all fairness they must admit that they have been given full value for their money. The value of their holdings has grown with every improvement made in the city. Living expenses are, of course, lower in a small village, but small centres of population lack the advantages that are enjoyed by city residents.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IT SEEMS IMPOSSIBLE to convince some of the aldermen that cleanliness is next to godliness.

• • • •

NATURALLY the public would expect something different from one so sartorially perfect as Alderman Langford.

• • • •

THE $20000 ASKED for the bathing beaches would have meant an additional one-sixth of a mill on the tax rate, a small matter when compared with the value of the life of someone's child.

HOW BOY SCOUTS WIN MEDALS

Since the Boy Scouts movement was organized eight years ago, Boy Scouts in the United Kingdom have earned 1,885 medals for various acts of gallantry and 34 certificates of merit; 175 of these medals were awarded during the past year, according to the annual report of the executive committee of the council, which is just to hand.

It seems little short of remarkable that 78 out of the 175 medals awarded during the past year were for life saving, when it is estimated that this is practically double the average number of medals awarded in this connection in any previous year. In the foregoing seven years 375 life-saving medals were awarded to Boy Scouts. The awards during the past twelve months were as folows: Bronze Cross (for heroic acts), 2; Silver Cross (for gallantry with risk) 16; medals for life saving, 78; silver wolf (special merit), 14; medals of merit, 65.

Much attention has been paid to public services lately and the boys have been encouraged by the offer of war service badges. For instance, 38,392 war service badges were awarded to Scouts who put in 28 days' voluntary service in aid of war causes, and 2,232 badges to Scouts who completed 100 days' service in a similar way. This war work includes all kinds of public services, such as assisting the police and fire brigades, etc. Coastwatching is another form of service which has grown in popularity among the Scouts of England. The arrangement with the Admiralty for the supply of Boy Scouts to assist in coastwatching still continues and numbers, varying from 1,300 to 1,800 have been employed in this way. They have won the cordial appreciation of the Admiral in charge of Coastguards. Badges for 84 days' coastwatching were awarded to 2,208 Scouts.

Handicrafts

Vocational training is receiving merited consideration from the leading educationalists, not only in Canada, but throughout the Allied countries. At this point mention may be made of the training which Boy Scouts receive, leading up to this line of endeavor in the technical schools. Badges are awarded to Boy Scouts who show proficiency to a certain standard in the following subjects: Carpentering, basket making, engineering, plumbing, printing and a number of other useful trades.

The Chief Scout and founder of the Boy Scouts movement, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, is most anxious to extend the development of handicrafts among Scouts in all parts of the Empire. Many boys through proficiency badges are enabled to discover for themselves their inclinations and find vocations which appeal to their natural abilities.

HOW TO PLAN AND PLANT THAT GARDEN IN THE BACK YARD

Daily Reminder.

March 1-15:

1. Plan garden.
2. Plant indoors seed for early cabbage, cauliflower, onions and egg plant.

Onions.

Planting Table:

Plant indoors, March 1-15.
Transplant outdoors, as soon as danger of severe frost is past.
Plant seed and set outdoors, April 1st.
Plant seed ½ to 1 inch.
Plant sets 1 to 1½ inches.
Harvest sets June 1st.
Harvest seed onions Sept. 1st.

Varieties for Ontario:

Seed — Southport Yellow Globe, Southport Red Globe, Danvers Yellow Globe, Red Wethersfield.
Pickling—Silver Skin, Barletta.
Green—White Welsh, Egyptian.
Transplanted—Prizetaker.

The onion is a native of Central or West Asia and is adapted to many soils. Sandy or sandy-loam soils have found to be excellent in the growing of onions, although perhaps the best land for onion-growing in Ontario is the black muck soil of reclaimed swamps. Whatever the soil, it should be rich in vegetable matter, and therefore heavy applications of manure should be made annually. Commercial fertilizers are preferable in the case of muck soils. The ground should also be limed every three years to prevent acidity.

In planting the seed the first requirement is good quality in the seed. It is sown outside in rows 12 and 15 inches apart, enough seed being sown in each foot of ground to insure about 8 or 10 plants. Cover the seeds with ¼ to ½ inch of earth, according as the soil is heavy or light. Thinning and transplanting of the young plants is unnecessary in the case of onions, although it is sometimes dine. However, cultivation is very important, for the weeds must be kept down. Until early summer, hoeing should take place every two weeks. When the onions are ready for harvesting the tops will become dry and fall over. The roots die at the same time, and onions should be pulled when the roots are almost dead. After pulling, let onions dry in the sun for three or four days, and then cut off the tops ine inch from the bulb and store in a cool cellar in bags ir baskets suspended from the ceiling.

To obtain very large onions or Spanish varieties, sow the seed in flats about the 1st of March in rows 2½ inches apart. The young plants must be given careful attention so that they will not dampen off. When the tops have reached a height of five inches they may be cut off to induce stocky growth. This cutting should be done every week. Keep the tops at a height of 3½ to 4 inches. The plants may be thinned out in the flats, but can be grown quite thickly. Before transplanting they must be wel hadened oi. The setting-out occurs as soon as the severe frosts are over, when the onions are 3-16 inch in diameter, being planted 8 inches apart in rows from 1½ to 3 feet apart. The latter distance is used when another crop is grown in between the rows. When harvested, these onions should weigh 1½ to 2 pounds.

Green onions are usually obtained from sets (young onions), planted as soon as the soil can be worked in the spring. They are planted right side up in drills 12 inches apart, each onion being three inches from its neighbor. By this very easy method young green onions may be had in June, and they will be fit for table use by July 1.

Wit and Wisdom

Modern Thrift

"Are you saving up anything for a rainy day?" asked the thrifty cittzen.

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "In a little while I expect to have enough to buy a brand new top for my automobile."

Bobby's Reason

"Why did you spell 'bank' with a capital, Bobby?"

"'Cause pa says a bank ought always to have a good big capital."

Making It All Right

An old lady who had been introduced to a doctor who was also a professor in a university felt somewhat puzzled as to how she would address the great man.

"Shall I call you 'doctor' or 'professor'?" she asked.

"Oh, just as you wish," was the reply; "as a matter of fact, some people call me an old idiot."

"Indeed," she said sweetly, "but then, they are people that know you."

True Pleasure

"Major Rasher, I saw a man today who would like the pleasure of kicking you," said a friend.

"Kicking me!" exploded the major. "Kicking me! Give me his name at once!"

"I hardly like to tell you," said the other.

"I insist upon knowing," said the major.

"Oh, well, I'll tell you," said the other. "It's a soldier who's in the hospital with both legs off."

Poor John Henry

The young husband who had not found married life exactly a path of roses, and who sincerely wished to prove to his wife the depth of his affection, went home one evening and said cheerfully:

"Well, Tilda, you can't guess what I have done today."

"Made a fool of yourself, as usual," replied Tilda, ungraciously.

"That's as you look at it, dear one."

"Oh, John Henry," said the wife. "If you've done anything more than usually idiotic, out with it and have done with it! What under the creation have you been up to now?"

"Tilda, dearest, I have insured my life."

"Well," said the irate little woman, "I always knew you were mean! Insured your life, indeed! Ah! always loking out for yourself first!"

otes For Ladies !— CARS FOR LADIES !

The day of the "closed" car has arrived and the FORD SEDAN has solved the question. For Fall, Winter and Spring driving as well as for Summer use so that the occupants may be free from dust, etc., it is unexcelled.

The price is only $890. You can use it the year round. You get with the Ford Sedan the same satisfactory "Service" and economy as goes with the other Ford cars.

It is the ideal car for a lady. We will have one in stock in a few days, so if you want to pay more money for a car than the price of the Ford touring car, wait for the Sedan.

KITCHENER WON GAME BUT HAMS HOLD CHAMPIONSHIP

Hamilton Hockey Club Intermediate Title Holders by Round Score of 9 to 6.

KITCHENER WON GAME SPORT

The Hamilton Hockey Club's representatives in the Intermediate series of the O.H.A. are Ontario champions of the winter pastime. The team held Kitchener to a 3 - 1 score at Kitchener last night, thus winning the round by 9 - 6. Peterborough fans will extend congratulations to Bob Parker's champions but will never recover from the surprise of that third period calamity at Hamilton, when the Hams ousted the Petes from the championship race.

Local fans will always hold to the opinion that had the Peterborough Soldiers not suffered the loss of Armstrong the Ambitious City squad would have been relegated to the ranks of the also-rans and that the Hamilton Club's receipts would have been decreased to the extent of two bits, price of a telegram to the management of the 247th Batt. team, congratulating the Peterborough team on winning the championship.

"Activated Sludge" Process in Sewage Disposal at Chicago

Was Recommeded for Peterboro by the City Engineer.

CHICAGO, March 10 — Packingtown is to have a new sewage disposal plant to cost approximately $3,500,000 and Bubbly Creek will be a thing of the past if recommendations in the report of engineers representing the sanitary district and the packers are carried out. The report is to be submitted to the engineering committee of the sanitary board on Monday. It is the result of months of investigation. The "activated sludge" process for reducing the industrial wastes of the Stockyards district will be recommended by the experts.

Wallace G. Clark, chairman of the engineering committee, said today that the main point to be settled is the proportion of the cost for the building of the plant and operation of the system to be borne by the sanitary district and the packers respectively. The annual cost of the operation of the proposed new plant is estimated at $800,000, which will be greatly reduced by the sale of fertilizer, a by-product of the sludge process.

The probable site of the plant is land owned by the district at West 39th and Iron Streets, adjoining the city municipal garbage reduction plant.

Public School Boys Lost at Lakefield

Public school boys playing hockey at Lakefield this morning were defeated by the Grove School team by a score of 13 to 1. The local lads found difficulty in playing on the small ice surface.

The return game will be played here next Tuesday, when the Pubs hope to give a better account of themselves.

The teams were:

DE LAVAL WON TWO FROM C.G.E.

De Laval won two out of three games from the C.G.E. last night. Both teams rolled very small scores, the players being under the weather with colds. The C.G.E. were also badly handicapped without Bishop and Carly, who are on the sick list. Jardine had high count for C.G.E. and Carter for De Laval.

The scores:

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physican.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath, or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes, all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected, organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally, because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

(By the "Y." Scribe.)

A program of vocal music and phonograph selections will be put on at the meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Every man and older boy is invited to drop in.

◆ ◆ ◆

By a misunderstanding, Mrs. Jos. Wearing was announced to address the High School Club last evening. Mr. Wearing was in Lindsay, but his address to the boys will be given Friday, March 16th. The subject for discussion at the club meeting last night was "The Self-Centred Man." The discussion was led by Mr. Meserve.

◆ ◆ ◆

The Hexathelon events are being conducted at the Y. M. C. A. this week, over 100 boys participating. These are annual events and are run off according to standards set up by the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. Different city associations are grouped together according to membership enrolment. Peterborough in these events is contesting against Toronto Central, Hamilton, Ottawa and other large associations of Canada. The boys however are taking a great interest in the effort and are making good records in all events.

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT
78 Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont.,
August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel rundown and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

TAX RATE IS UNCHANGED, BUT NO BATHING BEACHES

Health Association

The Peterborough Health Association had asked the council for a grant of $100 a month but the committee decided to recommend $1,000 as the grant for 1917.

The Speakers' Patriotic League were voted $300.

Beaches Turned Down

The Playgrounds Association presented a petition to the council some time ago asking that an appropriation of $2,000 be set aside for the purpose of supervised bathing beaches. When this matter came up last night Ald. Saunders thought that the city had got along without them this far, and it could do without them this year.

Ald. Langford would support the appropriation in ordinary times.

Ald. Weir would not turn down a grant for military purposes and give $2,000 to swimming ponds.

Ald. Dobbin and Duncan were opposed to the grant this year.

Ald. Stratton and Smith backed a resolution providing $2,000 for the purpose.

Ald. McIntyre thought that the deputation should be recognized.

Ald. Saunders and Langford moved in amendment that no action be taken and this carried.

British Sailors' Relief

The British Sailors' Relief Fund were voted $3,000 on a motion of Ald. Langford and Saunders.

247th Battalion Fund

Col. Ackerman and Major O'Flynn waited on the committee and asked for a grant of $1,400 towards the recruiting fund of the 247th Batt. The O.C. stated that the government had promised $5,000 in instalments of $1,000 for a special recruiting fund but he had been given to understand that his application for the second $1,000 had been laid aside as the government had ceased making the grant. The battalion had overdrawn on their account in the Canadian Bank of Commerce to the extent of $400 and it would require $1400 to run them till the end of April. The county would be asked to grant $700 for the same purpose. At present it cost about $150 to $175 for each recruit.

Major O'Flynn stated that there were from 12 to 15 men in the country every day after recruits and the chief expense was in livery hire and extra expenses. Belleville had given the 254th $2,500.

After the deputation retired Ald. Dobbin moved that no action be taken. He felt that the government should take care of a recruiting fund.

Ald. Stratton was strongly of the opinion that a good sum should be set aside for military purposes, and suggested that $2,500 be the amount fixed on.

Mayor Duffus thought that Col. Ackerman's request should be dealt with specially.

Ald. Stratton understood that Col. Ackerman only wanted the grant contingent upon the Government not sending the second $1,000 and if the fund was provided it would be there to meet contingencies.

Ald. Dobbin wanted to deal with the 247th at once so that Col. Ackerman will go to the government and get the money. He moved that no grant be made at present, which was seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Stratton moved that $1,000 be granted the 247th for recruiting purposes and Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion.

Ald. Dobbin withdrew his motion and substituted one that the city grant $500 to cover the overdraft and with the cheque send a notice that the city will not pay for any further expenditure that should be paid by the government.

Both motions lost as a tie resulted, the mayor voting for the larger grant.

The total amount to be raised for civic government is $121,117.64, which figures a 28 7-10 mill, as follows: 27 mills for general expenses, including schools etc., 1 mill war tax and 7-10 mill for garbage collection.

Rate Fixed

Mayor Duffus moved that the rate be the same as last year, 28 mills, and this was seconded by Ald. Saunders.

Ald. Stratton moved that the rate be 28.20.

Last year the city had a surplus of $17,271.97, and Ald. Langford drew attention to the fact that taking this into consideration the tax rate was really 29 1-2 mills.

The mayor's motion fixing the rate at 28 mills carried.

The adjustment of the appropriation will be made by the finance committee.

TEACHERS ASSURED THAT PENSION BILL WILL PASS

Local Educationists Were Members of Giant Deputation That Waited on Sir William Hearst.

Inspector Mowat, Principal Kenner of the Collegiate Institute, and Chairman Eastwood of the Board of Education, were in Toronto yesterday as members of a provincial deputation of educationists to urge the Government to pass the Teachers' Superannuation Bill now before the House. The delegates were assured that the measure would be made a law at this session. There were nearly 1,000 teachers present.

Sir William Hearst told them the bill had been introduced as a Government measure, and it had all the force of the Government behind it, and added, amid laughter, that if the Government lived through the session the bill would become law.

Referring to a section of those in the profession who were opposed, Sir William said the Government quite appreciated the bill would not appeal strongly to those who intended to stay only two or three years in the profession. It was understood that it would not strongly appeal to some of the young ladies who hoped very soon to give up teaching in the school for the private tuition of one pupil. Having regard to everything, the Government felt it should take the responsibility and even make the scheme compulsory upon those who were not inclined to agree.

Archbishop Neil McNeil thought the Government was driving a hard bargain, and suggested, amid laughter, that possibly in the future the Government would pay three-fifths of the contributions to the fund and leave only two-fifths to the teachers. Speaking for the teachers in separate schools, he said the fund would be a burden on the teachers in those schools. Still he advocated strongly this or a better system of pensions for teachers. He recommended a change in the assessment laws to give machinery for the schools to collect taxes from companies holding property. Because of such lack some of the salaries were as low as $350 a year. They would have to pass round the hat to meet the pension scheme.

There are teachers in Peterborough ready to retire who will be benefited by the adoption of the measure.

TO THE AUTOMOBILE BUYING PUBLIC

I am now in a position to offer you the Ford car either with or without self starter.

Last November I received a Ford car with an A B C electric starter and lighting system which was designed by the head electrican of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit. This starter has been in continuous use day in and day out ever since, on a demonstrating car, which has caused it to be used an exceedingly unusual amount, and yet it has never been altered or adjusted, nor has it had the battery recharged, and it has started the car each and every time since it was put on, the starting crank having been removed.

From experience I know that this starter is reliable and effective in every particular, and I am in a position to highly recommend it to any person wishing a car with a starter.

My salesman will be in the show room day and evening for the purpose of demonstrating and conferring with all persons interested.

PRINCESS BELOVED in BABYLONIAN SCENE of D.W. GRIFFITH'S INTOLERANCE.

When D. W. Griffith produced The Birth of a Nation it was thought that he had achieved the highest possible triumph in the silent drama. His latest achievement, "Intolerance," now running in Toronto and which will be presented at the Grand Opera House three days beginning Monday, March 19, throws all other photo plays into the shade.

"The Birth of a Nation" gave a true and comprehensive history of the United States covering a period of about eight years. "Intolerance" is really a story of the world, divided into three chapters. The first deals with the times when Babylon was at the crest of its greatness. The main theme, the chapter of modern life, is laid in an American city. Most interesting of all is the division which deals with the episodes in the life of Christ. In the opening scene is the miracle performed at the marriage supper in Canaan of Galilee. The woman taken in adultery when her accusers fell away from her abashed by the reproof of the Nazarene, and the tragedy of Golgotha are shown with startling realism upon the screen. The feast of Belshazzar, and the fall of his city are also pictured. The military exhibits surpass anything ever designed and through all the story the one idea runs like a thread. The moral of the play is that intolerance, narrowness and bigotry and the lack of human sympathy have been responsible from the earliest times until the present day for the most of the misery under which the world has staggered. It was intolerance that caused the downfall of the besotted rulers of early cities, the death of the world's Saviour, the slaughter of the Christian martyrs, and the unhappiness of the modern world.

"Intolerance" is a true story of life, told as only the films can present the truth.

LABOR OPPOSED TO MILITIA ACT

PRESIDENT OF DOMINION TRADES CONGRESS HAS PROTESTED.

OTTAWA, March 10. — The unalterable opposition of organized labor in Canada to compulsion in any form for military service is voiced in a letter sent to the Acting Premier, Sir George E. Foster, by J. C. Watters, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, following the address of Capt. (Rev.) Hindley in Winnipeg recently.

"The declared policy of our Congress is for voluntary, in contradistinction to compulsory, service," Mr. Watters wrote, "hence our opposition to the Militia Act being put into effect."

Sir George Foster wrote that Captain Hindley had no authority from the Government to make the statement that he did.

Childhood Ailments

The ills of childhood come swiftly and too often before a doctor can be called in or medicine obtained the little one is beyond aid. The wise mother will always safeguard her little one by keeping Baby's Own Tablets in the home. This medicine always does good— it can never do harm. Concerning it Mrs. Napoleon Lambert, St. Ignace, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine for childhood ailments and I am well pleased with their use." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DALE CHURCH MINISTER WILL TAKE SERVICE AT BETHANY TABERNACLE

Rev. Oswald J. Smith, of Dale Church, Toronto, will speak (D.V.) at Bethany Tabernacle on Sunday on 11 a.m. Mr. Dale is in charge of Dale Church during Mr. Morrow's absence at the front. In the evening at 7 o'clock Pastor A. G. Doner will speak on the question "Is the church right in joining hands with the world for civic righteousness, social regeneration and world betterment?" These are burning questions and our answer must be according to truth.

Enemies of Tea

If tea is left open near oranges, soap, spices, matches, etc., the tea will take on the flavor of any of these articles.

In fact, tea absorbs odors as readily as does butter. This is because of the high temperature at which it is "fired" during the drying process, which makes the tea very sensitive. It thus quickly loses flavor and strength, and goes "flat" if left exposed to odors, dust or air.

To Protect the Consumer

When you buy a package of Red Rose Tea at your grocer's you get the benefit of the great care we take to protect the consumer, as the sealed package is an armor that keeps out odors, dust and air. It keeps the tea pure, clean, fresh and full strength.

The price printed on the package protects you against overcharge. It is the lowest price for which a tea of Red Rose quality can be sold—a price which allows the grocer only a fair profit.

You will enjoy the distinctive flavor, rich strength and splendid economy of Red Rose Tea. TRY A PACKAGE.

ONE BILLION IN ORDERS

War orders valued at approximately $1,095,000,000 have been placed in Canada since the outbreak of war, according to The Monetary Times. Figures of the Imperial Munitions Board, issued in October, show that the munition orders placed in this country since the war commenced, amount to $650,000,000, of which $185,000,000 were placed during the first nine months of the past year, an official estimate of $50,000,000 being taken for the last quarter of 1916.

During 1915, the total value of war orders placed in this country, including munitions, was estimated at $600,000,000, an amount later confirmed by Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, during the course of an address at Toronto.

The orders for shell and fixed ammunition in that year were approximately $365,000,000, leaving a balance of $235,000 representing general orders. Assuming that the orders for miscellaneous supplies during the past year were being received on only a slightly larger scale, (although we believe the volume was considerably larger than in 1915), at least $260,000,000 of general orders would have been placed here last year. The estimate is believed to be quite conservative. For example, the Canadian Bank of Commerce in March last estimated that on our own account and that of the Allies the expenditure for war purposes in Canada would aggregate $600,000,000 during 1916. That would allow for the past year a sum of at least $350,000,000 as representing the value of orders for general supplies.

Many interesting books, ancient and modern, are shown at the Anderson Galleries, New York, including a book written by Arthur G. Doughty, of the Canadian Archives, with a binding of leather and gold by Tiffany. The book is one of the two copies inscribed by Princess Patricia and will be sold for the benefit of the Canadian Red Cross.

DUTIES OF WEALTH IN WAR TIME

(Frank Crane, in Chicago News.)

With his usual perspicacity, Henry Ford, in offering the free use of his plant to the government in case of war, touches upon a vital point.

"I cannot believe that war will come," said Mr. Ford, "but, if it does, it is then our duty and the duty of every man to help all he can, and not to make money out of the distress of his country.

"It is my firm conviction that war would seldom occur if individuals did not make money out of war. They form the interest which cultivates so-called patriotism, which alarms the fears of the people and throws them into the greatest of all calamities.

"Real patriotism will never seek to make money out of the misfortunes of the country. Real patriotism will cause every man to contribute his share when the country unfortunately falls into war, contribute it without a cent of profit."

One thousand one-man submarines 18 to 20 feet long, plus 3,000 motors a day, is what Mr Ford says his gigantic Detroit plant could turn out in case of war.

The Mexican Petroleum Company, through Mr. Doheny, its president, offers the Government 5,000,000 barrels of fuel oil now in storage. Other firms tender to the nation their plants and services.

When war comes, it is the supreme test of national life. Everywhere the gospel is preached that men should volunteer to give their lives for their country.

If human life is to be commandeered to the last man, if need be, why not capital to the last dollar?

Many fortunes were made in our civil war. Huge profits have already been reaped from this present war. The ethics of war profits is questionable.

War means untold loss, calamity, disaster. No man should reap private gain from the public misery.

The poor give their bodies to be wounded or slaughtered; their families are plunged into bitter hardships.

It is but right that the rich sacrifice also.

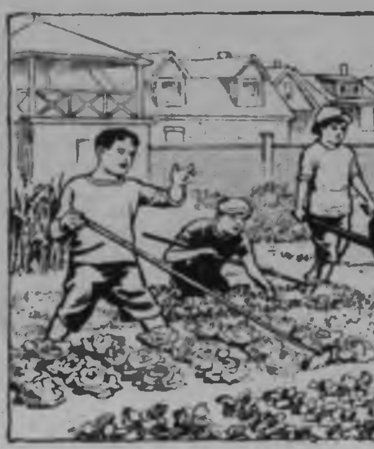
It speaks well for the patriotism of our country that great business concerns are offering their services even as men are coming forward to give their lives.

We doubt not that, if the worst comes, the wealth of the nation will volunteer for its defence as eagerly as the brain and brawn.

To City, Town and Village Dwellers in Ontario

What these boys do, you can do

SEVERAL hundred dollars worth of vegetables was the splendid contribution of the Broadview Y.M.C.A. boys of Toronto towards increase of food production last season. No wonder the boys proudly fly the British flag in their "Garden City" and win fine compliments from everyone.



Helping in the War

Toronto Y.M.C.A. boys doing their bit by growing vegetables. Each boy looks after his own plot, and either sells the vegetables or uses them at home.

No army could fight very long on an empty stomach. Plentiful supplies of food must reach our heroes in France every day. Besides, there is all Canada to feed, and Great Britain depends largely upon us too. There exists a world shortage of food. Hundreds of thousands of Canadian soldiers are now consumers instead of producers. So you see that every bit of help in growing extra food supplies is of colossal importance. Every home should have a vegetable garden.

Every dollar's worth of vegetables you grow saves money otherwise spent for vegetables or gives you vegetables you would not otherwise have, and thus helps to lower the "high cost of living." Growing vegetables saves the labor of others whose effort is urgently needed for other vital work. Boys, girls, grown-ups—everyone should help. Let the slogan for 1917 be

"A vegetable garden for every home"

Who doesn't enjoy nice fresh juicy vegetables on the table every day! Isn't it well worth everyone's while to grow vegetables this spring? Decide now. Boys and girls, ask your parents for the use of the ground and their help. They will gladly give you both. Grown-ups should plan now to have a garden.

Horticultural societies, lodges, school boards, etc., are invited to encourage vegetable growing by everyone. Parents and guardians are requested to give boys and girls their co-operation.

It is suggested that organizations arrange for addresses on vegetable growing by local expert gardeners. If these are not available, the Department will endeavor to send a speaker. It is urgently requested that applications for speakers be made promptly as the demand for them will be great and the supply of available experts is limited.

The Department of Agriculture suggests stimulating interest by forming organizations to offer prizes for best vegetable gardens. Every possible assistance will be given any organization encouraging vegetable production on vacant lots.

You do not need to be an expert. Scarcely any plot of ground is too small. Just write a letter to the Ontario Department of Agriculture (address below) and you will receive literature telling all about vegetable growing, how to prepare the ground and cultivate the crop; also a plan showing suitable vegetables to grow, best varieties for Ontario, and their arrangement in the garden. These will be sent free on request. Attend the meetings in your community.

Write for Poultry Bulletin—The high prices for eggs make a flock of poultry well worth while. They are not expensive to keep. In the average home the waste from the table is sufficient. Write for bulletin.

WHEN OUR BOYS RETURN

Making Plans For Those Who Dislike "Cissy" Jobs

Significant announcements have been made by the Borden and Hearst Governments regarding their plans for establishing Canadian and British soldiers on the land. Both propose to provide returned veterans with farms and to assist them in equipping these farms and getting them under profitable cultivation. The Federal scheme is to be placed in charge of an independent national commission. This departure will make for closer settlement of a sparsely inhabited country and for such increased food production as will be welcomed in all Canadian cities. There need be no fear that the Federal and Provincial plans will overlap. The combined efforts of all the governments in Canada will never repay the soldiers who defend our freedom on the battlefields of Europe.

By way of a beginning the Ontario Government is to spend $1,000,000 in assisting time-expired soldiers to the soil. More capital will be available when more is required. Discharged men who think they would like to be farmers, with farms of their own, will be admitted to camps under the charge of practical agriculturists. The theory and practice of farming in all its aspects will be taught at these camps, and the "apprentices" or "probationers" will be able to make up their minds as to whether or not they are going to like the life. If not attempt will be made to find other occupations for them. The Government will house, board, and train the men at its own expense and allow them a reasonable wage in addition. Those who elect to take up farming as a permanent occupation will have the assistance of expert Government officials in selecting their land.

The group system of farms and farm buildings will be followed as far as that is possible so that the returned soldiers will have the social, economic and educational advantages of community life. Each community will for a time be in charge of an official from the Department of Agriculture, who will be an all-round guide, counsellor, and friend to all its members. Implements and stock will be provided on a lien basis and where necessary money will be advance on easy terms. Soldiers who already understand farming will be assisted in locating, clearing, equipping, and stocking new holdings of their own. The camps and the training school are mainly for those who had city jobs before the war and who as a result of their manly open-air life in the army are unwilling to go back to these uninteresting occupations. The attitude of this class is indicated by Robert W. Service in "Rhymes of a Red Cross Man." In "The Revelation," he says;

We've bidden good-bye to life in a cage,
We're finished with pushing a pen;
They're pumping us full of bellicose rage,
They're showing us how to be men.
We're only beginning to find ourselves;
We're wonders of brawn and thew,
But when we go back to our Cissy jobs,
Oh! what are we going to do?

For shoulders curved with the counter stoop
Will be carried erect and square,
And faces white from the office light
Will be bronzed by the open air,
And we'll walk with the stride of a new-born pride,
With a new-found joy in our eyes,
Scornful men who have diced with death
Under the naked skies.

For some of us smirk in a chiffon shop,
And some of us teach in a school,
Some of us help with the seat of our pants
To polish an office stool;
The merits of somebody's soap or jam
Some of us seek to explain,
But all of us wonder what we'll do
When we have to go back again.

Getting acquainted with a pretty girl is like running to a fire—you go with the crowd.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

The market this morning was a fair one both on the outside and upstairs. There was a good supply of hay and wood, while the quartered meat section had plenty of lamb, beef and pork, which sold at slightly higher prices than a week ago.

Hogs are in good demand and have sold the latter part of the week at $15. The market is steady and a higher local price may be reached.

Eggs took a tumble of 5c generally, while Butter remained steady at 45c.

Good chickens brought 25c per lb. hens 20c to 22c, and a few turkeys sold for 25c to 28c.

A pair of spring chickens sold for 80c, or about 60c per lb.

POTATOES IN TORONTO MARKET DECLINE ONE DOLLAR PER BAG BIG DEMAND NOW FOR RICE

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Potatoes in the Toronto market declined one dollar per bag during the week and the demand continues light. With the big demand that is now under way for rice, there is insufficient rice on the spot market to meet the requirements. There is considerable rice on the way. Prices of Far Eastern and Southern rices are all higher in price.

Flour advanced during the week and is still in a strong position. While there has been no advance recorded in the price of sugar, that commodity is in firm position, due to the estimated decreased production of raw sugar on the Island of Cuba as a result of revolutionary disturbances. Tea still holds in the limelight with increased uncertainty as to how and when additional supplies will be secured. An attempt is being made to do business direct with Colombo, but so far without success.

Pure lard and compound lard have been moved to higher levels. There has been an advance in a number of lines of cooked meats. Butter is higher in price, but eggs are cheaper. This is the only decline registered in the whole gamut of grocery quotations during the week. Some of the other lines that have advanced during the week are sardines, mustard, custard powders, soap chips, baking powder, tomato sauce. Cartage rates on sugar in Toronto have been increased one cent per hundred pounds and the price of sugar will consequently be raised to that extent. Business in the grocery trade has been very satisfactory during the week.

If kissing should go out of fashion no girl would care to be considered stylish.

CHARLOTTE CORDAY

How Attempted Picture Play Was Spoiled

Movieville is situated in a region here the sun shines oftener than any- here else in America and where the rrounding scenery is more varied d beautiful. This city, devoted to e work of producing picture plays, ks out upon mountains on the one nd and undulating tracts on the oth- The latter is partly wooded, part- cultivated, and a river runs through connecting several lakes.

Movieville itself is a very singular y, containing a singular population. here is every variety of dwelling in from an Indian tepee to a Chinese lace, every variety of fortification m a Roman oppidum (walled inclo- re) to a modern bastion. If there is ything required that Movieville does contain it is improvised. A scenario, e scene of which was laid in the ited States senate chamber, having n chosen for production the senate amber was constructed not of stone, of stucco, canvas and other such e materials.

ne of the famous speaking plays of y was "Charlotte Corday." The ne was laid in Paris at the time of French revolution and involved the assination of the leader of the gn of terror, Marat. The woman o played the part of Charlotte was nsidered a wonder. During her per- rmances she seemed to be the person ose part she was enacting. The y had a very long run, and every uth during the time it was on the rds the leading lady, whose stage me was Marguerite Stanley, put re intensity into her part until her diences were often thrown into a d shiver.

"Charlotte Corday" was especially apted for a picture play, and Movie- le was considered as the best, real- the only, place to make the photo- phs.

ohn Esterbrooke, who took the part Marat, though a finished actor, did produce the impression effected by ss Stanley. While she became more d more tragic, he seemed to lose ce. The real reason of his apparent erioration was that so real was her personation of her character that he ame afraid of her.

was another matter that influ- Mr. Esterbrooke. He thought saw signs that the girl was in love h him. While on the stage she play- Charlotte to his Marat. At other es she purred to him like a kitten. was fearful of this emotional com- ation. He was not in love with her could not divest himself of the ling that if he did not respond to preference a time might come en, while she was under the power- emotion induced by her part, she uld make of it a real tragedy.

uch were the conditions when it was ided to produce a moving picture play of "Charlotte Corday." Miss Stanley was on the same train with Esterbrooke. Another member of the company, Estelle Springer, who was supposed to be in love with him, was also of the party. Esterbrooke took a seat beside Miss Springer and remained there all the way to Movieville. During the ride Miss Stanley remained in her seat reading a novel, a travelling cap pulled down over her eyes. When the journey was completed she left the car with the others smilingly, and if jealousy had been excited in her none of the party noticed it.

"Charlotte Corday" was to be a five reel play. Often many pictures were taken of a single scene before the desired effect was produced on the films. This was wearing on the performers, especially on Miss Stanley, whose emotional part required so much intensity, and every time a picture was made that intensity must be excited. This naturally called for periods of rest. They were usually passed in automobile rides over the beautiful country.

By this time a rivalry appeared to have sprung up between the two aspirants for Mr. Esterbrooke's favor. It was observed in Miss Springer, but not in Miss Stanley—that is, the latter's feeling for him was only supposed to exist by him, and he spoke of it to no one. On one or two occasions she asked him to ride with her, that she might talk over such changes in their behavior before the camera from what they had been used to on the stage as might be advisable. On their return from these rides Esterbrooke looked serious, but kept his own counsel as to the cause. Actors are apt to have hearts thrown at them promiscuously from young women in their audiences, and Esterbrooke was no exception. He had found it advisable to pay no attention to such advances and never mentioned them to others.

Historical plays do not adhere very closely to history. If they did it would be impossible to treat the theme dramatically. In the dramatization of the story of Charlotte Corday, Marat meets Charlotte at a cafe on the Champs Elysees and admires her. He has no speech with her, she sitting at another table alone, while he is dining with a party which includes Miss Springer, who took the part of a Mme. Du Four. Marat's efforts to cast his admiring glances at the girl who is later on to assassinate him, without attracting the notice of those at his table, is one of the main features of this scene.

The fact that the Champs Elysees is in Paris instead of Movieville made no difference to the management. The tables of the cafe under the trees, the broad avenue leading up to the present site of the Arc de Triomphe, were all before the camera, and so well reproduced were they that one familiar with Paris would scarcely believe that the photograph had not been taken from the original. Beyond was the Place de la Revolution; today the Place de la Concorde, and instead of the fountain now standing in its center was the guillotine.

The life of the picture and at the same time a contrast with the instrument of death were the gay companies dining within and without the cafe. The men wore the cocked hat, the ruffled shirt bosom, the long double breasted waistcoat, the high coat collar and the tight trousers in vogue at the end of the eighteenth century. The women wore the short waist dresses and poke bonnets. The revolution had either guillotined or drawn into exile most of the refined women of France and brought into prominence those whom we would now call "fast" if not abandoned. Such were the persons eating and drinking at the tables on the Champs Elysees in sight of the machine that was every day ridding France of its aristocrats.

Within this effective scene was a more minute one—the group about Marat, with Charlotte Corday at a neighboring table. Both the face of Marat and that of Charlotte were a study, the former unconscious that the girl he admired was to kill him, the efforts of Mme. Du Four to hold his attention, which kept wandering away to Charlotte; the latter aware of her advantage in his admiration, trusting to it to give her access to his presence when ready to strike the fatal blow.

The author of "Charlotte Corday," the picture play, introduced one scene that rendered all this thrilling. Amid the gayety about the tables, reckless men and brazen women talking, lounging, drinking, Marat and Charlotte the central figures, there is a commotion about the guillotine. A beautiful woman is strapped to it, the ax falls, and by one of those quick transitions common in moving pictures her head appears to roll into the basket.

Such is an imperfect word description of one of the most notable scenes ever attempted to be placed on the screen. The company chosen to enact it before the camera were gathered and taking their positions. Marat was being posed; Charlotte was seating herself; men and women were arranging themselves in groups. Then, when all was ready, the signal was given and the company, consisting of hundreds of persons, was under fire of the camera.

The pantomime had continued for some time when the photographic director called a halt. Going to Marat, he led him apart from the others and whispered something in his ear. While he was doing so Marat cast a frightened glance at Charlotte. The manager went back to his position of observation, and the photographing recommenced. The chat, the laugh, the conviviality went on, each actor or actress intent on his or her part, for in a picture play everything counts; there is no deadwood.

When the scene of the execution came the only attention paid to it, except on the part of Charlotte, was that a number of persons raised their glasses, and the pantomime indicated that they were drinking to one more aristocrat put out of the way. As for Charlotte, a close observer would have seen a deep purpose in her eye. As the head of the guillotine's victim fell into the basket she rose, ran like a flash, to the table occupied by Marat, at the same time drawing a dagger from underneath the kerchief crossing her breast and plunged it into his heart.

An indescribable confusion followed. The buzzing of the machinery moving the film ceased. Every one ran to Marat, the men standing, the women screaming, for all knew that this was not the assassination scene, and it was believed that he had been really struck down. He never spoke again.

As to Charlotte, she withdrew a little from the group about the man she had killed and stood trembling. Then for the first time it was noticed that there was a wild look in her eye. She was led away, and none of the company ever saw her again.

The picture play of Charlotte Corday was never put on the screen for the public. The films were run through before the management, and the murder scene was pronounced a wonder. But there was so much objection to it on the part of Miss Stanley's relatives and others that the films were destroyed.

Nevertheless it has been whispered that the films comprising this scene of an actual tragedy were not given over to destruction. It is claimed that private exhibitions of this unintended part of the play have been given for managers and their friends. Whether or not this is true, there can be no doubt that so realistic a scene, embodying a tragedy, has never been put on the films.

One question—a psychological one—has never been settled. Was Marguerite Stanley's act the result of an insanity caused by so long playing so emotional a part, or was it caused by jealousy, or was it a combination of both? Esterbrooke was the only person that suspected she was in love with him, and had she been would not she have shown it to others? But its appearing only to him does not prove that it did not exist. It seems most likely that the act was the result of insanity, caused by the prolonged repetition of a single act of a highly emotional nature, but momentarily intensified by jealousy.

SOME WAYS TO MAKE MONEY

(By Don Herod.)

If you work in a store, you will never get rich unless you have some side lines. You should have some railroad stock, a good farm, and a few other things. The greatest secret of wealth is to have a lot of eggs in a lot of baskets. A man who tries to make a lot of money out of one thing, like working in a store, editing a newspaper, or keeping books, will never succeed. We have been analyzing rich men lately and have observed one thing pretty generally true about all of them; they have a great many interests. The trouble with a lot of us poorer folks is that we concentrate too much. We should get stock in a lot of different enterprises — fertilizer factories, poultry farms, banks, moving picture theatres, piano factories, iron works, oil refineries, taxicab companies, etc. We should pick up real estate here and there about town — business blocks, hotels, theatres and tenements.

Consider the rich men of your own acquaintance. Not many of them, we imagine, have made their fortune out of one thing. Then what is the logical conclusion?

Multiplicity of interests.

This is a great idea for the ambitious poor — a very great discovery — and we, for one, are going to start tomorrow to put it into practice. We have been plugging along trying to make a living, too, too long. Tomorrow we are going to broaden out, and take up fifteen or twenty new propositions. This is the method of the rich.

ACCESSIBILITY

Both the Series "18" FOUR and the Series "18" SIX Chassis are the evolution of four years' experience and concentrated study.

Mechanically, these cars have been improved, refined and perfected, until today we believe that the chassis represents the finest piece of motor car mechanism on the market. This continuous study, based on the experience of 250,000 owners, is manifest in simplified design and wonderful accessibility. You can easily get at every part of the Studebaker car for adjustment or for inspection.

It is distinctly the "Owner's car"—distinctly the car for the owner who likes to take care of his own car. The design is so simplified, the function of each part so obvious, and the detail so easy to get at, that you can very soon understand your car and learn to know it, and especially so when you are taught by the Systematic Service System, which every Studebaker Dealer has established for Studebaker owners.

How to Knit a Pair That Will Wear During Toboggan Time.

Use Scotch yarn and medium sized steel needles. Cast 16 stitches on each needle and knit 2 plain and purl 1 until the wrist is 3 inches long. Then knit 6 plain, purl 1, 1 plain, widen 1, 1 plain, purl 1, knit the remainder plain, widening one more on first needle and one on each of the other two needles for this round. * Second round: Knit 5, purl 1, knit 3, purl 1, knit remainder plain. * Repeat, only every fourth row widen 2 between purls until you have 11 stitches between purls. When about two and one-half inches long, measuring from wrist, take a darning needle and a piece of yarn and slip off those stitches between and including purls, making 13 stitches, then cast on 7 stitches and knit plain until when tried on the hand it covers the end of the little finger. Put same number of stitches on each needle. To narrow off * narrow 1 each end of each needle, knitting 1 stitch before narrowing and leaving 1 to knit after narrowing at other end. * That makes six stitches narrowed. Repeat narrowings every third round until only 6 or 7 stitches are left on each needle, then knit one round between narrowings. When only 2 stitches are left on each needle break yarn and pull through stitches, thread through darning needle and fasten. For thumb, put the 13 stitches on two needles and pick up 8 stitches under thumb. Knit the required length.

JOHN BULL A HISTORIC NICKNAME

EVERYONE is familiar with the term John Bull. Nearly a hundred years ago, Washington Irving could write of him that "there is scarcely a being in actual existence more absolutely present to the public mind than that eccentric personage, John Bull"; and yet, few people are aware of the origin of this nickname for the British nation. To find it we must go back just over 200 years, to a certain famous political satire written by Dr. Arbuthnot, entitled "The History of John Bull," and first published in 1712. At about that time the question of the Spanish succession was agitating all Europe. This agitation had gone on, in one way or another, for more than fifteen years, and not all the triumphs of Marlborough, or Peterborough, or the Prince Eugene could allay, in England, the growing discontent over the matter, and the growing antagonism to the Whigs, who were largely responsible for it. Dr. Arbuthnot was a Tory of Tories. A friend of Jonathan Swift and of Alexander Pope, he was a brilliant satirist, "full of abundant imagination," and from his position as court physician he enjoyed many privileges. So he looked out on the times, on the adventures of the Whigs in France and in Spain, and launched out, after the manner of his day, into a series of political pamphlets.

It was in the year 1712 that all London, or that part of it which had grown tired of the Whigs, found itself rejoicing over the first of a series of such pamphlets which began to appear under the title of "Law is a Bottomless Pit, Exemplyfied in the case of Lord Strutt, John Bull, Nicholas Frogg, and Lewis Baboon, who spent all they had in a law suit. Printed from the manuscript found in the cabinet of the famous Sir Humphrey Polesworth." And Lord Strutt was Charles II. of Spain; John Bull was, of course, England; and Nicholas Frogg, "a cunning sly rogue quite the reverse of John in many particulars," was Holland; whilst Lewis Baboon was Le Grand Monarque. "And sometimes you would see Lewis Baboon behind the counter, selling broadcloth, sometimes measuring linen; next day, he would be dealing in mercery wares; high heads, ribbons, gloves, fans, and lace, he understood to a nicety." So Arbuthnot goes on, filling in the picture with wonderful deftness, showing Louis, as he was, forever seizing wealth wherever he could find it, and then squandering it all on wars and again wars, in "backsword, quarterstaff, and cudgel play, in which he took great pleasure."

But to return to John Bull. Bull, in the main, was an honest, plain-dealing fellow, choleric, bold, and of a very inconstant temper. He dreaded not old Lewis, either at backsword, single falchion, or cudgel play; but then he was very apt to quarrel with his best friends, especially if they pretended to govern him. He was quick, and understood business well; but no man alive was more careless in looking into his accounts, nor more cheated by partners, apprentices, and servants. No man kept a better house, nor spent his money more generously. Thus did Arbuthnot, writing over 200 years ago, fashion the national character, and it is interesting to note how little the popular concept has changed during the period that has intervened.

It was almost exactly a hundred years later that Washington Irving, coming to England from New York, picked up Arbuthnot's parable, as it were, and developed it in his famous "Sketch Book." Washington Irving found John Bull at a time when he was passing out of the realm of the actual, "blunt, comic, and familiar," into the realm of tradition, "stated, fixed, and settled." Irving's "sturdy old fellow with a three-cornered hat, red waistcoat, leather breeches, and stout oaken cudgel," had yet to undergo further changes before he reached the popular concept of to-day. But all that the great American author had to say showed him entirely unchanged by the passage of time. "He will stand by a friend in a quarrel, with life and purse, however soundly he may be cudgeled." With all his odd humors, Washington Irving insists, he is a "sterling-hearted old blade." He is, he adds, "like his own oak, rough without and sound and solid within."

Fighting in Cuba.

A Cuban official is reported as saying: "If even the German army had only two weeks to put down a revolt in Cuba it would be stumped."

He is right. German efficiency would avail little against bands of rebels scattered through the maniguas and holding hidden positions of great natural strength.

The Spaniards were never able to clear the summit of Gran Piedra of revolutionists. There is near San Luis a tract of forest with trails through the tall guinea grass that the Spanish regulars never dared to enter. The Cubans were always secure in the heart of it with their women folk. And there are many such retreats in the island of Cuba.

It will not be surprising if the liberal insurgents are "out" for months.

A Pen-Knife Revolver.

A pocket knife which has two blades and an attachment that enables it to discharge a twenty-two calibre short cartridge, either blank or ball, is one of the latest novelties to be placed on the market. It is said to be practically as effective as a regular twenty-two calibre revolver of the short barrel type. It is three inches long and one-half inch wide.—Popular Science Monthly for February.

DRAUGHT VERSUS BOTTLED LIQUORS

Liquors in sealed bottles in cases cost one-third more than in draught, and the quality is no better. Why one-third more? Because you are paying for the bottles and the labor of bottling, for the same goods.

Following are some draught liquors, especially "Balmoral" Scotch, which we can highly recommend:

DRAUGHT SCOTCH

"Balmoral" Fine Old Scotch, 2 gals	$12.50
"Balmoral" Extra Fine Old Scotch, 2 gals	14.50

BOMB. GEO. FINNIE DIES IN HOSPITAL IN ENGLAND

Attack of Pneumonia Proved Fatal on Saturday.

Bombr. George Finnie, son of City Nightwatchman Edward Finnie, 211 Barnardo avenue, died at a military hospital in Bramshott, England, on Saturday from pneumonia.

The sad news was received by Mr. and Mrs. Finnie this morning. They had been informed that their son was seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia, but it was hoped that his strong constitution would pull him through.

Bombr. Finnie enlisted in the 74th Battery and had been in England but a short time.

He had a splendid physique and looked every inch a soldier. Of late years he had made his home in Western Canada, coming home last summer. He was the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Finnie and was about 30 years of age. Besides his parents he is survived by one brother, Herman Finnie, electrical engineer at the C. G. E., and three sisters.

METAL PRODUCTS CO. LOCK OUT EMPLOYES

Machinists and Toolmakers Turned Away This Morning---Company Refuses Demands For Increased Scale and Shorter Hours.

The machinists and toolmakers employed by the Metal Products Company were locked out this morning. There are about thirty-five men idle, only one or two of the workmen skilled in that line being left on duty. The men had decided to go on strike at 10 o'clock this morning unless the company acceded to their demands for an increased scale. This intention on the part of the men had evidently reached the company in some way and when the employes reached the factory this morning they were told that their services were no longer required. The shellmakers, who are not organized, are still at work, but with the skilled employes idle the entire plant will be affected.

WHAT THE ISSUE IS.

The trouble between men and company started about three weeks ago, when the men asked for time and a half after ten hours of the first five days of the week and the same rate if they worked Saturday afternoon and on Sunday. The company met the shop committee and finally granted their demands.

The new arrangement h[illegible] in force about a week and some of the men were receiving the new rate, when the trouble was revived by the posting of notices in the factory last Monday to the effect that the company had decided to revert to the old scale, which called for sixty hours a week with time and a quarter for extra hours. A member of the shop committee was also discharged. The men refused to accept these terms, and H. W. Harper, provincial organizer for the machinists' union, has been busy for the past week in a vain endeavor to bring about peace. Saturday afternoon the men held a meeting and decided to quit work at 10 o'clock today unless in the meantime the company granted their terms.

BRINGING MEN FROM OUTSIDE.

The company has scouts in Hamilton and Montreal hiring men to take the places of men who are out. Members of the local union are kept posted on every move made by these agents. Word came from Hamilton today to the effect that the company would spend $15,000 rather than give in to the men.

NO TROUBLE IN OTHER FACTORIES.

There is a factory in the city engaged in the same line of work as the Metal Products Company, in which the scale upon which the locked-out men insist is paid. In no other plant in the city have the machinists and toolmakers any trouble with the employers.

The Metal Products Company has been in operation in this city for about a year. The company, in order to locate here, were granted exemption from municipal taxes except for school and local improvement purposes, for a period of three years.

RATES IN OTHER CITIES.

The men claim that they are receiving less than is paid for the same class of work in other cities. In Toronto, machinists get 45 and toolmakers 50 cents an hour. Time and a half is paid after nine hours, and double time when a workman is required to remain on dtuy after 10 p.m. The new agreement with the Toronto employers provides that before any reduction in the staff takes place the men shall be put on seven hours a day for five days a week. In nearly all cities machinists have received an increase in wages since the war started. In Montreal, Brantford, London, Galt, St. Catharines, the number of hours worked every week is 50, and time and a half is paid for any extra time put in.

O. C. MAKES AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS

A Citizen Contributes $100 For the Battalion.

MUST HAVE CASH

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman is making an appeal to the citizens for financial assistance towards the recruiting funds of the battalion. The O.C. states that this is necessary owing to the action of the City Council in refusing a grant for the purpose. The Government has held up any further payments to this fund pending action by the Privy Council. Already some citizens have sent in offers of assistance. One man is sending in a cheque for $100. The officers will be glad to accept any financial aid, large or small, as recruiting will be at a standstill unless the funds are largely augmented.

Collection of $35.08

The collection taken up at the Armories last night amounted to $35.08. It will go to the recruiting fund of the 247th Battalion.

Permission to Resign

Capt. Hetherington of the 247th Batt. has been granted permission to resign from the regiment.

Regimental Orders

By Lt.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. 247th Battalion:

Duties—

Orderly officer for today, Lieut. C. C. Shaw.

Orderly officer for tomorrow — Lieut. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lt.
Adjutant

Separation Allowances

The following separation allowances have been granted:

Mrs. Mary Foster, 259 Rogers St.

Mr. Felix Landry, 185 Romaine Street.

Care of Soldiers

Figures just compiled by the Military Hospitals Commission show that on Feb. 28 the Commission had under its care 4,055 invalided members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Of these, 3,149 had been overseas, the remaining 906 being "camp" men.

On the date mentioned there were 1,998 in the convalescent hospitals, besides 1,222 out-patients. In the sanatoria for tuberculous soldiers, there were 506, besides 10 out-patients. In other institutions there were 312 men, besides out-patients. Totals, 2,816 in-patients and 1,239 out-patients.

The total of 4,055 shows an increase of 1,421 since Dec. 2, 1916 the date of the figures given in the Commission's bulletin issued just before the end of the year.

Be on Hand

That manufacturers, storekeepers, business men generally, and all those who wish to see the 247th Battalion remain in the city, are strongly urged to attend the meeting at the Armories tonight at 8 o'clock. The attendance at this meeting will gauge the interest which the people of Peterborough have in the local battalion.

COSY QUARTERS READY FOR THE RETURNED MEN

OTONABEE CHAPTER FURNISH CLUB ROOMS IN BARRIE BUILDING.

Two front rooms on the third floor of the Barrie Building given free by Mr. Barrie have been fitted up as quarters for the members of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Association by the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E., and the formal opening will be held on Tuesday evening.

The rooms have been made inviting and comfortable, being equipped with a piano, couches, easy chairs and there are also magazines, cards and tables. On the walls are flags and pictures and above the piano has been hung a large framed photograph of Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, and decked on either side by Union Jacks, the gift of the Otonabee Chapter. Framed pictures of the late Lord Kitchener and Sir John French were presented by Mrs. R. H. Muir and Miss Godfrey respectively.

The rooms form admirable quarters for the returned soldiers, who will appreciate very much the kindly interest the Otonabee Chapter has taken for their comfort and enjoyment.

TWO-THIRDS OF TURKS' ARTILLERY LOST TO BRITISH OR IN THE TIGRIS

Surrender of Defending Troops Was Infectious.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 12. — After announcing the fall of Bagdad in the Commons today, Bonar Law said there was every reason to believe that two-thirds of the Turks' artillery had fallen into the hands of the British or had been thrown into the Tigris River.

TURKS SURRENDERED.

LONDON, March 12.—The official eyewitness with the Mesopotamian forces writes regarding the operations in the middle of February which cleared the Turks from Dahra Loop of the Tigris, as follows:

"After a bombardment our infantry swept across the open in irresistibe waves and there were few casualties. As we approached the enemy's trench a group of Turks issued from the centre of the positions and gave themselves up. The first surrender was infectious and was repeated by all along the line. Prisoners came forward in a stream waving white rags. The Turks turned their guns on them, but to little effect.

BISHOP WARNS WOMEN TO SHUN PARTY POLITICS

Bishop O'Brien Speaks at First of Series of Lectures Held Under Auspices of Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E.

The first of the series of lectures to be given weekly under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter of the I.O.D.E. at the assembly room of the public library was held Saturday afternoon, the speaker being His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who spoke on the duties of citizenship. Mr. A. Mowat, public school inspector, presided and complimented the members of the chapter for their enterprise in inaugurating such a course of instruction.

Bishop O'Brien made one of his characteric addresses, thoughtful, informative and broad-minded. If his suggestions were followed with fidelity, the citizenship of the nation would leave nothing to be desired. Political rancor would be unknown and religious strife unheard of.

Man, said the bishop, has two general duties, one to society, the other to God. Our first duty to the nation is to take a deep interest in all public question and no man can be a loyal member of the community unless he is a loyal adherent of the Government under which he lives. Obedience to the law is essential to the welfare of society. Even if some laws are not suited to the individual taste, everyone must submit to them. We must be tolerant of one another. Religion and racial discussion should not be considered in the formation of a Government. Members of Parliament should be selected only with regard to their individual merits and qualifications. Unfortunately in Canada, partisanship is too often made the controlling influence.

As it was expected, the Bishop dealt with the right to vote, which the women of Canada are soon to exercise. This means six hundred and thirty thousand new voters in Ontario. He advised the women to keep themselves clear of party politics and to form no alliances with either faction. If they became mere members of a political machine then votes for women could not be regarded as other than a calamity.

The Bishop received a hearty vote of thanks for his address and the meeting broke up after the singing of the National Anthem.

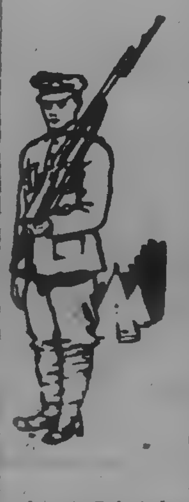
WAR HAS FIRST CLAIM ON CANADA AND CANADIANS

Straight-From-the-Shoulder Punches in Recruiting Addresses at Armories---City Council Comes in for Criticism.

CONSCRIPTION ON THE WAY



Peterborough's City Council and the young men who attend hockey matches, dances, and pool rooms, all came in for some very sarcastic remarks at the Armories last night.

It was, as Col. Ackerman said, slightly different from any of the other meetings so far held, as the appeal for recruits was made for the 247th and 2nd Battalions in particular, and for the Forestry Battalion.

Lieut.-Col Ackerman, in opening the meeting, drew the attention of the young men who wanted to get overseas quickly to the opportunity to go this week with the reserve draft of the famous Second Battalion. The necessity for men to fill up the ranks was dwelt on at considerable length. He pointed out the obstacles which were confronting the recruiting officers each day and blamed the unnecessary criticism as a contributory cause.

Conscription Coming

The speaker stated positively that the Government would institute a form of conscription at an early date. He also referred to the feeling of apathy that existed in the city and opined that if the same feeling existed all over the Empire the Allies would lose the war. A spirit of depression was assigned as a probable cause but he asked the relatives of men overseas to assist in every way as a relaxation at the present time meant disaster.

Col. Ackerman spoke of the financial difficulties and told of how the City Council had turned down the battalion's claim for financial assistance to push recruiting. It was the only municipality that had refused assistance to its military unit. The battalion must have funds and would have to revert to other methods to raise funds as the Government had curtailed expenses in this regard. In conclusion, he appealed for men to make up the 250 men required for the Iron Battalion.

Miss Etta Kemp delighted the audience with a pretty patriotic song entitled "Carry On, Carry On."

From Valcartier to France

Major E. D. O'Flynn's presence back from France was explained by Lt.-Col. Ackerman, who added that the Major's second name was "Duckit." The major stated that he was ducking all the time at the firing line. He gave a very graphic account of the wanderings of the 2nd Batt from the time it left Valcartier. The trip across the Atlantic to Plymouth, the walk through the Wiltshire mud to Salisbury Plain, and finally the arrival in France at St. Nazaire on the Bay of Biscay. The different billets occupied by the fa-

DUCHESS HAD RESTLESS NIGHT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Dec 12—The Duchess of Connaught passed a restless night. The heart action is weaker.

The Duchess of Connaught, wife of the former Governor-General of Canada, it is announced officially, had a bronchial seizure on Feb. 13 and during her convalescence measles developed on Feb. 26, accompanied by considerable broncho-pneumonia. Her condition, the announcement adds, causes anxiety.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, MARCH 12, 1917.

THAT SPARTAN FAMILY.

JUDGE AND MRS. HUYCKE have three sons in khaki, two of them in active service in Flanders, the third, Lt. Douglas Huycke, who was sent home, not for refusing to revert, but because he was honorably wounded, being now engaged as a military instructor at Kingston. There is a fourth son in the family, and this boy has just reached military age. He, too, has heard the call and has decided to leave college and enter the artillery branch of the service.

Four sons, every one of them a volunteer, is a record that will always speak volumes in honor of the parents who reared such boys. If all the households in Peterborough would do even half as well, the 247th Battalion would be filled up as quickly as the recruits' names could be enrolled.

PENSIONS FOR TEACHERS.

AT LAST IT SEEMS that the teachers of Ontario are to receive an adequate pension when their working days are over, and this is a matter in which the people and the pupils are likely to share in the benefits, as it will mean a better and a more permanent class of public instructors. The pension provision will act as an inducement to the teacher to make that the profession of his life, instead of taking up some other vocation after a few years of trial.

Premier Hearst says that the Pension Bill will be made into law if his government lives through the present session, so that the measure is assured. When it becomes effective, the pension fund will be kept up by the teachers paying into it yearly a sum equal to 2½ per cent. of their salaries, a like amount to be contributed by the Provincial Government. The original draft of the bill required school boards to contribute to the fund in the same proportion as the teachers, but this feature has been eliminated. It was the one point on which public opposition centred, and even the teachers themselves feared that school boards would make it an excuse for lightening their own share of the burden by keeping down the salaries of their employes.

The amount of the pension which every retiring teacher shall receive will depend upon his earning power and the length of his service. If a teacher has taught for forty years and during the last year was paid $1500, he will receive two-thirds of this sum yearly as a pension, or $1000 in all. If he has been a teacher for thirty years and on retirement is earning $1000 a year, his pension will be $500 a year. The law provides that no beneficiary of the system shall receive less than $365 or more than $1000 a year as a pension.

The only class of teachers opposed to the new law are those who are making the profession a stepping-stone to some other calling. These should be willing to make some sacrifice for the cause of education, especially when it is recalled that they have been trained for their duties largely at public expense.

The teaching profession is coming to be more and more regarded as the highest calling in which any man or woman can engage. The teachers are really forming the national character and the welfare of the generations of the future, the moral as well as the academic standing of the country, depends upon their efforts. Members of the profession have never been paid in keeping with the responsibilities that rest upon them. They have found it impossible to make suitable provision for old age, and this is the chief reason why so many young teachers after a few years take up some line that promises more liberal returns. Now that adequate pension has been, or will be, provided, the teaching profession is one that any man or woman can follow without worrying over the days to come when they will be compelled to give up active work.

There are teachers in Peterborough who are soon to drop out. Some of them have sacrificed their physical health on behalf of the rising generation, and while doing it have written the name of this city in creditable record upon the educational map of the province. There is no one who knows these teachers and appreciates their earnest devotion to duty but will be pleased to see them able to spend their last years in comfort so fairly earned.

A PREMIUM ON INDUSTRY.

THE MANAGERS of the C. G. E. have put the best of all premiums on industry by deciding to pay a bonus of twenty per cent. of his regular wages to every man who puts in full time. Such an arrangement is mutually beneficial, but works most to the advantage of the wage-earner. Capital and labor seem to get on better terms as time passes, and the employers show more and more a disposition to appreciate and reward faithful and efficient service.

THE MAN IN THE SEWER.

THE MAN WHO DIGS the sewers came in for his share of adulation at the civic banquet the other night. It was like President J. J. Hartley, of the Trades and Labor Council, a man who, though an employer of labor himself, still retains his status as a union workman, to remember the man in the sewer and express appreciation of his public services. His work is just as important as that performed by any other workman or professional in the city.

All of which praise was well merited. But the man in the sewer, if given to reflection, is not likely to place such a high value upon his services or to glory in his lot. He can only hope to do this if he is a counterpart of Markham's Man with the Hoe, "a companion of the clods and a brother of the ox." If he is disposed to study his surroundings and philosophize the chances are that he will reach the conclusion that social conditions are somehow or other out of joint and that he is not getting a square deal.

The man in the sewer earns, say, 25 cents an hour. When he consults a lawyer, he is told that the services of that functionary are valued at $3 for the same length of time. He may have a good case, one of the justice of which he is assured, but when he goes into court and finds himself in the august presence of gowned judge and attorneys, his heart misgives him that after all he may lose out, so much depends on the battle of legal wits that his own advocate will wage with the lawyer on the other side. But, win or lose, his wages earned in the sewer are hardly of the dimensions to equip him properly for a campaign of insistence upon his rights as a British subject.

The man in the sewer contracts a cold, and, finding himself unable to pursue his daily task, betakes himself to a doctor's office. The physician thrusts a glass tube under his tongue, taps his back and chest, listens to his heart beats and respiration, commands him to say "ninety-nine" several times, shakes his head, and hands him a prescription which sets the patient back an amount which it takes him five hours to earn.

Next he calls on the druggist, who probably meets him with the sweetest suavity of all his new business associates. Drugs are high owing to the war, and one dollar will just be enough to allow the dealer a living profit. The sick man gives up more of his earning, and departs to take his chances with the medicine and to moralize on his lot.

The man in the sewer usually has a houseful of children. He is gratified when the public speaker in the pulpit, at the banquet or political gathering refers to him as the man doing so much to keep up the population of the country, but this commendation does little to aid him in feeding and clothing a family of six children on his weekly earnings of $12.

If the man in the sewer reads the newspapers, he will find in them new reasons to marvel. For example, he will see that in Manitoba a judge, sitting as a commissioner and earning as such $100 a day over and above his regular salary, sent a bunch of citizens to jail because they had the temerity to regard him as a mortal less than infallible. Another judge, gouty with living on the good things of earth, was called in to find that his legal brother was wrong.

But still the man in the sewer labors and the earth continues its daily revolution.

PLOWING THE VACANT LOTS.

IT WAS A WISE and liberal arrangement that the Finance Committee of the Council made Saturday night with the municipal committee of the Trades Council regarding the cultivation of vacant lots. Any resident who desires to make a kitchen garden of one or more such lots will be given the opportunity. Of course, it will cost something to plow the land and prepare it for planting. If the amateur gardener lacks the funds to meet this expense, the work may be done for him by the city, he to pay for it when his crop is harvested.

The proposed kitchen gardens should not cost the city anything, and the very people who are anxious to help themselves in this way would be the last to consent to being pauperized by getting something for nothing.

CAPT. DANCEY AND THE COUNCIL.

REFERRING to the refusal of the aldermen to make a civic grant to help recruiting for the 247th Battalion, Capt. Dancey declared at the meeting in the Armories last night that the Peterborough Council was a disgrace to any community. That was certainly a sweeping statement, but it fails to explain that while five aldermen opposed the grant, four members of Council and Mayor Duffus supported it. Five goats and five sheep is what the division shows in the aldermanic enumeration. It is hardly fair to reckon one class with the other, or saddle the sins of the obdurate quintette upon the entire board. There are still representatives of the city who realize their duties and responsibilities.

The aldermanic mind is broader than it was a year ago. Probably the city fathers realized at the various banquets that the ratepayers were concerning themselves with progress rather than with the altitude of the tax rate. When the estimates were made for the current year, there was more liberality displayed, even though the rate for 1916 was maintained. No salaries were cut, but one or two employes were given increased compensation.

An evangelist cannot hope to convert all the people who come before him. In days of old the proportion of those converted from a mob was about one in ten. If the civic banquets effected the regeneration of five of the ten aldermen, the effort was not entirely wasted.

PREMIER A TOWER OF STRENGTH

When Sir Robert Borden enters into conference with the greatest statesmen of the Empire he will be by no means the least commanding figure. No man will enter the conference with better intellectual equipment. Ever a close and serious student of imperial concerns, he has a well stored mind and his views are firmly based upon a complete and accurate knowledge of the situation. His confreres are not likely to go away with the impression that because he is courteous he is lacking in strength. They are not likely to mistake patience for irresolution. It is only a few Canadian politicians who endeavor to make it appear that he is lacking strength and leadership. Some of them appear to think that because he eschews rough-house methods he is "spineless." That is the Montreal Herald and Brockville Recorder view. This is not really their view—it is only their pretended view promulgated with persistency to create a misapprehension in the public mind. Hon. George Graham himself knows better. He has seen too much of Sir Robert's mettle to have even a doubt as to his strength. He has never seen Sir Robert's courage fail him. He has never seen him shrink from combat, and what is of more consequence, he has never seen him worsted. He is amiable, he is courteous, he is modest—but he is not weak. He is "the oak that defies the storm."

IN CANADA AND IN AUSTRALIA

The fusion of the two political parties in Australia into a "War Government" is being used by Canadian Liberal newspapers as an argument for coalition in Canada. The position is not well taken. Premier Hughes had only a minority support in the Australian Parliament. His Government had been rent in twain over the conscription issue, his policy of conscription had been defeated, his Labor supporters had repudiated him. Coalition became necessary to save the Commonwealth from a general election and to enable the work of Parliament to continue. In Canada the situation is vastly different. In a Parliament of 221 members, Sir Robert Borden has a commanding majority of about 40. His leadership is unquestioned, his war policy has just been endorsed in a portion of the Dominion where Liberals expected it would be unpopular, and the Opposition is divided and generally weak. In the light of these two absolutely different positions regard for common-sense prohibits talk of coalition in Canada because there has been coalition in Australia.

Furthermore, in Australia a coalition government has ben tried and proved so much of a failure, such a breeder of discord and useless friction, that a general election is impending.

THE DETECTIVE SCORES AGAIN

Many were the guests and hugely were they enjoying themselves dancing, eating, playing tag and Pussy-in-the-Corner and such things at the annual ball given by the United Safety Raisers of America Consolidated.

Flags, of course, were strewn and strung all over the big lavender room of the Broadcloth Hotel.

In and about flitted Sheerluck Bones, the great detective who was called in to guard the princely jewels worn by the lady guests and the queenly pearls adorning the shirts of some of the older gentlemen.

While the gaiety was at its height a cry of dismay pierced the smoke-laden air. Count Pareschi had missed his enormous $100,000 pearl stud.

Immediately, Sheerluck Bones was on the spot. Placing his spoof glass diametrically opposite the bosom of the Count's shirt, he examined it carefully. He ordered all the ladies in the room to stand in a line and then walked rapidly up and down the line, down and up and back again.

Stopping before Mme. Howmuchsky, he laid his hand upon her shoulder and exclaimed, "This lady has the pearl!"

"An easy matter," replied the great detective to the numerous inquiries. "You see, just above the spot where Count Parchesi sticks his stud is a small black mark. And right on the end of Madame Howmuchsky's nose is a small white mark. Well, that's where her black make-up rubbed off on Count Parchesi's shirt, so I deduced that she had bitten off the pearl, as I suppose, they danced a two-step together. (Enough).

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to answer an article appearing in a recent issue of The Review in regard to the appointment of a caretaker for the Chemong Bridge.

Over the name "Observer," the statement is made that after assuring Thomas Black of my support I jumped over the fence and moved James Grant to be caretaker.

If "Observer" would open his other eye and learn the facts rather than go blundering and guessing, he would find that I neither moved or seconded James Grant's appointment.

"Observer" is very well known and when he sets out to "Observe" things should not be ashamed to sign his full name, without wiggling, otherwise have a gentleman dictate a few sentences for him and sign up. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

There is nothing to equal a woman's scorn, especially if you have it.

Don't judge yourself too harshly. You can depend on others doing that.

The road to ruin is kept in good repair at the expense of those who travel over it.

There is no reason why the spirit of mortal should be proud, unless he owns a coal mine.

Why worry about trifles? The hole that lets the water into your shoe will let it out again.

Wit and Wisdom

Paradoxical.

"Works of real genius are rare."
"I call them well done."

Exceptional Circumstances.

The sympathetic prison visitor went from cell to cell interviewing the inmates. To one patient-looking individual she put the usual question: "What brought you here?"

"Borrowing money, lady," was the reply.

"But, good gracious!" she exclaimed, "they don't put people in prison for borrowing money."

"Not ordinarily," said the man, "but I had to knock a man down three or four times before he would lend it to me."

Accommodation.

"I can't spare the money, but I'll gladly loan it you if you'll promise not to keep it too long."

"I solemnly swear that I'll spend every penny of it before tomorrow morning."

One Drawback.

"This world would be a pleasanter place if there were not so many fools in it."

"Yes, but it would be more difficult to make a living."

One Way of Figuring.

The young lady across the way says she saw in the paper that hogs had recently reached their highest price since the civil war, selling at $13 per hundred, but after all that's only 13 cents apiece.

THEIR NEW DOCTOR

Excitement in Mayville When Old Physician is Supplanted by Young Man

By MILDRED CAROLINE GOODRIDGE.

There was great excitement in the social circles of Mayville when the successor to the practice of old Dr. Cyrus Dall arrived. For forty years the latter had been the chosen physician of the town. When he had sold his practice to Dr. Brian Eversley, a young, handsome and wealthy member of the profession, all Mayville was agog, and speculation and gossip held the various social coteries in a kind of pleasant thrall.

The young doctor had purchased The Oaks, a beautiful estate near the edge of the village. A maiden sister was to be his housekeeper. When a new automobile and some wonderful house furnishings arrived, Miss Cyrille Rushton, aged thirty, but passing for twenty-two, as the real leader of the real social set of Mayville, was said to brighten up at a chance to once more angle for a husband. When it was further announced that the young physician was philanthropically inclined, Miss Breda Dorman, president of the Ladies' Aid society, was in transports of anticipation and delight.

The young doctor arrived, and he was not a disappointment. He was something more than handsome—earnest, affable and intellectual. He was pleased at the gracious attentions of Miss Rushton, and it seemed to interest him to listen to the ceaseless chatter of Miss Dorman. High society shrugged its shoulders at his "free dispensary" ideas for the benefit of the poorer classes living over on the flats. Still, an exhibition of his skill in their own service caused him to be received as a fit successor to the old practitioner, Doctor Dall.

The Ladies' Aid society held weekly meetings in an old store, which had been neatly fitted up for them. A Mrs. Fulton lived in apartments behind, and kept watch and ward over the place. Miss Rushton had recently joined the circle, and Miss Dorman had never been so active in her supervisory duties. The society clothed the ragged, fed the poor and had done some free nursing. Miss Dorman very little, however. She acted as the ornament of the group. As to the haughty Miss Rushton, all she pretended to do was to donate the raw material for the really industrious ones of the club to sew into garments.

"Miss Lane!" He Exclaimed in Wonderment.

One of these latter was Nettie Lane, who sat in a corner of the room now, engrossed in the task of making four tiny night robes. The rest of the group were chattering and gossiping. Whenever Doctor Eversley's name was mentioned, Nettie's eyes brightened with interest. It was mentioned very frequently.

"The way Cyrille Rushton has set her cap for the doctor is simply brazen," observed Sarah Bates, who had graduated into old maidenhood several years ago.

"Not half as bold as Breda's sly puss way," broke in cynical, wasp-armed Selina Marton. "She pretended to have neuralgia, just to get the doctor's attention."

Plain, quiet Nettie smiled to herself. She was happy in knowing that the doctor had made quite a friend and confidant of her. Miss Eversley had taken a decided fancy to her. Nettie was, in fact, very close to the doctor; something in their natures harmonized. Miss Eversley had seen through the feigned illness of several young ladies who had called for her brother's professional care. She had laughed over these plausible illnesses with Nettie.

If anybody had told Nettie that these ripening friendships indicated a chance to capture the handsome young physician, she would have been overwhelmed with confusion. Such an idea had never entered her sensible little head. For all that, she knew she had never met a man whose kindly, human spirit had so awakened respect and admiration in her pure, gentle soul.

"And what do you say of all this babble, our little busy Dorcas," challenged Miss Bates, noticing the unobtrusive Nettie.

"I only know that Doctor Eversley is a very splendid man," replied Nettie softly. "Why, I am making these little trifles for a child who belongs to a family that the doctor has practically taken charge of at his own expense. He is a good, good man."

Nettie grew so enthusiastic that she flushed consciously. Miss Bates gave her a keen look and whispered to Miss Morton.

"It can't be possible that little nobody has ideas—"

"About the doctor," said Miss Morton. "Oh, ridiculous."

Nettie finished her work somewhat later and went home. Miss Rushton came in, then the lady president, and then a messenger arrived. He brought a note from Doctor Eversley. It was addressed to the society. A contagious sickness had broken out in a poor family without means or friends. Could the society appoint some one to give half a day for a week to day nursing for two little children in the family?

There was dead silence at the word "contagious." Miss Rushton had an urgent engagement. Miss Dorman talked of "volunteers." The group gradually broke up and the doctor's note received no reply.

That afternoon Doctor Eversley's automobile stopped in front of the poor home where his services were so sorely needed. He was a trifle disappointed at receiving no recognition of his message, and had decided to enlist the sympathies of his sister. His knock brought a neat figure wearing nurse cap and apron to the door.

"Miss Lane!" he exclaimed in wonderment.

"Yes, it is I," Nettie smiled back. "A neighbor told me of this case, and I have so wished to see if I have the patience and skill to act the nurse."

"You are an angel," said Doctor Eversley with heightened color as he entered the sick room.

Never had a poor family such royal donations as those received by the one now under the care of Doctor Eversley as physician and Nettie Lane as nurse. Miss Rushton sent delicacies from her table every morning. The Ladies' Aid society invested all its surplus funds in sheets, pillow cases, comforters, an invalid chair and clothing.

That dread word "contagious" made greetings on the street quite few and far between for the doctor. His sister, however, was visited daily by the anxious young ladies, hoping the dear doctor was not overworking himself, that the dreadful disease would not spread, and eager to learn the real sentiments of the Eversleys as to "poor Miss Lane, who was just cut out for a nurse."

When the truth got out that the contagious feature of the case did not extend beyond light measles, Miss Rushton bit her lip and Miss Dorman denounced Nettie as a schemer.

"This is one of the great pleasures of a physician's life," said Doctor Eversley, as he and Nettie walked away from the home where they had taken the part of true ministering angels.

Nettie fully understood him. They had found the poor home filled with squalor, illness and suffering. They had left it supplied with the comforts of life and the inmates happy and hopeful.

There came a day when Miss Rushton took a sudden journey to relatives, and Miss Dorman resigned from the Ladies' Aid society. Two lines in the weekly announced an important engagement.

"You see, my brother is a very practical young man," was the way Miss Eversley explained the situation. "He thinks, as I do, that a good nurse makes a good doctor's wife."

PASSING OF SUNDAY SUPPER

Chafing Dish Messes Now Seem Largely to Comprise the Sabbath Evening Repast.

Time was when the Sunday night supper was of even more vital importance than the midday dinner, especially in those towns and villages where strict religious principles prohibited cooking on the Sabbath.

It was not considered wrong to mix a pan of biscuits the night before and bake them for supper, so that these hot, puffy features of the meal, with honey or some of mother's quince preserves or canned cherries, were looked forward to with joyous anticipation.

As time passed, the stringent line relaxed as far as cooking for supper was concerned, and, in addition to cold salads, there would always be some hot dish, such as the real old-fashioned hash or scrambled eggs, with creamed potatoes.

City life has changed all this. Even the suburbanite who apes city ways has the mahogany table cleared, the doilies used in place of the regulation dinner cloth, and the chafing dish placed in front of the hostess, the ingredients at hand, and the lamp trimmed and burning. From this she turns out creamed chicken and ham, deviled sardines, mutton ragout and other "messes"—her grandmother would call them, as she waxes reminiscent on the honey and hot biscuit era.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First. – Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second. – The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism; it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Third. The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth. Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Won't Hurt Bill.

A certain Indianapolis Sunday school, which is conducting a recruiting campaign by modern advertising methods, through a publicity committee, has received a suggestion for an appeal, to be posted abroad. It reads:

"Hello, Bill. Come, let us save your soul. It can't hurt you, and it will help us. Be a good fellow!"

The committee has the suggestion under advisement.

MAY GET TWO MEDALS

In This War the Problem Unusual and Complicated

It is safe to say that of all subjects which form topics of conversation in the trenches during the moments which the enemy leaves the British soldier for social intercourse, none is more popular (unless the soldier has completely changed his character) than the great question "How many medals shall we get for this war and what will be the bars?" That has always been, since the British army received medals, the one subject which has interested him more than any other.

In the argot of the barrack room, the medal is a "gong," and it is the ambition of every soldier in the army that the "gong" should not be bare of bars (the little strips of silver across the ribbon inscribed with the names of action which mark the quality of the award), and the more bars there are to a man's medal the higher does he stand, not only in his own estimation, but in the estimation of his comrades.

It is curious how, when discussing the war, generally, with wounded soldiers, the topic of conversation invariably veers round to this medal question. The optimistic think that there will be three. One given by France, one by Russia, and a third by England. Others believe that the medal will be of bronze, and will be issued in uniformity by the five nations engaged. This would not be very popular with the soldier. In the Egyptian campaigns there were two, one British and one which was presented by the Egyptian Government. In the South African War there were also two, but that was due to the fact that the war was continued under two sovereigns.

What is probable is that there will be a British medal and one issued by the allies in conjunction, that is to say, the Russian soldier will wear the Russian medal and the allies', and the French soldier will wear the French medal, issued by the French Government, plus the allies', and the same decorations will be offered to the British soldier. It is said that the color of the new ribbon, made up of the national colors of Belgium and will either be a black ribbon, with red and yellow stripes on each edge, or will be a red ribbon, with a black and yellow edging, the exact pattern of which has not yet been decided upon.

JERSEY ONE PIECE.

Buttoned Like a Smock and Banded Like a Coat.

A warm shade of burgundy silk jersey gives this chic garment, trimmed with fine tucks, self ball buttons and Hudson seal bandings. An interesting dash of color is lent by the string belt of brocade, picked out in gold threads.

MODISHLY GARBED.

KNITTED TAMS.

Tips About Making This Most Popular Headgear.

Knitters are directing all their attention to the making of tam-o'-shanters just now. While the tams will be worn to skating parties by grownups, they are intended largely for schoolgirls.

One attractive model of old rose wool is knitted on to a black velvet band, which fits closely around the head. The top of the cap is finished with a fluffy ball of fur.

Crocheted flowers are used extensively to decorate some tams. They are very effective affairs, the flowers adding a festive touch to the caps. No matter whether the flowers match the color of the tam or not, the result is just as smart in one case as in the other.

If one is making a tam for a girl who owns a roman striped scarf the colors of the neckpiece should be introduced in the hat. The entire hat might follow this suggestion, or a few rows of varicolored wool might be woven around the top of the model. Another method would be to finish the cap with a tassel made of various colored pieces of wool or silk.

It is really interesting to see the many shapes used for the caps. Some are round, others are square, many are hexagonal, while a few are made with diamond shaped pieces joined to give the tam eight sides.

A cheerful tam of yellow is crocheted in the alternate stitch. This stitch is done so that every two rows form a rib. A single crochet stitch is taken throughout, except that it is made through only the back of the next stitch, alternating straight through the entire strip. A military touch is gained by the introduction of a black velvet chin strap.

Apple Dumplings.

Pare and chop one apple for each dumpling. Prepare a crust consisting of one and one half cupfuls of flour, one large teaspoonful of baking powder, one heaping tablespoonful of butter and moisten with enough milk to roll out. Cut in squares for each dumpling and fill with the apples. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, wet the edges, pinch together, place in a baking pan, fill with boiling water seasoned with one cupful of sugar and a half cupful of butter. This makes the sauce. Bake until the apples are done.

Silence Cloth.

Those of us who still cling to tablecloths instead of polished wood have often wondered at the exasperating qualities of the canton flannel silence cloth. Almost every hot dish placed over it causes it to stick closer than a brother to the polished table and to leave white, fuzzy rings on the wood.

Instead, make a silence cloth out of cheesecloth or other washable material, with several layers of paper between the two folds. Overcast the edges and knot here and there, as in a quilt.

Orange-Grape Salad.

Cut six oranges into small pieces after removing seeds and white fiber and set to drain and chill. Open a pint can of peeled and seeded grapes; drain and add them to the oranges; add a chopped red pepper and use a boiled fruit salad dressing, a light mayonnaise or a small quantity of heavy French dressing.

BEAD BAGS.

Do You Know How to Bead Your Own on Canvas?

You know, there is a "trick in the trade" of bead bags—in fact, beaded everything—for fashion says "beads," and in chorus the world re-echoes. There is talk in certain manufacturing circles of doing away with the tedious process of a stitch for every bead by the use of gelatin. But the idea has not as yet progressed beyond mere talk, so a "stitch to a bead" remains still the only way of doing beadwork. It would try the patience of a saint, though, to work out a design on velvet or any other material alone. This very exasperation, perhaps, accounts for the happy invention of the "trick"—a bit of canvas. Whether you select coarse or fine canvas depends on the size of the bead that you use. Stretch the canvas taut on the right side of the material and baste it firmly on all sides. The design is then worked out on the canvas, using a stitch for every bead; the basting is removed, and the canvas, withdrawn, reveals the beaded surface of your material. The easiest design for the amateur to attempt is the diamond, depending on color combination rather than artistic workmanship for its effect. All steel beads on black, old blue or any of the wine shades are decidedly fetching. Consider black on white and white on black, of course. For the diamond pattern, beginning with one bead, increase the number at each new line until the design meets the required width, then decrease until it is completed.

HUSK DOORMATS.

How to Braid Them For Your Porches Next Spring.

At this season corn husk doormats should be made for the porch. They are easily and quickly made and quite serviceable. Select husks next to the ear, because they are white and soft. If they should be a little dry sprinkle them with water.

Braid the husks into a common three strand-braid, feeding your braid from the left side, and each time the left strand comes over put in a new husk. Let each husk as added extend about one inch above the braid, and let it be the butt end of the husk that extends above. The length of the braid depends upon how large you want your rug.

Take your darning needle and common store cord and sew the braid into a round or oblong rug by coiling the braid around, sewing each coil as made to the last coil made.

The rug is a smooth braid on the lower side and a solid mass of husks, one inch deep, on top.

PORCH DOILY.

Suitable For Your Tea Tray or the Sun Parlor Table.

In the lull after the holidays good housekeepers attend to their linens. This piece pictured is done in dark blue linen, fringed in the same color, with black and white and a lighter shade of blue for the embroidery, four conventional roses. Done in white linen and floss, this design is suitable for your tea tray.

THE NEEDLEWORKERS.

Your New Veil.

The veil has now assumed an almost decorative place. To be sure, it is occasionally worn, in the guise of a small meshed net, to keep the hair neat in the wind or, in the guise of a thick chiffon, to keep one comfortable motoring in the cold weather, but for the most part the veil is purely ornamental. In such a position it is altogether charming, and on many of the new hats it appears to very good advantage in this way.

Just Color.

A pretty finish for a white nightgown is a binding of colored bias folds of muslin. This folded bias finish can be bought both in plain colors and in stripes and plaids. Sleeves and neck can both be bound in this way, and a band of the colored fold can be placed at the line of an empire waistline to have ribbon run under it. In the same manner chiffon or georgette crepe underwear can be finished with ribbon used as binding.

To Prepare Citron.

When using citron, orange peeling or things of that nature steam for a few minutes, then run them through the food chopper. The work is easily and quickly done in this way, while the old manner of preparing requires time, labor and patience.

This Bush Yields only 2½ ozs. yearly

A VERY small yield considering the size of the bush. It takes about 6½ bushes to yield a pound of ordinary tea—and about 10 bushes to yield a pound of Red Rose Tea, as only the tender shoots and buds are used to produce the distinctive flavor and richness which characterize this high-grade tea.

PROCRASTINATION.

In Cuba they think it
No terrible crime
To do things tomorrow
Or any old time.
Today is for pleasure,
Not worry and strife,
Nor busily leading
The strenuous life.

The beautiful present
They don't like to waste
On labor that spelleth
Undignified haste.
A task that's unable
To wait, they declare,
Can go without doing
For all that they care.

It may be their climate,
But it is the case
They do not hunt labor
Nor give it a chase.
And if we are careful
Our neighbors to scan
We'll find a few people
Built just on that plan.

It isn't the island,
It isn't the sun;
It's plain human nature
Just having a run.
On labors accomplished
They may not be strong,
But it is a cinch they'll
Be dead just as long.

Canadians vs. Pacifists.

Twenty-five soldiers in khaki, led by a young Canadian sergeant-major, "cleaned up" a peace meeting at Walthamstow, on the outskirts of London, recently, and ejected the chairman, J. Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., and Mrs. Philips Snowden, wife of the pacifist M. P. The latter, who recently visited America on a peace campaign, was the first speaker, but could not make herself heard. "Three cheers for Tommy!" were given when the soldiers entered. The sergeant-major, his lips compressed and his eyes blazing, edged his way to the platform, and taking MacDonald by the sleeve, urged him to make his escape from the hall. "I won't do it!" shouted MacDonald. "This is a meeting of free Britons, and we won't let anyone interrupt us." "If you don't go quickly we'll have to put you out," returned the soldier, firmly. MacDonald, with a brave show of defiance, replied that he would not go, and yelled to Mrs. Snowden and others on the platform to "Stand by your guns!" Amid the uproar the soldiers formed in line, and charged slowly but resistlessly upon the platform. MacDonald tried to cling to the edge of the table, but it was swept away, and he was pushed rapidly off the platform. Mrs. Snowden was also escorted out and left in a taxicab with MacDonald. The soldiers then addressed the meeting.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE BABY'S CLOTHING.

WE HAVE NOW gotten the baby along to the period that, for the time at least, its food is looked after; but the new world is a cold one, and the infant must have protection against an uncertain climate. Some of these must be provided against the baby's coming. It is a matter of pride for the prospective young mother to provide for her baby. She should lay in the following toilet articles, viz.: three dozen strong white safety pins, two dozen very small ones, a box of absorbent cotton, a few tubes of lanolin, one of pure vaseline, three cakes of unscented castile soap, some unscented talcum powder, one bath thermometer, a pound of boracic acid crystals, eight ounces of olive oil, four soft wash-cloths of all wool flannel, two woollen bath blankets, six soft towels, and a soft hair brush.

The Clothes. Should comprise one soft receiving blanket, six one-yard square flannel wraps, four knitted blankets, two soft blankets for the crib, six crib sheets, two yards of double-sided rubber sheeting; four dozen diapers of cotton, four flannel binders, four high-neck long sleeved woollen shirts, four abdominal bands with shoulder straps with smooth inner seams, four nightgowns of flannel or canton flannel, white slips, three flannel gertrudes, six horse blanket pins for pinning baby in his crib, one-quart hot-water bottle with woollen cover.

It is the fashion that the baby's clothing changes as he gets older. At first custom ordains that he should wear long clothes, then short clothes, and as he begins to creep and walk another set must be provided. As these directions are meant for people with moderate incomes, it is not intended that they shall cover all that may be prepared in the way of clothing for the baby but only what is essential. The mother with plenty of ready money can easily augment her store.

The Long Clothes. In addition to what has already been advised to procure, several long dresses of white cotton or of more expensive material should be provided.

The Flannel Binders. Make these of all-wool flannel. They should not be hemmed as the hemming will destroy their elasticity and the hem will cut into the baby's tender skin. They should be fastened snugly but not too tightly by means of safety pins, tapes, or sewed with needle and thread. The binder should be fastened to one side of the middle of the abdomen and not at the back. The binder should not be too wide. It must not go so low as to interfere with the movement of the legs nor so high as to constrict the chest. It should be used for three or four weeks, when the knitted bands may be used.

Knitted Bands. These have shoulder straps. There should be no inner seams and the shoulder straps should be fastened to the band so as to avoid any rough joinings. They should fit the baby so as to avoid wrinkles.

Knitted Shirts. These should be high-necked and long-sleeved, of cotton, wool, or silk and wool. For summer a lightweight is needed. For winter a thicker but not too thick material. The baby should be dressed according to the temperature and not according to the season. Most mothers keep the baby too warm. When he perspires and lies in wet underclothes his skin becomes irritated and he is less able to resist "catching cold."

Flannel Gertrudes. These should be made of all-wool flannel and not of canton flannel or flannelette. These garments should be open in front.

White Dresses. These should be made without any waist-line, should be loose at the arm hole and without lace. The dresses should be fastened with small buttons at the back or with tapes.

Nightgowns. Nightgowns should be made of flannel, canton flannel, or stockinette and of different weights to suit the temperature. Viyella flannel is the best of the flannels and washes better than other kinds. All flannels need careful washing. Flannelette is dangerous because it is inflammable and should not be used for the baby's clothing.

Diapers. These should be made of diaper cloth or stockinette. They should not be made (as they often are) of factory cotton, which, at least when new, is harsh and irritating to the soft skin of a baby. The hem should be hand-made as it is softer than machine made. The first diapers should be 18 by 36 inches or 20 by 40 inches. Begin by making two dozen large ones 22 by 44 or 22 by 48 inches. The larger ones should be used outside the smaller.

Applying the Binder. (1) Have the diaper snug but never tight enough to pinch the baby's stomach or legs. Vomiting and red lines sometimes indicate too tight a diaper.

(2) Do not bring too many thicknesses up between the legs.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:

10	per cent	on application;
30	"	16th April, 1917;
30	"	15th May, 1917;
26	"	15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes including any income tax imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

ELLIOT'S

RIGHT THINKING IS TRUE PANACEA FOR ALL ILLS

Dr. McClelland Believes in Immanuel Movement Rather Than in Christian Science—Doctors Should be Samaritans.

Dr M McClelland concluded his address on Mentality and Spirituality as Related to Health before the Men's Class at St. Andrew's Church yesterday. The doctor is by no means a Christian scientist although the views he holds if given effect to would work a revolution in the science of medicine. He believes that right living is the secret of health and that the physician should combine in his person the functions of the healer and the Samaritan. Functional diseases as opposed to organic troubles are best treated by the pastor provided the sufferer will confide in him instead of taking the case to the physician. The Immanuel movement rather than Christian Science is Dr. McClelland's ideal system for making the world physically well.

"Macauley," said the doctor, "has said that religion is the only science that has made no progress for centuries. Since this was written we have evidence, if not of progress, at least of a disquieting spirit of inquiry.

"It has been my privilege to know many instances of change from a life of discord, painful strife and universal unhappiness to a calm, serene, contented energy by the beckoning hand of Christian Science. If a word lightly spoken would call back the old life to one of these which one of us would utter it. But there appears to be no danger.

"Sturge after ten years' study of Science and Health says: 'Unfortunately their rendering of truth has been given with such an entire want of sense and logic that when read in the light of ordinary intelligence it reads as entire nonsense and a beautiful ideal and a great truth has been rendered ridiculous whilst the minds of Christians in general have been shocked.'

"Compare this with what Carlyle says of the Koran—the text of Mohammedenism—'It is toilsome reading as ever I undertook—a wearisome, confused jumble, crude, incondite endless iteration, long-windedness, entanglement—insupportable stupidity in short.' Upon closer inquiry the Koran appears to have been dictated to its author entirely by Gabriel. Science and Health was dictated to its author by Mrs. Eddy.

The corner-stone of Christianity is Christ—of Christian Science, Mrs Eddy. An inspiration cannot rise above its source—so the infants and weaklings of spiritual birth wax contented and strong on spiritual pap and will survive so long as the supply continues.

"The pathway to health by Christian Science is no more royal than by any other spiritual system, except the price. Ignoring a situation and leading the way out cannot be done by the same forces, but dreams are true while they last.

"The Immanual movement has for its object the healing of the sick by the working together of the physician and the pastor. Is this not a grave reflection upon physicians? Are they of that character that will not combine the offices of scientist and Samaritan?

"There is agitation that the church revive its healing powers and practices. Did it ever lose these except as it fell away from grace and joined forces with patent medicine vendors and other fakes? Let us get back to the right source — right thinking and all things will be right."

The doctor's address was made the subject of an animated discussion in which Mr. R. J. Todd, the Christian Science healer, Messrs. R. Lees, W. I. Chisholm, R. M. Glover and G. W. Gilman took a leading part. Mr. Todd took exception to the claim that Mrs. Eddy was the corner-stone of Christian Science, maintaining that the cult is founded on the teachings of Christ, not upon those of an ordinary mortal.

ACTIVITIES AT Y.M.C.A.

(By the "Y" Scribe.)

The Mothers' Club will meet on Wednesday at 2 o'clock for Red Cross work. At 3 o'clock the monthly business meeting will be held and at 4 o'clock tea will be served and a social hour conducted. Every member of the club should be present.

Fifty-three men and older boys enjoyed the special program of music at the meeting Sunday afternoon. The association is indebted to Mr. J. M. Greene for the loan of an Edison Diamond Disk phonograph and a number of religious and patriotic selections. Boys Work Secretary Galley presented the Y.M.C.A. international "join the church" effort being conducted during Lent, and Mr. Meserve suggested the association secretaryship and physical directorship as a life vocation for young men who wish to serve their fellows. Recent association conventions have shown that the real problem before the Y.M.C.A. today is to find qualified young men to enter the ranks as leaders. A [illegible] received from the international committee March 12 states that schools, social service movements, etc., are claiming many men who have been thought available for association employes. That a recent law in New York State opens up 200 positions for physical directors which must be filled this year in connection with the schools of that state.

The war has caused even a more serious condition in Canada in relation to filling association positions this year and this is one of the problems to be considered at a special conference of Y.M.C.A. workers to be held in Hamilton March 22-23. The local association has in the past sent out fifteen young men who have made good as secretaries and physical directors and desires to hold up before the young men of Peterborough that the Y.M.C.A. movement offers great opportunities to which Canadian young men of the right type may turn after the war.

WAR HAS FIRST CLAIM ON CAN.

mous Canadian battalion were explained from the arrival of the men at Mons till their arrival, stage by stage, at the Ypres salient. Festubert, St. Julien, Givenchy, were all referred to and the work of the Canadians lauded. The magnificent work of the 3rd Batt. was also praised and the part they had taken at the Somme was dwelt on.

Major O'Flynn, in appealing for men for the 2nd Batt., stated that it was the best battalion in France today.

Miss Janet Johnston

Miss Janet Johnston of Montreal entertained with several songs of a patriotic nature. Her first selection was "Laddie in Khaki, I'm Waiting for You," which was encored and the young lady sang "Somewhere in France." At the conclusion of the speaking Miss Johnston sang "Brothers in Arms are We," and "Good By Forever" for an encore number.

Capt. S. N. Dancy

Capt. S. N. Dancy, who has been chosen to select a reserve company of 250 men to join the 2nd Batt. in France, told of the great pleasure and privilege he felt at being able to address a Peterborough audience. He was surprised that the stories told by Major O'Flynn had not stirred the Canadian blood in the veins of the 1,400 eligible men who he understood were in Peterborough. It made no difference what position they held, if a woman could do their work the men should be in khaki and play fair with Canada, which they professed to love.

Canadians were as much interested in the success of the war as any Englishman, in the security of humanity and civilization. Passing through the different cities and seeing young men in pool rooms, at dance halls and at the rinks; he had often asked himself, "Has the sacrifice in France been in vain?" It was no wonder the spirit now felt in England was, "England will win the war in spite of the Dominion of Canada."

In the opinion of the speaker, the City Council was a disgrace to Peterborough. It had refused assistance to the 247th Batt and the young men would spend their money on social entertainments and not give a farthing to Red Cross, patriotic or other relief work.

Appeal to Mothers

Capt. Dancy made an especial appeal to the mothers to use their power and influence on the men so that Peterborough can say, like Galt and a few other cities, that there is not an eligible man who has not gone. The armchair critics of Canada were given a passing word in the remark, "Criticism will not win the war." In the men who have recruited from Canada only 37 per cent. Canadian born, the balance being made up of the much despised "Cockney," "remittance man" or "sparrow."

Men who paid more attention to their political welfare in preference to a victory in Flanders came in for some crisp remarks from the speaker. These men in Ontario would criticize Quebec but they should remember that there were men and municipalities in this province that had never sent a man or contributed a cent to the success of the war. He confirmed the statement of Col. Ackerman that conscription would come in a few weeks, first in the form of the Militia Act, in which all the men between 18 and 30 would be called out. It had to come in order to get the 500,000 men promised from Canada.

Be Brave and Be British

Canada should uphold her patriotism by responding to the call, and the fact was pointed out that in England and Scotland one out of every six on the population was in the King's uniform. The flight of young men to the States to get out of enlisting was referred to and that they would be deported as undesirables and socially ostracized was hinted by the speaker.

The men who go to the front now go under much happier conditions than the men who first went over. There was plenty of ammunition and they were equipped with guns larger than Krupps ever turned out.

The part that Britain had taken in the war was much appreciated by the Allied nations. British doctors, British nurses and British gold had assisted the people of Serbia, Belgium, France and Russia. The Belgian refugees had been cared for and it was the success of the late British loan that had overawed the German people. This was a part of England's part in the war.

Every German Locked Up

Every German in the Dominion of Canada should be locked up and the people who made seditious utterances should be placed where they could do no harm. The time was mature when political and religious differences should be wiped out. The happiest man today is the man in the trenches. His conscience is satisfied. The war has first claim on Canada and Canada's people today. The man who employs an eligible is a traitor to the country

Britain will win the war and Canada's share will be commensurate with the part she has taken in supplying the Empire.

In conclusion the speaker paid his respects to the women for the part they had taken in the war and wished the men had responded half as well

Before closing the meeting, "Rule Britannia" was played by the band and Capt. Dancy took advantage of the occasion to point out the unpatriotic action of people rushing to the caits when the National Anthem was being played.

BAGDAD HAS FALLEN TO THE BRITISH

AN ADVANCE ON FRONT OF OVER THREE MILES

British Capture Village of Irles, and Defences, Many Prisoners, Four Trench Mortars and Fifteen Machine Guns.

LONDON, March 11. — An official announcement today states that Bagdad has been captured by the British.

The London Times, editorially discussing the capture of Bagdad, pays a tribute to the Indian troops. It says: "We are too apt to speak as though the troops of Gen. Maude's command were exclusively British. It must always be remembered that a very large proportion of the forces he guided to victory are Indian regiments and cavalry, which hung on the flanks of the demoralized Turkish army and chased it to the confines of Bagdad. It must have been almost exclusively Indian cavalry and infantry which bore many months of privations, and included Indian units which had already fought heroically in France, on Gallipoli and in Egypt.

LONDON, March 11.—Last night's official statement says: "We captured the village of Irles and its defences. The advance extended over three miles. We took a considerable number of prisoners and captured four trench mortars and fifteen machine guns. Our casualties were small.

"Four of our aeroplanes failed to return yesterday. We brought down one enemy machine."

PARIS, March 11.—(Official.)—"South of Avre our fire exploded an enemy munition depot. In the Champagne quite spirited fighting took place in the sectors of St. Hilaire le Grande and Maisons de Champagne. A German airplane was brought down by our special guns."

PARIS, March 11. — French troops made several successful surprise attacks on German trenches in the sectors of Lassigny and Cannysurmetz, says today's official announcement.

RUSSIANS TAKE TOWN

PETROGRAD, March 11.—Russian troops occupied the town of Hamadan and are pursuing the fleeing Turks, is the official statement today.

ROME, March 11.—Local artillery actions took place along the whole front, and especially in the area of the Adige valley and to the east of Gorizia yesterday, it is officially announced today. Airplanes dropped bombs at various places, and fires were started in many of the objectives

ASK REFUND

ON $400 IN FINES SENT TO THE PROVINCIAL TREASURER.

During the past month the police department have been successful in prosecuting certain persons for offences against the Dominion statutes. The fines amounted to $400 and the city clerk had to hand the amount over to the Provincial Treasurer.

The finance committee were advised by City Clerk Armstrong to apply to the provincial treasurer for a refund to the city of the amount so paid. Needless to say, the motion favoring the application passed unanimously.

DEMAND FOR VACANT LOTS TO BE WORKED

Aldermen and Labor Officials Start Something.

If you have a vacant lot or plot of land in the city, and you are not going to use it this year, and will allow it to be cultivated, send your name and the location of the land to City Clerk Armstrong at once.

This was the first move advocated by a meeting of the city Finance Committee and a committee appointed by the Trades and Labor Council on Saturday night. Ald. Stratton, chairman of the finance committee, presided, and there were present Ald. Dobin, Weir, Saunders, Duncan, Mayor Duffus, and Messrs. Bolwell, Myland, A. Meyer, F. Brown, Hartley and Crowe.

Mayor Duffus thought that the agitation for more production on urban areas was a great necessity. He realized the complications that were likely to be encountered. The suggestion of a grant did not meet with his approval but he thought that in the case of a poor man the city might get his land ploughed and the cost could be repaid after the crop was taken off.

Joseph Crowe suggested getting a list of the property owners who would be willing to give their land free, to be cultivated during the present year.

Ald. Dobbin suggested ploughing up King Edward Park and dividing it into plots for culture.

This idea did not appeal to the aldermen generally unless it was cultivated by the Boy Scouts and the crop handed over to the Charity Board for distribution. The objection to Ald. Dobbin's idea was that a park was a public place and no discrimination could be made in its use.

J. J. Hartley was of the opinion that what the people interested wanted was ground— not an acre, but a small plot which the owner would allow to be ploughed up. This should give a man an opportunity to grow a crop of vegetables. It might be arranged for four or five friends to take a large plot between them and work it on shares.

Ald. Weir pointed out the danger of a crop the first year, particularly where the sod had not been broken up for any length of time. Potatoes would be the only thing that would grow there.

A. J. Bolwell stated that the Trades and Labor Council had appointed a committee of two from each ward to get information.

The difficulty of finding out who owned a vacant plot next door to a man willing to work it was suggested. The City Assessor has such information if such a case should arise.

The City Clerk was agreed on to receive the names of lot owners who will assist in the "greater production" scheme, and the meeting adjourned until next Saturday night to await results.

Ald. Dobbin was asked to look after the publicity end of the campaign.

Piano Recital at the Conservatory

What Do These Words Mean to You!

They mean greater safety in the Home. Surely something that interests you keenly!

Perhaps you have noticed these words and the notation, "No fire left when blown out," on our new "Silent Parlor" match boxes. The splints or sticks of all matches contained in these boxes have been impregnated or soaked in a chemical solution which renders them dead wood once they have been lighted and blown out, and the danger of FIRE from glowing matches is hereby reduced to the greatest minimum.

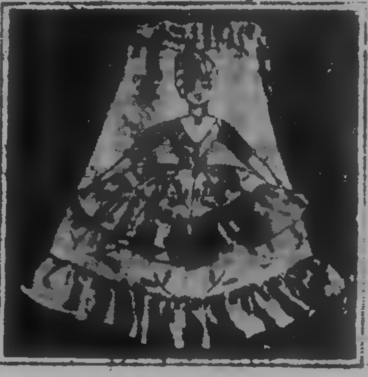
READY FOR GIFTS.

One Frilly Lady to Go to Your Friend's House.

Housekeepers always delight in any number of bags. This one, suitable for so many different purposes, is made of pale blue linen ruffled with a bias of a darker shade, the ruffles forming the skirt of a very dressy lady done in outline stitches. The bag closes with a linen cord and tassel.



QUITE THE FASHION.

Geisha Bags.

A pretty name for a pretty fad! These delightful little bags of brightly printed Japanese silks in all sorts of patterns and colors come made in simple shapes, with bright cords run through a loosely crocheted edge at the top. The color of the design is repeated in the lining. A prettier use for scraps of Japanese silks could not be found. If you want something particularly lovely buy one of the embroidered Japanese silk bags, or if you have remnants of an embroidered kimono or silk scarf turn that into a bag for your party accessories.

In the Clay Belt.

To demonstrate in every way the agricultural possibilities of Northern Ontario [illegible] to establish a creamery at New Liskeard on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway. The Ontario Department of Agriculture has already been engaged in selecting a type of dairy animal that will be suitable to the northern climate, and in order that settlers and farmers may have a market available the creamery will be established.

To meet the demand for agricultural labor the Director of Colonization is sending agents to points in the United States for the purpose of attracting men looking for this class of work to Ontario during the coming summer. A year ago this was tried with considerable success, and as the supply of that class of labor is even larger now, it is expected that an increased number will take advantage of the opportunity. Farmers desiring assistance should communicate with the Director of Colonization before the first of February and the applications will be dealt with in the order of receipt.

Winter In Florida.

While so many folks in the north are wrapped in furs and woolens, those who are spending the winter in Florida need no such garments. They lose, however, many pleasures that make cold weather very enjoyable to many people—old and young. For instance, they cannot skate because there is no ice, and the only coasting they may do is on a roller coaster. Sleigh riding is also an unknown sport where the warm sun shines. The little people here pictured probably don't give a thought to those sports because they are having a jolly time in the sand. No Jack Frost to nip their toes and color their cheeks.

J. T. O'CONNELL'S REAL SNAPS IN REAL ESTATE

FOR SALE—100 Acre Farm of choice land in Smith Township, well improved and fenced. Owner is retiring from farming and will sell farm, stock and implements if purchaser so desires. Owner is moving to the city and will take a suitable house in exchange. This is a rare opportunity for a probable purchaser.

10 ACRES OF CHOICE GARDEN LAND, five acres of which is new land; contains a frame house, stable, hog pen, hen house and large driving-shed; situated near May's School. Possession at once.

A CHANCE TO PURCHASE OR LEASE a good farm, 100 acres of choice land, situated on the boundary between Otonabee and Douro Townships. This farm is well fenced and watered, and a quantity of fall plowing done on it. The buildings consist of a frame house, one large frame barn with stabling underneath, and a large frame hay barn. Frame horse stable separate. Possession given at once.

FOR SALE—A Comfortable Home, consisting of one and one-half storey brick house, containing 6 rooms, situated on a corner lot 50 x 120 feet, in East City. Rents for $10.00 per month. Owner will sell or exchange for a good improved house having seven or eight rooms in the West End of the city, and pay a liberal difference in cash for the right place and location. Parties having a good class of house now have an opportunity of exchanging for a more suitable one.

If you are interested in either of the above propositions, kindly call to the office and we will be pleased to give you further particulars and have you inspect the above Real Estate Snaps.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

'TWAS A LONG WAY HOME BUT KAY'S RINK ARRIVED

Consolation Winners by Three Shots in Finals.

Alex. Kay and his famous rink of curlers won the consolation finals at the rink Saturday night when Skip Harry Foote's four were defeated by a score of 15 to 12. It took many many a game in order for the popular Alex. to win, as the "play over" games necessitated a change in the draws and made contests in rounds that were thought to be settled.

The semi-finals were concluded on Saturday afternoon when Skip Kay defeated Skip J. H. Ferguson by a score of 13 to 10.

The rinks and scores in the draw were:

A. L. Killaly	G. Copping
A. J. Grant	M. Comstock
E. G. Patterson	P. D. Fitzgerald
A. C. Kay	J. H. Ferguson
Skip 13	Skip 10

The finals started in the evening at 8 o'clock. the following being the competing rinks and score:

A. L. Killaly	J. Comstock
A. J. Grant	W. R. Turner
E. G. Patterson	R. L. Dobbin
A. C. Kay	H. F. Foote
Skip 15	Skip 12

The final game by ends was:

Kay	3x4xxxxx22xx22—15
Foote	x1x21113xx12xx—12

INTER-RINK GAMES.

Skips Alex. Kay and J. W. McDermid, the runners-up in the inter-rink group contests, will play off this evening to decide who will have the third and fourth positions. Skips Wightman and Best hold the first and second, respectively.

$2,500,000 on His Life.

NEW YORK, March 12. J. P. Morgan has made application for $2,500,000 life insurance, which would be the largest policy ever written under one name. It was understood the risk would be distributed among several companies and that the insurance was intended to protect Mr. Morgan's partners in their mutual business interests, as well as for the banker's personal protection.

ADAMS AND HALPIN MADE GREAT SHOWING AT ARENA

Scored Seven Goals for Riversides at Toronto.

Jack Adams and Grant Halpin helped St. Patrick's to defeat Riversides by 7 to 5 in a post-season hockey match at the Arene, Toronto, Saturday night. The Mail and Empire says:

The St. Patrick's greatly strengthened their team by the use of Jack Adams, a brother of Soldier Bill Adams, their star defence man, and Halpin, of this year's Peterborough intermediate team. Adams is as good on the line as his brother is on the defence; he was responsible for six of the seven counters. Halpin, who combined with him nicely, got the other. Both have speed and can handle their sticks with any of the average senior O. H. A. players of this region.

The truth is that the St. Pat.-Peterborough 247th aggregation was a trifle too fast for the Riversides, and they needed all their regular men to keep down the score.

Jack Adams was the star of the contest. He has speed and a dead-on shot. He had no trouble in checking Dopp and had the edge on all the Riversides except Merrick and Smith.

THE LITTLE LEAD CUP AMBLES ON

EASON RINK TAKE CHARGE OF THE "SILVERWARE."

The Mercantile Cup changed hands again on Saturday night. The holder, Vice-Skip, E. G. Patterson, was playing in the consolation finals, and he delegated Percy Fitzgerald to defend Vice-Skip Dave Eason's challenge. The result was a win for Eason by the narrow margin of one shot. Rinks and scores:—

T. O. Donaldson	C. B. Colson
J. S. Brown	G. Benor
T. Brightman	G. H. Giroux
D. E. Eason	P. D. Fitzgerald
Skip 9	Skip 8

Vice-Skip J. Wiley has challenged the winner, and if the ice is good it will be played next Saturday night.

MISSING MAN FOUND DEAD IN DYE TANK.

TORONTO, March 12. — Missing since Jan. 25, Jos. E. Gent, 35 years of age, 324 Carlton street, was found dead Saturday afternoon in one of the dye tanks of the Standard Woolen Mills Co., 237 East Front street. The body was discovered while employes were emptying the tanks. The man was employed by the woolen Co. but on Jan. 25 he did not return home, and the police were asked to locate him. He had not been in very good health, and how he come to be in the tank is a mystery to the members of the firm and the police, who are conducting an investigation. The body was removed to the morgue and an inquest will be held.

PRACTICAL APPRECIATION FROM QUAKER OATS CO.

Cheque for $15 for Each of the Firemen on Duty at the Fire, in letter From Superintendent Denham.

Mr. W. H. Denham, superintendent of the Quaker Oats Co., has sent to Fire Chief Howard a cheque for $15 for each of the men who were on duty the day of the Quaker Oats Co. fire. In his letter Mr. Denham says:

"I wish also to say that I appreciate very greatly the efforts of yourself and the men on that day. It was such a terrible disaster, so sudden of such a fierceness that carried it beyond the scope of the Peterborough fire department, or, in fact, I believe of any much larger fire department under the conditions. I especially wish you to accept my thanks and extend some to the men for their assistance after the fire in answering to the different calls which we made upon the department.

DEADLOCK IN THE FRENCH PARLIAMENT

BRIAND HAS MAJORITY IN BOTH CHAMBERS; BUT COMMITTEES ARE AGAINST HIM.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 12—Attacks of the Opposition in the French Parliament have produced a situation impossible to continue. The general opinion is that the Opposition, which has been resorting to obstruction by refraining from voting, must overthrow the Cabinet and assume the responsibility for solving the problems upon which they are attacking the ministry, or else cease the attacks.

The anomaly of the situation is that while M. Briand has a majority in both Chambers, the committees are against him.

W. M. GERMAN ADVOCATES ELECTION

Statement by Liberal M.P. at Gathering of Faithful.

ST. CATHARINES, March 12. At the joint conference held here on Saturday between the Lincoln Federal Reform Association and St. Catharines Provincial Association, Mr. W. M. German, M.P., congratulated women on the possession of the vote and the conference on being the first to greet women as equal voters "in the partnership of politics." He promised support of Capt. Lovelace's candidature. Mr. German thought Sir Robert Borden should have endeavored to form a real war Government before asking for an extension of Parliament, but that was too late now, as the present Government had outlived any usefulness it might have had. The chief object urged for avoiding the turmoil of a Dominion election was recruiting, but that had so sunk as to be a dead letter, and it would be better to have an election either to give the Liberals a chance to alter it or to strengthen the hands of the present Administration if the people chose it. Should a Liberal majority be secured as he thought it would, no Liberal would tie Sir Wilfrid Laurier's hand in taking into the Cabinet the best men in the Dominion, whether in Parliament or not.

HORSE FAIRS AT MARKET IS PROSPECT

PETERBORO' HAS OPPORTUNITY TO BE AMONG CITIES ON CIRCUIT.

FAIR EVERY MONTH.

Messrs. Williams and Coulter, representing the Ontario Horse Shippers' Association are in the city for the purpose of interviewing the members of the City Council with the object of starting a monthly horse fair here.

Barrie, Orangeville, Listowel, Arthur and other places have held fairs for a number of years and they have acted in no small way to help the farmers and incidentally the merchants and banks.

There are about 70 members of the association and all are in the market for horses of all breeds. At Arthur last week there were 53 buyers present.

The association is looking to establish fairs at Lindsay, Peterborough and London. If this city is chosen as one of the points, a fair will be held here on the fourth Wednesday of each month, the first one to be held on the 28th inst.

The Manufacturers Committee are conferring with the delegates this afternoon.

GERMAN PEOPLE ARE STARVING; THEY WANT FOOD

NOT SO MUCH CONCERNED ABOUT VICTORY OR DEFEAT.

WEAKENED COURAGE IS BOLSTERED BY UNTRUTH

GERARD'S PARTY CONFIRM REPORTS ON HEALTH OF KAISER.

NEW YORK, March 12.—A Herald despatch from Havana says several men and women who left Berlin with Ambassador Gerard and arrived here with him via Spain say the German people are starving and do not care whether victory or defeat comes. What they want is food. Their weakened courage is bolstered up by false reports of victories. Before another year, harvests must fail for lack of fertilizers and even the troops may not have sufficient food. These passengers confirm the reports of the Kaiser's ill-health and say he is always in the hands of physicians.

CAPT. MILLER PROMOTED.

in view of the general railway situation and the war conditions, has decided to cancel rates and excursions this year. This will help the railways in their fight against car shortage and freight congestion.

The only special rates which will be permitted will be to students and commercial travellers.

In addition to prohibition of excursion trains, the railways are not permitted to run any special trains except for the moving of troops.

The Last Straw.

Wundel — Cold? Not a bit of it. Why, I remember last Christmas, when I was in California, the steam from a passing engine froze hard and fell on the line in sheets!

Smyler—That's nothing. In 1888 the electricity in our telephone exchange got frozen, and when the thaw came along all the machines talked as hard as they could for over six hours.

Chansit—The coldest Christmas I can remember was in '84, when the policemen had to run to keep themselves warm.

Silently the last speaker was awarded the palm.

Follows the Example.

"The same thing happened when, in the afternoon, we drove in another attack on the right flank of the positions we had taken. The garrison had witnessed the surrender of the morning, and, following the example, threw down their rifles and broke out of the trenches, an unarmed horde almost outnumbering the attacking regiment, and again they had to run the gauntlet of their own guns.

$242.25 GIVEN FOR GRENFELL

CONTRIBUTION IS BETTER THAN THAT OF PREVIOUS YEARS.

The treasurer of the local branch of the Labrador Medical Mission desires to thank the newspapers and all who have helped in making this year's contribution better than that of any previous year. This surely proved that the Church has not fallen down, and it is to the credit of the citizens of Peterborough that when so many pressing calls have to be met, they have so generously responded to the needs of Dr. Grenfell's worthy work.

The amount received is $242.25, of which $50 goes to maintain the Peterborough cot.

A bale will be sent later, and any who are willing to contribute warm clothing for men, women or children are asked to communicate with Mrs. James Wood, Box 990 or telephone No. 1, who will send for parcels.

MR. MITCHELL IS SORRY TO LEAVE

POPULAR PASTOR OF ST. ANDREW'S EXPRESSES REGRET.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell announced at the evening service at St. Andrew's Church last night that he had decided to accept the call to Toronto and expressed his regret at the severance of the happy relations that have existed between him and his people since he came to Peterborough over a year ago. He does not, however, intend to preach a farewell sermon but will always treasure pleasant recollections of this city and will visit St. Andrew's whenever the opportunity offers.

A committee has been appointed to select a successor to Mr. Mitchell to act until Capt. Rollins returns to the pulpit. Just when Mr. Mitchell will preach his final sermon has not yet been decided.

MUTT AND JEFF NOW MARRIED

CARTOON CHARACTERS IN REAL LIFE AT GRAND; TWO PERFORMANCES THURSDAY.

The best evidence that a theatre manager can offer his patrons as to the actual merits of an attraction that he is offering for their approval is the undisputed facts concerning its success elsewhere. What is said here concerning the success of Gus Hill's production of Bud Fisher's great cartoons, Mutt and Jeff, can easily be verified in the news columns of almost any newspaper. More than five hundred prominent newspapers throughout the country are running the clever Fisher cartoons daily. The newspapers are paying a bonus for the privilege of getting the Fisher cartoons, because they attract their readers. They have proven the biggest success since cartoon pictures have become a feature in daily newspapers. Millions of people open their morning paper to the funny page to see these two funny fellows and what they are doing next. You can then imagine with what pleasure the people look forward to seeing these two funny fellows in real life, depicted by real and clever flesh and blood actors, who are physically fitted to properly portray every movement that Bud Fisher has contrived to be funny. Mutt and Jeff has actually created a sensation never before known in theatrical history. In New York City, where the play ran to record business at the Grand Opera House and at the Manhattan Opera House in Chicago, where it ran fifteen weeks to actual capacity, and in every large town or small town or city in the entire country, it wrung from the most conservative critics the enviable title of being the greatest financial and artistic success in a quarter of a century. You don't want any better evidence than this, do you? The big New York Company with all the arguments that won it its success will be here. Be sure and get your seats early.

FRENCH DEFEAT HUNS' ATTACKS

The Speakers' Patriotic League Ask Government For Measure of Compulsory Enlistment

COMPULSION IS NOW NECESSARY TO GET MEN INTO SERVICE

Speakers' Patriotic League Unanimous for Introduction of Militia Act or Other Compulsory Law.

ASK COUNCIL AGAIN FOR GRANT

Moved by Mr. T. F. Matthews, seconded by Mr. W. H. Dunsford:—

"Resolved, that in view of the absolute failure of the voluntary system of recruiting at the present time, this meeting of manufacturers and other business men of Peterborough resolve that the Government be strongly urged to put the Militia Act or some other compulsory measure into immediate operation, and that the secretary of the Speakers' Patriotic League be instructed to forward to the Acting-Premier a copy of this resolution."

Professional men, business men and manufacturers at the Speakers' Patriotic League meeting in the recreation rooms of the Armories last night spoke alike. All admitted that the day of voluntary enlistment is past and all expressed the opinion that the government should instal the machinery necessary to bring eligible men into the ranks of the King's army.

After a number of representative citizens had expressed opinions on the question of filling up the ranks of the 247th Battalion, the memorial given above, was passed unanimously. Several of the speakers felt that compulsory enlistment had been long delayed. Mr. Joseph Wearing, secretary of the league, said that since Sir Sam Hughes had been kicked out of office nothing had been done. A Liberal government might not have bettered the situation, he admitted, but the fact remained and it was up to the government in power to do something.

The suggestion was made by President J. A. Aylmer that the government was waiting for an expression of opinion from the people—and was receiving it.

The attendance numbered about thirty. Mr. Aylmer, in opening the meeting, expressed disappointment over the small attendance when the meeting had been announced in the press and sixty letters had been mailed calling attention to the meeting, in the interest of recruiting for the 247th Battalion.

Peterborough Not Alone

Mr. T. F. Matthews, the first speaker, said he had found the recruiting situation generally to be the same as in Peterborough. Col. Ackerman had done the very best he could do and in the speaker's opinion nothing remained but to force eligible men into the ranks. In speaking of young men in employment who had not enlisted, Mr. Matthews said he had found the situation, generally prevailing, to be the case at his plant. Men who had not enlisted should be made to go. At the same time, the speaker pointed out, that when men were taken from work which they had long been accustomed to perform, it took one-fifth more men to do the work. Some men, he said, get into factories working on war supplies, under the cloak of doing something for their country, but they are trying to get away from their duty to their country.

Willing Men Have Gone

"There is only one thing for us to do," declared Col. Miller. "Let the government give us some machinery to bring the men out." He believed manufacturers were willing and anxious to do their part and he felt all, generally speaking, had done their best. The situation is this: The willing men have gone — the men you get today have to be dragged in.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, in seconding the memorial took the view that compulsion should be employed by the government.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman quoted Capt. Dancy's statement that "the manufacturers ought to be ashamed of themselves," and said that when one employer would discharge an eligible man, he would go to another factory and would be given work. "I would be willing to give up any man as a recruit," said Mr. Ackerman.

"Conscription is the only way out of the difficulty," declared Mr. C. H. Pennefather. "Men who have not the courage and spirit should be obliged to get into khaki."

Demands for Munitions

Mr. A. L. Henry, superintendent of Henry Hope & Sons, told of the repeated demands made by the Munitions Board for greater output. "We can't get enough men now," said Mr. Henry. Discussing women munition workers, he said women could not do the work of the Peterborough manufacturers. His firm had experimented with women and had found they could not do the work. Men must be physically fit—very fit—to do the work. "But we do not prevent any man from enlisting, and recruiting officers can come to our plant at any time," he said.

Mr. Henry added that he might assist the battalion financially by subscriptions from his employes and he would be glad to contribute himself.

FREE HOUSES TO THE FAMILIES OF MEN ENLISTED

BRANTFORD'S SCHEME TO STIMULATE ENLISTMENT FOR OVERSEAS.

BRANTFORD, March 13. — The campaign that under the direction of the 215th Battalion has been in progress during the month of February with the object of providing house accommodation, rent free, to families of married men who enlisted during the month has netted appreciable results. In cash contributions collected each month and in the promises of houses and flats for the balance of the war, the equivalent of ten houses worth ten dollars each a month has been raised, and these will be allotted to the men entitled to them. The time limit for eligible applicants for these houses has been extended, and it is now proposed to consider all those who come into the ranks of the battalion during the present month. It is expected that this move will give a decided stimulus to recruiting.

BRITISH ATTACK ON WIDE FRONT AT ARRAS SEVERAL ENEMY ATTACKS DEFEATED BY FRENCH

Two Enemy Movements Made on Verdun Front Were Easily Countered—French Take 150 Prisoners.

CUNARD FREIGHTER GOES DOWN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 13. — Several attacks were made by Germans last night and all were repulsed, the war office announced today. A strong German detachment which attempted to advance on Coury road was checked. Another futile attempt was made at Beaulne Et Chivy. Two German attacks on Hill 304 and on Louvemont work, on the Verdun front, were countered easily. French took 150 prisoners yesterday.

During the night the Germans bombarded Soissons.

French successfully raided German trenches between the Avre and the Aisne.

BERLIN, March 13.—A headquarters statement says: The British made an attack on a wide front south of Arras yesterday, which failed, with heavy losses. French attacks at various points also failed.

In Galicia, north of Zlochoff-Tarnopol railroad, Germans in one coup, by reconnoitering detachments, captured 320 Russians with thirteen machine guns.

Prisoners were also taken at other points.

CUNARD FREIGHTER REPORTED SUNK.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—A despatch from Consul Frost at Queenstown announces the sinking of the Cunard freighter Folia, 6,700 tons, originally an Italian liner.

SIX HUNDRED APPLICATIONS FROM YOUNG WOMEN WHO WOULD JOIN GIRL CLERKS CONTINGENT

There is no dearth of applications from young women who are willing to join a contingent of Canadian girl clerks for service overseas, in order that men might be released for field service. Already Capt. J. H. Burnham has received over six hundred applications from young women in all parts of the country and each mail brings in additional aplications.

Capt. Burnham has sent to Sir George Foster, Acting-Premier, the applications he has received to date and they will be taken over by the proper department.

NEVER REFUSED THE COMMAND OF BATT'N.

That Col. Walker had never refused nor had he been offered the command of an overseas battalion, was the statement made in defence of Col. Walker, by Mr. Joseph Wearing, secretary of the Speakers' Patriotic League, at the meeting held at the Armories last night.

Mr. Wearing made the statement without qualification. He stated that it was only fair to Col. Walker that the statement be made publicly.

Series of Strikes on Railroads if Agreement is Not Reached

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 13.—It is reported here that if the conference on the eight hour question here on Thursday fails to reach a satisfactory agreement, employes of the brotherhoods have arranged for a progressive series of strikes on all important railroads, beginning Saturday evening.

AERIAL SUPERIORITY IS MAINTAINED BY BRITISH

Average Air Casualties for Six Weeks, Seven Killed, Eight Wounded and Four Missing Per Week

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 13. "We are satisfied with the best type of our flying machines at the front. Some machines which are not up to standard are being replaced as rapidly as possible," said James Ian McPherson in the Commons today, replying to a suggestion that the British aerial superiority on the Western front had not been maintained. The average air casualties for six weeks had been a little more than seven killed, eight wounded and four missing per week.

NO MINISTER OVERSEAS TO RESIGN FROM HIS CHARGE

St. Andrew's Congregation, Cobourg, Insist That Lieut.-Col. Beattie Come Back to Them When War is Over—Presbytery Declines to Accept Resignation.

A deputation from St. Andrew's Church, Cobourg, consisting of Lt.-Col. McNaughton, H. Hardman, W. S. Allan, F. A. Harvey and G. A. Bell, appeared before the Peterborough Presbytery at its regular meeting in St. Andrew's Church this morning. Lt.-Col. (Rev.) Beattie, pastor of the Cobourg church, has sent in his resignation. When he left for overseas with the Cobourg battalion he was granted leave of absence for the duration of the war. He feels now that as there is little prospect of an early peace his duty is to give up the charge, as the church is likely to suffer during his absence.

The deputation from Lt.-Col. Beattie's congregation urged that the resignation be not accepted. The church wants him back when the war is over, but has no desire to have him desert his military duties. Even if the war lasts for five years, they will keep the pulpit open for him.

A committee was appointed to draw up a resolution, which will be forwarded to Lt.-Col. Beattie, asking him to withdraw his resignation. This was unanimously carried.

Filling Vacant Charges.

A committee appointed at a former meeting recommended a change in the matter of of filling vacant charges. They recommended that a committee of three be appointed to co-operate with the moderator in such cases, to supply a list of names of suitable candidates, each of whom shall preach two trial sermons, and during the intervening week engage in pastoral work in the congregation. This recommendation will be forwarded to the General Assembly.

Representatives to Assembly.

Last year the General Assembly sent a remit to the presbyteries asking them to consider the advisability of reducing expenses by changing the basis of representation to that body from one in six to one in eight. Rev.

Prisons in Belgium Are Filled With Mutinous Hun Soldiers

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 13.—The Amtserdam Telegraaf says prisons at Namur and Huy, in Belgium, are crowded to four or five times their normal capacity with mutinous German soldiers.

The Telegraaf also says that further food riots have occurred at Barmen.

THEY MUST BE IMPORTING MEN

LINDSAY BATTALION REPORTS 64 MEN ATTESTED IN 15 DAYS.

The Lindsay Warder says that the 252nd Battalion secured the largest number of recruits for the fifteen days ending Feb. 28 of any battalion in military district No. 3. 64 men were attested during that period. During the first two weeks of February 38 men were attested, making a total for the month of 102. This will be gratifying news to the people of Victoria and Haliburton counties. Recruiting is still brisk. From the 1st to the 10th March inclusive, 34 men have been added to the strength and men continue to come steadily. All officers, N.C.O.'s and men are enthusiastic and no better proof of their work can be given than the figures above quoted.

The following officers, non-coms. and men of the 247th Batt. have gone to Kingston for a course of instruction—

To I. S. of I.—Lieuts. R. G. Johnston, W. H. Moore, R. H. Leach; Sergt.s W. Jones, J. B. Bernard; Corp. T. Blunt, Lance-Corp. J. Willis; Ptes. W. A. Primeau, F. Stanley.

To B. F. and P. T.—Sergt. R. F. Macmahon, Corps. G. E. Heath, G. L. Spencer; Lance-Corp. L. S. Bristow; Ptes. J. A. Keitel, A. G. Taylor.

Corp. C. G. Pilkey and Pte. R. Rue will take a course in signalling.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 13, 1917.

A CALL FOR CONSCRIPTION.

ONCE MORE the manufacturers and other leading citizens of Peterborough, in conference assembled, have called upon the Government to introduce conscription, or at least put the Militia Act in effect, in order to compel eligible young men to do their duty.

Semi-official announcements are made by recruiting officers that his will be done within the next few weeks. In the meantime the work of enlisting new men has fallen off to such an extent that the officers in charge may well be forgiven if they are discouraged almost to the point of resigning. The very fact that conscription in some form is assured is sufficient to account for the apathy that prevails among the public. It is felt that every legitimate resource has been exhausted, and it is impossible to try to accomplish anything further under the voluntary system.

There are eligible young men employed in the stores and factories, and the employers know that this is true. It is, however, hardly fair to ask them to dispense with the services of these young men when all the latter have to do is to get other jobs by applying for them. The employers of Peterborough are ready to make sacrifices as so many of them have done already. They will gladly surrender the services of any eligibles on their staff, so long as they are satisfied that these men will be enrolled as members of a battalion instead of going to work for some other firm or leaving this city to seek positions elsewhere.

HOW WILL WOMEN VOTE?

BISHOP O'BRIEN, in his address at the Public Library Saturday afternoon, advised the women of Ontario not to align themselves with either of the political parties, but to preserve their independence.

It is the very fact that women are likely to do this that is giving the practical politician so many uneasy hours. All calculations are likely to be upset since women have been given the vote. It is impossible for anyone to forecast the result of any contest that may be pending. The new voters are not likely to follow the example of the men and cast their ballots for a particular party because their fathers have set them an example. Women will have regard for principles rather than party. They will not pray for some reform and then vote against it when the test comes. They will not pose as the champions of truth and righteousness in public and then in the secrecy that pervades the polling booth fall for the same old heresies.

Six hundred and thirty thousand new voters in Ontario would not dismay the politicians so much if it were possible to catalogue the former. The new voters mean independent voters, likely to be guided by reason—although some will call it caprice—and this portends a revolution in Ontario, social and political.

THE PENNY BANKS AGAIN.

THE MATTER of penny banks in schools has been before the Ontario public for the past twenty years. Seventeen years ago the subject was taken up by the local school board, just as it was in other cities and towns in the province, and it was decided at that time that the proposition had little to recommend it. It was accordingly turned down.

When a question has been discussed by school boards and in the newspapers for the past twenty years, the public have little excuse for pleading that they do not understand it. It has been revived locally by a member of the school board anxious to make a record, revived in a manner intended to convey the impression that it is something new, and the journalistic supporter of the champion of an ancient cause lends its moral support to the movement by publishing the portrait of its educational model.

Even regarded as a business proposition these days, the penny banks have little to recommend them. The Government will pay three per cent. for such deposits, while the interest on the war loan now being floated is five per cent. Naturally the latter investment is the one that will appeal to the people.

Children can be taught thrift, and patriotism, too, in connection with this loan. Let them co-operate with their parents in saving money to lend to the Government. They can co-operate with their parents in saving money for the war loan by denying themselves anything in the nature of luxuries and by making other sacrifices. This would be practical patriotism, of vastly greater value as a mentor in economy than carrying to school pennies that have been given to them for the purpose and the depositing of which, in nine cases out of ten, involves no self-denial on their part.

If there is a demand for penny banks on the part of the parents, the school board will not stand in the way. All the members ask is that they be shown that the popular sentiment is in favor of it. Bankers and teachers may be opposed to the innovation as something which will impose fruitless duties upon them; but if the banks are decided upon, bankers and teachers will co-operate. It has, however, not been established to the satisfaction of members of the board that the voice of one of their number, and that of a newspaper, is the voice of the people.

LOCAL LABOR TROUBLES.

WHEN WILL THE manufacturers of this or any other city realize the futility of kicking against the goads by fighting organized labor? The history of any single strike or lockout is a record of all such economic disturbances. Men submit their demands, probably asking for more than they hope to get. The company refuses and the result is the men either walk out or find the doors locked against them. Then the company resort to the old plan of bringing in strikebreakers, and conditions become serious. In the end a compromise may be effected, but peace is never restored until the workers win their point in every important detail.

When the citizens of Peterborough voted in favor of tax exemption for the Metal Products Company at the municipal election a year ago, it was with the understanding that a plant was to be established in which the current rate of wages was to prevail. The electors did not anticipate any such war between capital and labor as that which broke out yesterday. The company obligated itself to enter into no unfair competition with any kindred industry already established here and paying its fair share of taxes. There are other factories in the city doing the same line of work in which the scale that the Metal Products employes ask for is paid.

Bringing in strikebreakers from Montreal, Hamilton or any other city will simply foment an industrial war. The strangers will eventually be taken into camp by the local union. That device has been tried in this city before by employers at odds with their men, and the first success has yet to be recorded.

The Machinists' Union is a strong organization for any company to engage in strife. It is international in its scope, and has twelve thousand members in Canada and one hundred and thirty thousand in both countries. A tax levied on the membership to carry on a strike or frustrate a lockout such as the one now in force here, would hardly be felt. Although the organization has its largest membership in the United States, W. H. Johnston, a Canadian by birth, is at the head of it.

The newspapers of Peterborough recently were confronted by a demand for more compensation for the printers, and instead of provoking a hopeless conflict they agreed to the new terms.

WHY NOT FAIR PLAY?

THE EXAMINER is not fair when it seizes its spiked, caveman club and, rushing into the midst of the aldermen, lambasts them indiscriminately and collectively for turning down the bathing beaches proposition. It is only just to publish the names of those who supported the movement and those who opposed it. The entire bunch of aldermen are not black. Even The Examiner, if caught in an unguarded moment, might go so far as to concede that there are two or three members of Council who are at least piebald. Hydrophobia is a serious malady, but the men who would grant the city bathing facilities are not yet afflicted with the disease.

PLANS OF THE LIBERALS.

W. M. GERMAN, M.P. of Welland, at a Liberal convention the other day, disclosed the plans and hopes of his party. It is clear from what he says that an election is imminent, the Opposition having the final say in this matter. They will, it is apparent, refuse to agree to another extension; the Administration are equally set against the formation of a coalition cabinet, so that an election is unavoidable.

Mr. German says that if the Liberals are returned to power, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will form a government of the leading men of the country, whether they are in Parliament or not. It is altogether likely that these would be found among his own followers, as no pledges are given with regard to their political connection.

A man who did not pass through the ordeal of an election would thus be placed in a position of power. After his appointment to the cabinet a safe constituency could be found for him. It seems that the Liberals have decided upon a course that is designed to overturn established customs, if not to violate the constitution outright. The preservation of a responsible form of government is of more moment to the country than the success of a party now in a hopeless, discredited and disorganized minority.

GARDENING IN ENGLAND.

OVER IN ENGLAND they are taking up civic gardening, too, calling the cultivated vacant lots allotment gardens. They go about the work systematically in that country. An English exchange tells how the matter was taken up by the council in a town in Westmorland. A special committee appointed for the purpose reported that they had found a suitable piece of ground. This was divided into plots of twenty-four yards by twelve yards, an acre thus providing sixteen allotments.

Some residents took two plots, and there were twenty two applicants in all. Seed potatoes are to be provided for all those not able to purchase them, these to be paid for when the crop is harvested. The War Agricultural Committee looks after this part of the work, and every man desirous of helping himself will be extended aid.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Free for a Century.

(Chicago Tribune.)

The seas were free enough before 1914. During upwards of a century Britannia ruled the waves, but she also charted and policed them, and the benefits of her trusteeship were shared by all nations. A sea power has always been an enlightened power; its selfishness has been an enlightened selfishness. It is not the fault of Britain that the seas are no longer free.

Considering the food shortage in Germany, the Kaiser must be a trifle curious as to the place where he'll eat his next Christmas dinner.

Fear More Temporizing.

(New York Globe.)

Even though Germany, despite her advertisement of purpose, avoids other overt acts and formal war is averted, the likelihood of this is so doubtful that it borders on criminal folly not to prepare. And Congress must act if there is to be preparation.

SUPPORT THE NEW WAR LOAN

The Dominion's new war loan will test the determination of the Canadian people to see the war through to the end. If this loan is as successful as its predecessors notice will be served upon the world, and particularly upon Germany, that there is no wavering of purpose among Canadians to fight on until democracy has been vindicated and autocracy crushed.

We have reached the supreme crisis of the war. Within the next few months the Allied peoples will be called upon to make sacrifices in treasure and in blood greater than any that have yet been known. Upon the shell-ravaged fields of Europe our brave soldiers face the future with fortitude and ungrudging devotion. Can we here at home have it said that our determination faltered at the critical hour, that we failed to support them in the supreme moment of crisis? Beyond the sea we have recently seen the people of the old Motherland, bearing upon their shoulders the titanic burden of unprecedented financial losses, respond to a further call for sacrifice in a manner that amazed the world. This war, it cannot be too often said, is ours as much as theirs, we cannot be true to our professions, we cannot be true to our soldiers who have died and do less than they have done. Let the people of Canada, then, unite in making this new demand upon their financial resources an occasion for impressing the world anew with the fact that this Dominion proposes, in the historic words of Mr. Asquith, to fight on to the "last ounce of its treasure, the last drop of its blood."

CANADA AND THE COST OF LIVING

Figures compiled by the Department of Labor show that Canada is faring better than most nations in the matter of the cost of living. Since the war began the price of food in the Dominion has gone up about 75 per cent. In Britain, however, prices have risen about 87 per cent.; in Germany about 250 per cent.; in Austria 300 per cent.; in Norway, Denmark and Sweden about 200 per cent.; in the United States about 90 per cent.

According to figures just issued by the United States Labor Bureau, the cost of table necessities in the Republic to the south has increased nearly 50 per cent. within the past six months, which advance is considerably greater than in Canada. Foodstuffs such as meats, potatoes and other vegetables of common use are higher in price in most American cities today than in either Montreal, Winnipeg or Toronto. The advance in potatoes alone in New York City has been nearly 360 per cent. since the beginning of the year. Lack of production and huge shipments to belligerent countries are given as the causes.

The moral of the situation seems to be that talk of increased prices being due to illegal combinations for exploitation of the public is not soundly based. The truth appears to be that the present extra-normal conditions are world-wide in their scope and influence, and are the inevitable outcome of tens of millions of people being taken from the work of production and engaged in work of destruction. Production and still more production would seem to be the only solution of the situation. The Government should be backed to the limit in its campaign to that end.

CANADA'S SOLDIERS IN ENGLAND

A speaker of a Toronto temperance convention, discussing vice in Great Britain, said Canada was outraged at the temptations her soldiers were subjected to there. Mr. Tennyson Smith, the widely-travelled lecturer, objected, saying: "You cannot find a worse place in the world than Montreal."

The idea that Canada's soldiers go to Great Britain as youngsters coming into contact for the first time with the temptations of life, is absurd, says the Ottawa Press-Journal. We have said so before, and repeat it. It is not necessary even to agree with Mr. Tennyson Smith's estimate of Montreal to realize that the young man who is unable to resist temptation does not have to leave Canada to fall a victim to vice. Sheer hypocrisy alone justifies raising a loud outcry in Canada against conditions in Great Britain which, except in form, are to be found in every centre of population in this country. Neither in Great Britain nor in Canada is vice tolerated, encouraged, or protected by the authorities.

Quite naturally, the Canadian soldier in Great Britain may feel a freedom of action that he does not experience at home. That is not the fault of the British authorities, any more than the civic authorities are to blame for the traditional liberty of conduct sometimes taken by the man whose wife "goes to the country." If the young Canadian is not sufficiently capable of resisting temptation when he leaves Canada, nothing the British authorities can do will make him behave himself. He goes to a country where public and private ideals are just as high as in Canada. He can be master of himself overseas just as well as at home, or he can misbehave himself overseas as easily as at home.

Those Canadians who are concerned over the welfare of our soldiers can be much more usefully employed considering and improving character and conditions at home than in exploiting rumors about conditions in Great Britain, which ninety per cent. of the loudest talkers do not understand. The responsibilities of parents at home cannot be shifted to the shoulders of the British authorities, and the Canadian soldiers are old enough and wise enough to take care of themselves in London, Montreal, Ottawa or anywhere else. Trust them.

Wit and Wisdom

Friend—What is the first thing you do when a man presents himself to you for consultation?

Doctor—I ask him if he has a car.

Friend—What do you learn from that?

Doctor—If he has one, I know he is wealthy—and, if he hasn't, I know he is healthy.

Astute

"I found such a wonderful bargain," said Mrs. Flatter.

"What was it?" asked her husband.

"You know I went down town to buy a hat. Well, just as I got in the store they put up a sign, 'All hats at half-price.'"

"So you only had to spend half of the money you intended."

"Oh, no; I bought two hats instead of one."

Deep Philosophy

Bystander—I suppose you would like to take a ride without worrying about tires and the like?

Motorist (fixing a puncture)—You bet I would.

Bystander—Well, here's a car ticket.

She—You don't mind my talking so much, do you?

He—No, indeed; but (facetiously) I may mind after we are married.

She—But I shan't mind then.

English Rector (to parishioner)—Good morning, Thompson. I hear you have a son and heir.

Parishioner—Yes, sir; our household now represents the United Kingdom.

Rector—How so?

Parishioner—Why, you see, I am English, my wife's Irish, the nurse is Scotch, and the baby wails.

THE LITTLE GRAY LADY

Why the Oldest Boarder Left Her Little, Half Bare, Top-Story Room

BY HUBERT FAU—

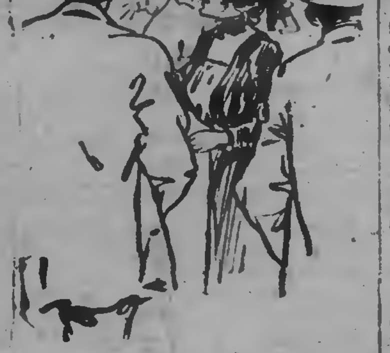
The Little Gray Lady had left our boarding house!

It was all the more astonishing because she had lived there, so Mrs. Potter said, for fourteen years. She had occupied that little half bare room of hers on the top story nearly all of that time. When she had come, most of us young fellows had been children playing Indians and making mud puddings. Nobody had thought that she would ever leave. She went out every morning at 8:30 to her work—she was cashier in some office downtown—and came back promptly at six; she had no friends; she never went out in the evening. Some of us, taking pity on the lonely little middle-aged spinster, had sought her friendship, but she had always amiably and politely discouraged us.

We looked at each other in astonishment that evening at the dinner table when Mrs. Potter told us. No, the Little Gray Lady had given no explanation. She had merely said, very sweetly, that she was going away, had packed her trunk and gone, giving some address in a modest uptown street. Mrs. Potter had hoped that she might be permitted to call. The Little Gray Lady had evaded the proposition with the adroitness born of fourteen years of evasion of all personal matters. Then she had driven away in a cab, and that was the only thing that had seemed unusual in the manner of her going. For the Litle Gray Lady was not given to cabs.

"Perhaps she's gone to get married," suggested Parsons, a shock-haired youth, who sat at Mrs. Potter's right.

"Mr. Parsons, there isn't any man worthy of her," said Mrs. Potter severely, and to that he heartily agreed. For everybody had loved the quiet, modest, kind-hearted little spinster who sat so demurely at our table and lived so unassumingly. I think we all felt a sense of personal loss.



Through the Crowd a Little Women Pushed Her Way.

I remember that night vividly, for we were all engrossed by the news that Governor Cowper had pardoned Melchior Jetley, the famous murderer, who had formed the text for innumerable discussions at debating societies during the period of his imprisonment. Everybody knew about Jetley; but since it is some years since his release the story may have faded out of the public mind, so I will briefly record it. Jetley had served seventeen years for the murder of Sam Briggs. It was a deliberate, premeditated, cold-blooded murder. Jetley was a racing man, and Sam Briggs was his partner. Jetley had recently married a very charming woman, the daughter of a fashionable clergyman of our town. Their short married life was singularly happy. Jetley abandoned his old habits and associates, settled down, reformed and went into business. Sam Briggs, his partner, followed suit and became his partner in business likewise. They had been married about eighteen months when Jetley was called west on business. Somebody—some busybody—sent him a telegram which brought him back in a hurry. He went home; Mrs. Jetley was not there. The scared maid told him she had gone to Kling's restaurant, frequented by a rather flashy, "sporty" set. Jetley went there in a hansom, entered, saw his wife seated at a table with Sam Briggs, drinking a cocktail. Jetley pulled out a revolver and shot Briggs dead.

He was tried, sentenced to death, and had his punishment commuted to imprisonment for life. After seventeen years Governor Cowper pardoned him. And the imprisonment, and the pardon, too, divided society into two hotly antagonistic camps. Some maintained that he should have been sent to the chair—or gallows, rather, for hanging was then the legal method of execution. Others demanded that he be freed. During the whole seventeen years the agitation continued. No doubt old-timers argue out the matter yet, as we did on that evening.

"Look at it this way," said Parsons. "The man shot a fellow man in cold blood. The law prescribes a penalty for murder. It should have been exacted."

I maintained that it was every man's duty to defend his home. We were divided half and half.

"I don't believe the taking of life is ever justified," put in Cranborne, our Socialist boarder. "Jetley was the victim of his environment. How many of us would not have done the same? Besides, did you fellows ever stop to think that he may have had loved ones who would suffer more than he by his death?"

"You're a sentimentalist," sneered Parsons. "Who cares for a murderer serving a life sentence?"

"Somebody may have cared. His wife!"

"Good Lord, Cranborne, do you suppose she cared what happened to him, or he what happened to her? You treat those criminals as though they were actuated by the same emotions as ordinary people. Why, society is well rid of them. Kill the man and drive the woman out of society and you'll improve the world better than by any crazy theories which don't accord with facts."

"I'd like to take a look at Jetley when he arrives at the station tomorrow," said Parsons. "The papers say he'll come down on the 2:42. I guess there'll be a mob of sightseers."

"Yes, ready to mob him," said Cranborne.

"Stuff!" said Parsons. "They'll carry him shoulder high. The mob always applauds the wrongdoer."

"Well," I interposed, "let's go and see." I think, but am not positive, that somebody laid a bet that Jetley would swagger through the crowd like a triumphant baseball star. Somebody else expected to see a broken criminal, creeping back hopelessly to the world of men. Anyway, we were all curious.

The train came in half an hour late. We were jammed into the heart of a huge throng that blocked the entire station. On the outskirts a force of police attempted vainly to clear a passage. The train slowed down; the passengers descended and stood gazing helplessly about them. Nobody could move a yard.

Suddenly shouts went up: "That's him!" they yelled, "that's him!" And they surged forward and about him, and neither cheered nor hooted, but stared open-mouthed at a middle-aged, tired, bowed, unhappy man in a suit of dark serge, carrying a cheap new suit-case.

Then, through the crowd a little woman pushed her way, forcing aside stronger men by some superhumanly endowed strength. She went up to the tired man and put her arms round his neck and kissed him, and the tired man dropped his bag and stared at her and said something softly and then covered his face with his hands; and I was near enough to see the tears trickling between his fingers. And the woman was the Little Gray Lady!

That's all I know. That's all I can tell, and I don't know who she was—although I know her name, which wasn't that of his wife, but may have been assumed. I'm only recording what I saw before the police pushed us away, and the tired man and the Little Gray Lady disappeared from our sight for ever. But there was a look of forgiveness and of love on both their faces that kept me quiet that night at the table, although Cranborne and Parsons engaged in a pretty stiff argument.

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood, through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries of the veins and head, producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, and miserable, your meals sour, and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it drunk before breakfast for a while will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick, and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

SET OUT TO PLEASE CRANKS

Clerk Who Gained Good Will of Difficult Customers Deserved Promotion That Followed.

"Anybody can hold the trade of a good-natured customer," said the superintendent of a large mercantile establishment to a new clerk. "It's the man who can please the cranks and chronic kickers whom we want and who will find himself in line for promotion."

The new clerk remembered. He set himself to please difficult customers, the ones who like to complain and will find an opportunity to do so no matter how good the service and merchandise. "I realized," he says, "that their money is just as good as the next man's, though it may be more difficult to get."

It was not long before the obliging clerk had built up a personal trade, so that critical customers would ask for him on entering the shop. They liked to be waited on by one whom they knew desired to please. Often they became much less crochety.

The superintendent was as good as his word. When the value of the new man's services became apparent, as it inevitably did, the promised promotion was not long delayed.

No One to Take the Bet.

There are lots of things worse than living for a week at the detention home, in the opinion of little Johnnie, a little orphan, who has known about nine years of life in the ways of the city streets. He made that institution his home for about a week at the order of Judge Taylor of juvenile court, pending the finding of a permanent home for him by the board of children's guardians.

During his stay there he gained nine pounds. He was a different boy on the day of his discharge, compared with the hungry, shiftless lad that went in.

"Did you eat lots of bread and molasses at the detention home, Johnnie?" he was asked in juvenile court.

"You bet," he answered, with a merry twinkle in his eye.—Indianapolis News.

Must Serve in Army

Lord Reading, Mr. Justice Darling, and Mr. Justice Atkin, sitting as a Divisional Court, held that a young Irishman who came to England in October, 1915, to find work temporarily was ordinarily resident in England at the time the Military Service Act was passed and therefore must serve in the army.

Reason For Exemption

"Expansion of the lungs," was the ground on which a man asked for exemption.

"What is that?" asked the doctor.

Applicant: "I can't say. I ain't no doctor."

Captain: "Get into khaki and expand the chest to fit the lungs."

Applicant: "Right O!"

ABOUT EMBROIDERIES.

History of What We Now Crave For Adornment.

Embroidery is one of the oldest of arts. The most primitive people have made use of the needle in this way and do today. Among the relics of the Swiss lake dwellers have been found the crudest of needles, proving the antiquity of this form of handiwork. In the museum of Cairo, Egypt, there are several fragments of linen woven in blues, greens, reds and black and ornamented with needlework. The lotus flower designs of Egypt are charming, and one piece bears the name of the owner, of the fifteenth century B. C. In the British museum in London and the Louvre in Paris are to be found interesting pieces of old Assyrian and Persian embroideries dating back to 485 B. C.

Spanish embroideries reflect the influence of the Arabs' oriental patterns and many of the old German embroideries follow the Byzantine traditions.

Indian, Chinese, Turkish and Persian embroideries date back to early times. Many of these are beautiful in texture and design. Some Indian and Turkish embroideries are enriched with pieces of glass, tinsel and beetle wings. Chinese and Japanese embroideries are usually done in silk on a background of silk. Japanese designs are more pictorial in character, while the Chinese include dragons, birds and flowers. The surface effect of some of the Chinese embroideries is often wonderfully smooth and regular. In the Persian embroideries of carpets, robes and hangings a preference is shown for floral designs. In the Victoria and Albert museum is a beautiful linen prayer rug, quilted and embroidered in chain stitch of silks in yellow, green, white and red. The design is a floral one.

With the complexity of modern civilization, the interest in the making of beautiful embroideries in England and America has somewhat subsided. The royal school of needlework in England is now reviving the interest, and there is much improvement over the seventeenth and eighteenth century examples. The influence of the art of William Morris and Burne-Jones was felt in the embroidery of the nineteenth century and helped to improve the designs.

HIS HEART BADLY AFFECTED

"Fruit-a-tives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

632 Gerrard St. East, Toronto.

"For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart and I had pains all over my body, so that I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of Medicine but none of them did me any good. At last, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone suffering from Indigestion".

Japanese Superstitions.

The Japanese have many curious superstitions about animals, the chief among which is their belief in the supernatural power of foxes. There are numberless shrines, indeed, dedicated to foxes in Japan.

The badger is another animal feared by the superstitious Japanese mind. It is believed to have power to annoy people and to be able to turn into a priest at will.

The crying of weasels and the baying of dogs are considered evil omens, and such insignificant happenings send a shudder over the believers.

In Japan, a light-colored mouse in the house is a sign of happiness. If a spider falls from the ceiling in the morning it brings pleasure, but if at night it is thought to be very unlucky. To see a centipede at night means happiness in Japan.

Sport on the Ice.

For many years Switzerland has been the resort of fashionable folk in the winter season. Since the war, however, there has not been so much gayety. The two young people shown skating are English. The boy is Viscount Knebworth, and the girl is Lady Hermione Lytton, quite grand names for small folks. They are skating at Murren, Switzerland.

SKATING IN SWITZERLAND.

Poverty's Inconvenience.

"I notice he laughs at his own jokes."

"Just a matter of economy."

"How is that?"

"He can't afford to hire a man to laugh at them."

Aggravating.

"What's all this flurry about?"

"I have lost my umbrella."

"Was it a fine one?"

"It was, and I only stole it this afternoon too."

So Innocent.

A man may smile and smile and smile
And be a villain, more or less.
A woman couldn't do it, though.
She isn't such a villainess.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE man who lies awake nights figuring out a unique way to spend the fortune he is going to make spends his days hustling to pay the coal man.

When a girl becomes so adept that she can manage her own brother the rest of the male population may as well throw up their hands.

Telltale Details.

A woman who prides herself on the arrangement of her rooms will always appreciate the importance of such details as cushions, lamp shades, and so on, at their full decorative value. Well does she know how the effect of the whole room may be practically made by a happy touch in such apparent trifles and how, equally, it may be marred by an error of judgment as regards their choice. The Parisienne understands such matters to perfection, and, as a rule, her home is an artistic delight. She is a master hand at adding just the right touch of color here, the right cushion there, little things which give distinction to a room which might otherwise be ordinary.

From Paris comes the newest thing in pillows. It is oblong in shape and is developed in all sorts of materials and color combinations. One seen recently was of blue silk banded with broad black satin ribbon. It had none of the heaviness and solidarity of the regulation cushion cover made with a front and a back seam, together with a cord, its cover consisting of one piece of silk only, folded over the pillow and invisibly joined at one side.

To Prevent Bottle Tragedies.

Tie a little brass bell around the neck of every bottle containing poison. These small bells may be had at any place handling Christmas or masquerade goods. Do not omit the poison label, including skull and crossbones. Don't let the tinkling object get within range of the children.

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotment the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, March 12th, 1917.

J. Skene, of Havelock, who was on the committee appointed by the Presbytery to deal with this matter, recommended that no change be made, but that, if economy is regarded as essential, it be exercised with regard to some of the other plans of the church. The Presbytery decided in favor of letting the basis of representation remain as it is.

Compliments to Mr. Mitchell.

A resolution highly complimentary to Rev. T. H. Mitchell, who goes to Toronto as pastor of Old St. Andrew's Church, was adopted after Revs. J. Skene, R. Pogue and others had spoken to it. Mr. Mitchell made a feeling and graceful reply.

Reporting Presbytery Meetings.

At a former meeting of the Presbytery the clerk, Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, was appointed to send a report of all meetings to The Presbyterian, of Toronto. These reports were not published by the newspapers, but those sent in by another member were accepted. This caused some dissatisfaction. Mr. Thomson is an anti-unionist; the other reporter takes the opposite side. This morning the clerk was instructed to continue to furnish the reports and all other members were asked to keep out of the proceedings. If the Presbyterian refuses to print the official summary it will be forced to go without any report whatever.

Expenses of Delegates.

It is probable that the Presbytery will decide to hold all regular meetings in Peterborough as this city is more easily accessible than any other place in the conference of the presbyterial territory. In future the travelling expenses of delegates will be paid, whether they come by rail or road vehicle, and they will be entertained as usual. This is expected to almost double the attendance. Congregations are now taxed ten cents per capita for presbytery expenses, and the new regulations will not mean more than three cents of additional outlay. A meeting at Peterborough, provided every delegate attended, would cost $19 less than if held at Port Hope.

The delegates were entertained at lunch in the Oriental Hotel.

Moderator G. I. Graw of Springville, who presided at the opening, was obliged to leave to attend a funeral, and the chair was taken by Rev. A. H. McConnachie of Centreville.

SIX LEFT IN THE RUNNING

WILL PRODUCE QUALIFICATIONS FOR SANITARY INSPECTORSHIP.

TWO RETURNED MEN.

The appointment of a sanitary inspector was reconsidered by the property committee last night and six of the original applicants will appear before Alderman Saunders' committee on Thursday and be questioned as to ther qualifications.

The first thing that the committee did was to decide that only the eighteen applications received at the previous meeting would be considered. Then by a system of elimination six out of the eighteen applicants were left to be examined by the board and they will be asked to appear with their qualifications on Thursday.

The six who will be given an opportunity to appear are R. J. Mahood, Geo. W. Powell, Geo. Metcalf, Wm. Henry, C. S. Stapleton, Henry Smith. Two of these, Mahood and Smith, are returned soldiers.

SMALL FISH FOUND ARE ON GARDEN HILL FARM.

PORT HOPE, March 13—Several small fish have been found scattered over an area of ground on the farm of Wm. Robb, about a mile north of Garden Hill, and they are supposed to have come down from the clouds during the rainstorm. Local experts have identified the fish as a salt water variety, and the opinion of some higher authority on the subject will be obtained. It is said that the ground where the fish were obtained is too high to permit of their having been washed on it.

ELLIOT'S

HE KILLED HIS OWN CHILDREN

STATEMENT OF MRS. ST. PIERRE AGAINST HER HUSBAND.

CORNWALL, March 13.—A description of how her husband, William St. Pierre, whose body was found buried in the cellar of his home near Aultsville, Ont., last Friday, had killed twenty of her twenty-seven children was given to the police by Mrs. St. Pierre. As the murder of St. Pierre, to which Nettie Richmire has confessed, is probed into, the details grew more revolting.

It is stated by his widow that William St. Pierre subjected his little girls to periodical attacks and that he murdered most of the male children born to him. The police will dig up the land around the St. Pierre home and try to verify Mrs. St. Pierre's story.

Detective Miller, of the Ontario provincial police force, is making a searching inquiry into the girl's confession and also young St. Pierre's actions prevoius to and after the death of his father.

Original "Humpty Dumpty" is Dead

Kingston, N.Y., March 13.—Famous for forty years as the original "Humpty Dumpty" clown, Tony Denier died here from a fall on an icy sidewalk. He was 78 years old and had ben an inmate of the almshouse since June. He retired as a clown eight years ago. Two years later he married the widow of Daniel Sulfy, an actor. He recently won a $3,000 judgment from her in a suit to recover $17,000 he claimed as lifetime savings loaned to her.

TAKE WAR LOAN

BRANDON, Man., March 13.—The Brandon City Council decided to make application for the purchase of $300,000 of the Canadian twenty-year five per cent. war loan at a meeting last evening. The Brandon School Board will make application for $12,000 of the loan.

SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY WILL BE PERMANENT

BRITISH GOV'T AGENTS IN CANADA TO PLACE CONTRACTS.

OPEN NEW YARD.

OTTAWA, March 13. The reported establishment of an extensive shipbuilding industry in Canada for the British Government is officially confirmed at the Imperial Munitions Board, through which negotiations are being conducted on the subject. Already contracts are being placed which will be fully equal to the capacity of the Canadian shipyards during 1917. The approximate total of the contracts is one million dollars. Negotiations are being conducted on such an extensive scale as to insure what probably will be a permanent revival on much broader lines of the shipbuilding industry, with the difference that, whereas, in former days, only sailing vessels were constructed, the present plans contemplate steel ships of substantial carrying capacity.

Will Open New Yards.

"As a result of the present demand for ships and also the heavy tonnage requirements after the war, it is quite probable that some large yards will soon be started at points in Canada," stated C. B. Gordon, vice-chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board.

The shipping controller of the British Government has sent out a representative, James J. Esplen, who is placing wherever possible contracts for new ships and buying those already constructed which are in the market. He is operating through the Munitions Board. It is understood that a number of vessels being constructed in Canada for Norwegian interests are to be taken over, and the contracts for the current year are going to yards at Montreal, Toronto, Collingwood, Port Arthur and the Pacific Coast.

Plenty of Orders.

Recently a number of shipbuilding and drydock companies have secured Federal charters of incorporation, and they plan to avail themselves of the new business which is in prospect by establishing yards on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. The ships now being arranged for average about 6,000 tons, and cost upwards of $750,000 each. The orders and the necessary capital are now available, the only limiting factor being the difficulty of securing steel plates, nearly all of which come from the United States.

USED CARS.

If you intend buying a used car, now is the opportune time. Prices $250 to $350, all thoroughly overhauled. Don't miss getting one of those while they last. Duffus Garage, 195 Simcoe street, Peterborough. Garages, Peterborough, Norwood and Millbrook.

WILL BUY HORSES

The Horse Shippers' Association of Ontario announce that the first of their monthly fairs will be held on the Market Square, Peterborough, on Wednesday, March 28, when purchases of heavy, chunky, general-purpose horses, aged mares and geldings will be made. Owners of horses will find in these fairs a ready market for horses of all breeds at right prices.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

Col. Miller remarked that when on one occasion a deputation waited on the Munitions Board, Mr. Flavelle's statement was that the manufacturers were behind in their output, and that greater quantities of munitions must be turned out. The manufacturers would have to get the men.

Farmers' Sons Seek Work

Mr. Aylmer felt that the question of assigning men to factories had not been handled in the most satisfactory manner. He went on to say that at Trenton 300 applications had been secured for work in the explosives plant, and of this number 100 were the sons of farmers. Also, he said, there were hundreds of young men in the theatres, poolrooms and at dances, and idlers on the streets. They were the men who should be taken.

In speaking along the lines of the memorial, Mr. Matthews said the young men who are selling boots, shoes and laces should be called out first.

Two Recruits in Two Months

Mr. Wearing told of how on a recent trip in Eastern Ontario he met a recruiting officer who last year had recruited 200 men and in two months of this year had secured only two men.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman covered the situation generally and stated some of the obstacles to recruiting in this district and Peterborough in particular.

"What's the use of spending more money when money won't get men" said Mr. Vincent Eastwood, who spoke very strongly in favor of the memorial. Mr. Eastwood felt that the action called for had been long delayed by the government.

As it was felt by the meeting that the City Council might reconsider their request for a grant to the battalion, a committee made up of Messrs. T. F. Matthews, B. F. Ackerman, W. H. Dunsford, G. L. Logie, Dr. Greer, President Aylmer and Secretary Waring was appointed to wait on the Council with another request for financial assistance for the battalion.

POTATOES AND BUTTER TAKEN

HIGH PRICE OF COMMODITIES LEADS TO THEFTS.

MONTREAL, March 13.— Montreal is experiencing an epidemic of potato, butter and egg thefts, caused by the high price of these commodities. Last week one hundred bags of potatoes were stolen from a wholesale warehouse on the Bonsecours Market. This morning a gang pillaged a St. Denis St. store of twelve bags of potatoes and a thousand pounds of butter and several cases of eggs. The thieves peddle their hauls from house to house.

WOOL EXCHANGE FOR TORONTO

OTTAWA, March 13. Toronto is to have a Government wool exchange. The Minister of Agriculture is arranging for the rental of suitable premises in Toronto for the storage of the wool of the various wool growers' Associations, whose clip will be graded by Agriculture Department experts in the field and sent to Toronto. The new plan results from a recent conference. It is designed to furnish the eastern market here expeditiously with the supply required for manufacturing.

$100 FOR ONE HOG

PORT HOPE, March 13—Monford Wilson, the well-known drover and reeve of Hope Township bought from Henry Taylor, a farmer living at Quay's Crossing, a hog weighing 800 pounds, for which he paid $100. It is a sow of the Yorkshire breed and is the largest seen by Mr. Wilson in thirty years' experience.

ASSETS OVER LIABILITIES ARE $1193.95

The third meeting of the council of the Township of Smith was held in the County Council chamber, Peterborough, on Tuesday, March 6th. All members were present, with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. James A. Young, auditor, reported, and showed that the township's assets exceeded its liabilities by $1193.95. The report was received, and the treasurer was instructed to have two hundred copies printed for distribution.

The treasurer was ordered to pay the following accounts:

Municipal World, bylaw book, $4.95.

Dr. J. A. Morgan, services as M. O. H., $2.00.

A. McIlmoyl, work on road, $7.00.

J. A. Young, services as auditor, $10.00.

R. J. Edmison, services as auditor, $10.00.

John Tighe, two sheep killed, $25.

Council, after considerable discussion, decided to have only two sheep valuators and two fence viewers appointed, instead of one from each school section as in former years. For this purpose the township is divided, having the road running between the 7th and 8th concessions as the dividing line. Walter Young was appointed for the northern division, and Mr. J. N. Telford for the southern portion.

The following road masters were appointed: Thos. Armstrong, Silas Blewett, Roy Northey, Rich Fairbairn, John Armstrong, Gordon Fitzgerald, Jas. Cassidy, Wilbert McNaughton, Robt. Freeborn, Norman Bullock, Jas. R. Northey, Wm. Douglas, T. Z. Webster, R. H. Knox, Harry Pearson, Albert McIlmoyl, Bruce Garbutt, James Millar, W. A. LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION PREPARES FOR THE SEASON.

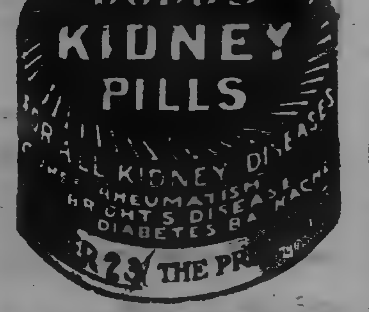
The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association was held Monday evening in Hooper's Palm Parlors, when the election of officers took place and plans were discussed whereby the association could lease the bowling-green courts for the coming season. To do this it will be necessary to secure a large membership if the fees are to be kept moderate. It is hoped that all tennis players, both ladies and gentlemen, will become members. The courts will be placed in excellent shape and tournaments arranged both local and with outside clubs. The following are the officers:

Hon. Pres.—F. D. Kerr.
President—G. R. Langley.
Vice Pres.—J. E. Smith, C. B. Adair, F. C. Paul.
Secreary—E. Walton.
Treasurer—C. S. Thompson.
Tournament committee—F. C. Weber and two others.
Green committee—J. E. Smith, G. H. Roper, F. C. Weber.
Com. to arrange for courts, etc.—J. E. Smith, E. Walton.
Chairman of Rules Committee and of Ladies' Section—R. Langford.



'THEATRICAL

"In Walkel Jimmy" delighted a large audience at the Grand last night, the presentation being voted the most pleasing farce that has been seen at the theatre in a long time. Mr. George Summers in the title role was immense and surrounding him was a clever company who, with Mr. Summers, interpreted the comedy to the delight of all. Jimmy walked in and essayed to conduct the business of the Cinderella Factory, and he made good.

The stage dressings were of a high order.

Records for [illegible]

Greenland ranch in Death Valley in California holds the palm for registered heat, according to an official announcement. On July 10, 1913, the thermometer at this ranch capped the climax in possibilities by climbing to 134 deg. Fahrenheit. No figure approaching it has ever been known, according to Meteorologist Carpenter of the United States Weather Bureau. The next highest registration was that of Ouargla, Algeria, which is situated on the edge of the Sahara Desert. This station registeerd 127 deg. August 27, 1884. During this same hot spell the thermometer at the Greenland ranch in Death Valley was unofficially reported to have registered the following points: August 8, 128; August 9, 129; August 10, 134; August 11, 129; August 12, 130; August 13, 131, and August 14, 129, which records, if official, would have surpassed anything ever recorded on the known globe. The highest previous record in California was at Mammoth Tank, August 17, 1885, when the temperature climbed to 127 in the shade. The 134 record was also a shade record. It was taken from a thermometer installed on a standard screen, placed above an alfalfa sod, four feet above the ground. This shelter was not exposed to the reflected heat of the desert. This point is 178 feet below sea level. Any attempt to give the actual heat of the open desert places of Death Valley has so far as known not been made. There was a record, entirely unofficial, made at a point about sixteen miles north of the Greenland ranch in August of 1907, and this thermometer showed 136 as near as could be determined.

TIE VOTE ON FREE MARKET BUT COUNCIL MAY DECIDE ON TRIAL

Merchants Give Their Opinions on the Question.

Farmers' Wives do Not Like the Policeman.

Will Peterborough have a free market? This was a subject of a conference between a number of the merchants of the city and the property committee last night and after the merchants had retired a vote was taken to make the market free and it was lost on a tie vote. Tenders for the market privileges will be received up to Thursday, March 22.

For some time the agitation to make Peterborough's market a free one has been gathering weight and the benefit that would accrue to the city was pointed out. When the subject of selling the market tolls was brought up at the last meeting of the council it was suggested that some of the business men of the city be asked to come to the meeting with suggestions, and the following responded to the invitation: Messrs. T. Barrie, Caldwell, of Turnbull & Co., R. Ross, of Rich Hall & Son; R. G. Kingan, T. C. Elliot and B. D. Hall, president of the Board of Trade. The committee were Ald. Saunders (chairman), Duncan, Langford, Dobbin, Smith and Taylor.

Abolish the Tolls

Thomas Barrie was certain that the abolition of tolls on the market would bring farmers in from a greater radius round Peterborough. He had interviewed about twenty merchants on the subject and only two of them did not favor the free market. The hours limiting the time on which buyers could go on the market and fill their orders should be abolished. It would tend to give the farmers' wives more time to visit the stores and make their purchases in time to get their teams back home. As it is now the housewife doesn't get down till nearly ten o'clock and it is nearly noon before the market is cleaned up of the produce and the farmers have no time to catch their trains and do shopping. He felt sure that once a free market was tried it would be found to reduce the high cost of living and the toll system would never be returned to.

Mr. Caldwell was confident that a free market would work great advantages to Peterborough. It was a new subject to him, but he agreed with Mr. Barrie that the farmers should be given a chance to get rid of their produce early by removing the restricted hours for the large buyers. He referred to last Saturday, when it was after twelve o'clock before the farmers' wives got away from the market. He thought an earlier market should be encouraged. The merchants would advertise a free market at Peterborough on their monthly circulars.

Loss to City

Ald. Dobbin pointed out that from a financial standpoint it means a loss of about $1500 or $1600 to the city. At present the tolls brought in a revenue of $6[illegible] and with a free market the city would have to pay a market clerk and pay for the heating and cleaning of the market hall.

Mr. Barrie did not mean that the city should abolish the weighing fees. That would bring in some revenue.

Ald. Saunders did not think that the revenue from the scales would pay for a man.

Ald. Duncan queried as to the possibility of stopping the large outside buyers from forestalling on the market.

Mr. Barrie agreed that this was a difficulty but now with restricted hours word was passed to the women for the sale of their goods in bulk if held till the restricted hour was passed. The regulation was a farce.

Robert Ross was quite in accord with Mr. Barrie's idea.

Would Not Limit Buyers

R. G. Kingan would let the buyers go on at any time. Do not limit them.

Ald. Smith wanted to know how it would effect the people generally. Will 15c fees keep a farmer away from the market?

B. D. Hall said it did. He knew lots of farmers from Ennismore that would not go to the market on account of the fees.

Object to Police

T. C. Elliot thought the best way to find out about the free market was to go to the farmers. He had interviewed many of them and knew what they wanted. One objection was the presence of a uniformed officer questioning them about weights, etc. It made the ladies nervous and he cited one instance where a woman had been fined and her neighbors had refused to go near the market since. The arbitrator between the buyer and seller should not be in uniform. He could allow the wholesale people to buy earlier. The trains were so timed that very little money was spent with the merchants. The market rules were too strictly enforced. Let the matter of weight be between the parties interested. Canada was cursed with too many legislators who framed laws on a narrow-minded idea and not broad enough. He would have the sidewalk on the outside market covered so that the vehicles would be out of the weather. It would be much better if the city was run by a commission who would pay a man a good salary to run the city's business the same as a general manager of a company.

Ald. Langford did not think the time was opportune to make a change. The rate of taxation had been agreed on and a free market would increase the rate. When hydro radials were introduced it would make matters better.

New Market Site

Ald. Dobbin, talking of the idea of covered protection for vehicles, was of the opinion that the market should be moved to a better locality.

Ald. Duncan suggested the land east of Louis St. and from King to Charlotte St. as a good market property. Sell the present site to good advantage. It was the general opinion that this location was a good one.

Ald. Taylor would like to see the market earlier but was sure that the tolls were not keeping them away. Let the weighing of articles be between buyer and seller. The rules were too stringent in this respect.

Mr. Barrie had heard many complaints about the weight and the name on the basket regulation. Build the market up by assuring the farmer he can get rid of his produce as soon as he gets to market. The presence of a policeman in uniform was bad for the market.

Ald. Saunders thought the name on the basket was a good thing. It was a means of identification to the housewife when she was satisfied with a certain lady's butter or other goods. He would not let the buyers on the market earlier. The housewife could not get down much earlier than 9.30 or 10 o'clock.

Ald. McIntyre was asked his opinion and was for an earlier and free market.

Ald. Stratton would give the free market a try-out and see how it works. He thought a man could be got to run it for the weigh fees, but even if it cost something a good market was worth 1-8 mill expenditure.

Ald. Weir thought that a free market would help the city. Turn the arcade into a store and the revenue derived would cause the break to be an even one.

The Vote

Ald. Dobbin moved that the market be made free for 1917-18 insofar as the tolls for selling are concerned.

Ald. Smith seconded the motion.

A vote being taken, the result was a tie and was lost and it was decided to advertise for tenders for the tolls by an advertisement three times in each of the daily papers.

Market Clerk Maloney's term expires on the last day of this month.

The vote was: For a free market—Ald. Dobbin, Smith, Duncan. Against—Ald. Taylor, Langford, Saunders.

PLOTS FOR GARDENING

Most of the public work in this city, outside of the routine of the city council, is done by about twenty men. They are the pack horses of the municipality. When some public movement is struck out the general comment is, when asked for help, "Better get Murgatroyd. He's a horse at that sort of thing." Other men go home in the evening, eat supper, slip on the slippers and sit down by the hole in the wall, misnamed a heating system, or by the fireplace and thank their stars they are not as other men.

So here is a chance for a number of new men, men new in municipal enterprise, to come out of the woods and do something. No more laudable and helpful movement could be crystalized than for a group of men to catch hold and lift in this Greater Production Movement. Who will volunteer? A few men to make this a distinct personal hobby. Every man is the better for a hobby, so long as he does not neglect the important things of life in its prosecution.

While an appeal has been made to citizens to advise the City Clerk's office of plots of land available for use by those who wish to raise food products, it will not be well to rely on that wholly. There will be the putting off. The some-other-day idea. What is wanted is information right now. It will help wonderfully. But what would be far better will be for about a dozen men to come forward and, grouped together, set about getting by personal search and contact, the information. What is everybody's business is nobody's business.

The public registration needs to be supplemented by real research. To have a man walk into the Clerk's office and hand out a list of lots he has located, having gained the consent of the owner that they be used, will entitle that man to the Order of Useful Service Medal. Each in his neighborhood can easily, and at the expenditure of a few evenings, find out what is available. And if the information be accurate and reliable, not mere hearsay, the basis for a start will have been made.

If the movement is to amount to anything this should be done. Just who will do it it is hard to say. If a sense of real helpfulness will inspire a few to get at the job, very much the better. In helping others one helps himself. And besides, he is laying the first plank in the platform on which he may stand and aspire to be even that eminent and much-abused individual, an alderman.

THE RETURNED SOLDIERS

Presently, if not now, we have to reach some definite status as to the claims of the returned man for consideration. Not the returned soldier, but the man who was taken into the ranks, held for a spell in the city, sent to England and returned, either as medically unfit or for other reasons. The man who has seen service we can place. He is going to adapt himself to a change and does so willingly and helpfully. There is a state of mind there that is and will be helpful for himself.

But the other class is a perplexity. Taken into the ranks, held for a spell in the city, forwarded to Kingston and thence to England; used in camp, and returned as medically unfit, or for reason: never should have been accepted. Merely a stop-gap to close up the battalion. For the infirmity, no matter how willing he was to go and serve, has in cases been accentuated by the period of service. He is now back, and in many cases with an exaggerated idea of what he has done. This feeling is not improving him for civil life; hence he is resentful.

Men are asked to go to work and places are found for them. While stating they will go, they never do so. Employers ask for men to be sent. Are ready to take on and train. Men seem to be fed up on the idea that "making munitions" is something of a more or less perfunctory nature, but at whopping good pay. The work is hard, onerous, and exhausting, especially in the larger sizes. His illusion dissipated, the man quits work. He wants something easier. What is to be done?

An employer writes this morning and says:

"We can use bright young men whom we can teach the simpler operations in our wood, tin and machine shop. We have hired five. They seemed eager to work. Have agreed to come in at a certain time, and except in the case of one who advised us that he had secured a job elsewhere, that is the last we have heard of them. The men whom we have seen have been discharged as medically unfit, and have not been in France.

"If you have any bright young chaps we shall be glad to see them, but the men we have seen so far apparently amount to but little, and seemingly are not anxious to work."

Now, what is to be done? It is the same tale from other employers. It is apparently folly to claim that we can man our industrial shops with those who neglect and absolutely refuse to take up work. Anyone who thinks that the men returning from across the ocean are tucking themselves back into civil life is badly mistaken. A minute record is kept of each man and each place he is sent to. Some have been sent to as many as nineteen places, and are not as yet at work.

How much consideration is to be continued to be given? Who will determine when placing shall cease? The problem is one that has to be faced. The conclusion is inevitable that the brief period of drill, transition across the ocean, duty in England, and the trip home has wrought havoc with the habit and mode of life of men, nominally industrious, but who now plan to find a means of living less laborious, to their way of thinking, than the one they pursued before enlistment.

PARENTS ASK FOR RETURN OF THEIR CHILD

LAD HAS BEEN A WARD OF CHILDREN'S AID FOR SIX YEARS.

SOCIETY THANKS COUNCIL.

WILL GIVE ASSISTANCE ON TAG DAY FOR ST. VINCENT'S ORPHANAGE.

Rev. Father Phelan presided at the regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society yesterday afternoon. The president, Mr. E. A. Peck, was unavoidably absent. There were present Mesdames Gibbs, Howard, Stocker and Sanderson, Messrs. Parsons, Thompson, Howard, Gordon and McElhiney.

An application by the parents of a ward of the society for its return was referred to the legal committee. The boy, now 12 years of age, has been in charge of the society for six years and for three years has been living with foster parents in a good home, and they are reluctant to give him up.

Grant Appreciated

The following resolution was passed on a motion of Chief Howard and Mrs. Gibbs: "That the secretary be requested to write his Worship Mayor Duffus and the aldermen of the city council an expression of appreciation from the Children's Aid Society for the splendid grant made by the city council to assist in carrying on the work of this society."

Will Help

It was decided on a motion of Chief Thompson and Mrs. Hopwood that the executive board and all members of the Children's Aid Society render any and every assistance possible to St. Vincent's Orphanage on Saturday, March 17, the annual tag day of that society.

Tag Days

Another resolution that passed unanimously was that the legal committee of the board take up with the proper authorities the matter of permits for tag days.

Permission First

The ladies in charge of tag day had the following resolution passed: "That the boxes used for tag day collection, which are the property of this society be not lent to any person or persons without being permitted by resolution of this board.

Accounts to be Paid

Chief Howard presented the following report, which was adopted:—

Your purchasing committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts when certified to, subject to the approval of your acounts committee.

ASK ASSEMBLY TO STRIVE FOR PEACE WITH ANTIS

Peterborough Presbytery Adopts Resolution With View to Prevent Schism in Church --Commissioners Chosen.

Rev. Dr. McKenzie, of Colborne, Rev. J. A. MacKenzie of Knox Church, Rev. R. J. Ross of Baltimore and Rev. E. J. Wolland of Norwood will be the clerical commissioners from the Presbytery of Peterborough to the General Assembly that meets in Montreal next June. The elders from Peterborough will be Messrs. R. Lees and H. B. Cowan and one will be chosen from Millbrook and another from Norwood.

At the session of the Presbytery yesterday afternoon, Rev. R. J. Ross introduced a resolution asking the General Assembly to adopt any means deemd advisable to prevent a rupture in the church over the question of church union. This was adopted after a short discussion. Mr. Ross is a unionist but one who fears that the antis have it in their power to make trouble.

Rev. W. S. Mabon withdrew his resignation as pastor of the church at Pontypool and consented to remain at his post.

The Presbytery will hold a special session at Warkworth April 12 to ordain Rev Russell MacGillivary and induct him into the pastorate of the church there.

Mr. R. Campbell appeared on behalf of the church at Roseneath which is affiliated with the one at Bethesda, both of which are now without a pastor and have been for over a year. The Roseneath people ask leave to cast in their lot with the Methodists and this question was left to the Moderator of Session and the Home Mission Committee.

It was decided to have the minutes of all the meetings of the Presbytery printed by a Kingston firm. which agrees to do the work at a yearly saving of $13.

Rev. J. Neill of Toronto was endorsed as Moderator of the General Assembly.

The next regular meeting of the Presbytery will be held in Knox Church on the first Tuesday in July.

Mr. Robinson's New Work

Rev. T. J. Robinson, who has resigned his charge at Lakefield to take effect May 1, goes to Vancouver, where he will became provincial manager for the London Life Insurance Company. His brother, Mr. W. H. Robinson, is inspector for the company in Ontario and the Lakefield pastor is an expert at the same business. He will contine his pulpit work every Sunday while in the West.

GERMANS AGAIN LOSE IN CHAMPAGNE FIGHTING

French Win Trench Elements and Romainville Farm and Take Prisoners at Enemy Trenches They Enter.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 14.—Two violent counter-attacks were made by the Germans yesterday evening on positions captured by the French in the Champagne on Monday. The official announcement given out today says the attacks were repulsed and the Germans lost heavily.

In grenade fighting around Maisons de Champagne and Hill 185, the French captured new trench elements.

South of St. Mihiel the French obtained possession of Romainville Farm with thirty prisoners. They also entered German trenches between the Meuse and Apremont, bringing back a number of prisoners.

German surprise attacks near Lassigny and north of Soissons were defeated.

PATIENTS AND NURSES KILLED BY THE ENEMY

HOSTILE AVIATORS BOMBARD HOSPITAL MARKED WITH RED CROSS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

SALONIKI, March 14. — Enemy aviators again bombarded our hospital at Vertekop, says a Serbian official statement today, causing heavy loss of life among patients and staff. Two English nurses were among the killed. Hospitals are completely separated from any other buildings and are distinctively marked with the Red Cross.

PLAN TO GET LABORERS FOR WEST. CANADA

FORTY AGENTS WILL BE SENT INTO WESTERN STATES.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, March 14.—R. B. Bennett, director of national service, gave details today of the plan for recruiting 12,500 farm laborers in the Western States for work in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The Dominion and Western Provinces' Governments will jointly provide up to $200,000 for the purpose, and over forty agents will be sent into the States to drum up laborers.

Omemee Lady's 93rd Birthday

OMEMEE, March 13— A happy family gathering was held at the home of the Misses Curry on Tuesday, the occasion being the 85th birthday on their mother. Mrs. Curry is still very bright and remembers events of her childhood quite clearly and can recite lengthy poems with all the enthusiasm of a young girl. During the day Mrs. Curry received many callers and was showered with congratulations and floral tributes from her numerous friends.

Among those from a distance were Mr. F. C. Curry of Brockville, Mrs. Kimpton from Toronto and Miss Hilda Clarke of the Ross Hospital, Lindsay.

SUDDEN CALL TO MANAGER OF THE RINK AT KEENE

STRICKEN WHEN SITTING IN VICTORIA HOUSE IN THE VILLAGE.

KEENE. March 14.— The death occurred very suddenly on Tuesday morning of Mr. R. J. Brown, manager of the Keene Rink. While not in the best of health for some time, he was about the village as usual and had gone to the Victoria House, where he sat down for a few moments when the Silent Messenger called him.

The late Mr. Brown was a member of L.O.L. 494 and a Forester. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, one daughter, Hazel, at home, and two sons, William of Peterborough and Frank at home. The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

Close 30,000 Saloons in Great Britain

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON. March 14. — The Daily Mail says thirty thou-sand saloons in Great Britain probably will be closed during the next few months. Brewers themselves are said to favor such action by the government as tending to an economical distribution of their custom.

CANADIANS REPULSE THE BAVARIANS

ATTEMPTED TWO RAIDS, BUT WERE DRIVEN OFF, LEAVING DEAD.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 14— Stewart Lyon's cable to the Canadian Press from Canadian headquarters in France this morning says: "In the midst of last night and early this morning, the Bavarians, opposite the Canadians, who are good fighting men, attempted two raids, but were at once driven off. They carried back their wounded but left two dead in the Canadian lines.

Dull, misty weather, with occasional rain, persists on the Canadian front, interrupting even aeroplane activity.

It is universally testified that the anti-aircraft guns are far more dangerous than formerly and this is because instead of firing directly at a machine, the guns now aim at creating a barrage of fire though which the flier must pass to cross the lines.

Heavy guns have ben more active recently and British and Canadians have had the best of it.

WITHOUT WARNING HUNS SINK AN AMERICAN SHIP

Steamship Algonquin Sunk by Shell Fire and Submarine Refused Assistance--- All on Board Saved.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 14.—The American steamship Algonquin has been torpedoed by a German submarine. The crew was saved. The Algonquin was sunk without warning, according to a report made by the American consul at Plymouth, who states that all on board were saved.

The vessel was sunk at 6 o'clock Monday morning. The submarine refused assistance.

According to a later report from the American consul at Plymouth, the captain of the Algonquin stated that his ship was sunk by shell fire without warning.

WITHDRAW ON GREAT SCALE IS FORSHADOWED

With Hendenburg on Western Front Movement Will be Stragetic One German People Are Told.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 14.—Major Moraht, writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, foreshadows a German withdrawal on a great scale on the Western front. Moraht reminds his readers that Hindenburg is now operating on the Western front, and suggests that his strategy may be the same as at Tannenberg, where he caused part of his forces to retire fighting before the Russians in order to gain ample space for strategical movements.

METAL PRODUCTS CO'S MEN READY TO RESUME WORK

Company Come to Terms But Insist That Locked Out Men Apply Individually For Former Jobs.

The machinists and toolmakers who were locked out of the Metal Products Company's plant Monday morning are still idle. A representative of the men had a conference with the company last night and was informed that the majority of the men now out would be taken back provided they applied individually for their old positions. There are, however, a number of men now out who will be refused further employment in the plant, the company informed the union representative.

Some mechanics have been brought from other cities to fill the vacant places. The men say that these strangers refuse to go to work when they learn the conditions that exist here. One machinist who arrived from Brockville last night was taken care of by the union and was given a position in another plant.

The men take issue with some of the claims made in an ex-parte statement which the company published in a local paper last night. Members of the union deny that they quit work Saturday afternoon without giving the company due notice. Only five or six of the most skilled among them were earning as high as 60 cents an hour. The pay of the others ranged from 35 cents an hour upwards.

There are other companies, the men say, where the rate of wages is higher and the allowances for overtime more liberal. The overtime work, the men also claim, is regular in Toronto.

The company in its published statement, speaks of a "paid alien organizer," doubtless referring to H. W. Harper, the provincial organizer for the Machinists Union. In reply to this. Mr. Harper says that his ancestors have lived in Canada for three generations, that he, himself, was born in Peel County and has never been out of this country two days together in his life. The men counter again by bringing the charge of alien citizenship against one of the men who holds a prominent position with the company.

The company have come to the men's terms with regard to the number of hours straight time per week and on the question of payment for overtime. The only point still at issue is with regard to the night shift, the company insisting on 57 1-2 hours for this class of workers and the men holding out for the same number of hours as are put in by the day force. There is no quarrel on the question of an open shop. The men are ready to accept the terms and go back to work provided they are taken on as they were locked out, in a body, and that no discrimination whatever be shown.

The men still maintain that the firm made a new agreement with the shop committee and that a week ago they posted notices in the shop announcing that all former contracts were abrogated and that the old terms would prevail.

BIGAMY CASE HEARD IN THE POLICE COURT

PLAINTIFF SAYS HUSBAND DID NOT HAVE CASH FOR CERTIFICATE.

WIFE NO. 2 ABSENT.

PASTOR TESTIFIES TO SECOND MARRIAGE IN COBOURG CHURCH.

A bigamy case is something out of the ordinary for Peterborough, but a case was before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. James Drain of Havelock was charged by his first wife, whom he married in 1899, with having entered into a marriage with Bessie Deline in September, 1912. Through his counsel, Lieut. V. J. McElderry, the prisoner pleaded not guilty, and declined to elect.

Crown Attorney Hatton presented all the evidence that was possible and then asked for a week's adjournment.

Mrs. Helen May Drain testified that she had been living in Toronto and was married to James Drain on June 21, 1899, in Dummer. The Methodist minister married them at her mother's house. The prisoner in the box was identified a sher husband. She had not not a marriage certificate at the time as Drain did not have the money to pay for it. Later she got a copy of the registed certificate at the Department in Toronto. After the marriage they lived with Drain's mother until just previous to the birth of her first child, when the defendat's people told her she would have to go to her own mother's in Norwood. The baby was born there. Four children were born of the union. Birth and marriage certificates (copies) from the Department were produced. She had not lived with Drain for six years owing to her husband's fondness for other women. The support given her by Drain was not the best. Shortly after New Year's she heard of the prisoner being married to his first cousin, Bessie DeLine, at Havelock. Her daughter had told of seeing her father with another woman.

Not a Servant

To Mr. McElderry Mrs. Drain denied that the woman mentioned as coming to the Drain home was a servant. It was over this woman that she had left Drain in April, 1911. Only one of the children is living, and lives with witness's mother. Witness lives in Toronto and supports herself. Frequent temporary separations with her husband had occurred previously.

Pastor Testifies

Rev. Samuel Sellers, the associate pastor of the Methodist Church at Cobourg produced the marriage register, showing that James Drain, aged 38, was married to Bessie Deline, aged 25, on Sept. 18, 1912. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Garbutt, now a chaplain overseas.

Mrs. Adelia Cross, mother of the first wife, who lives in Norwood, identified the prisoner as the husband of her daughter. She did not remember the date of her marriage but the ceremony took place at her residence. The Methodist Minister at Norwood performed the ceremony.

Wife No. 2 Ill

The second wife, Mrs. Bessie Deline, was summoned but Mr. McElderry produced a certificate signed by Dr. Holdcroft of Havelock stating that the witness was ill and unable to be present.

The magistrate expressed himself very strongly about the absence of the witness by reason of the certificate. "You can get a doctor's certificate for anything," said his worship.

Crown Attorney Hatton asked for an adjournment of a week and will secure the present of an additional witness to the second ceremony.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1917.

SOME WAR-TIME THRIFT.

THE MEMBERS of the Presbytery of Peterborough have decided to have their official printing done by a firm in Kingston, close figuring having satisfied them that in this way they can effect a saving of $13 a year. In the meantime the privilege of publishing free reports and advertising matter at something less than cost will not be denied the home papers.

How can a body of usually fair-minded men assume to censor the advertising columns of the newspapers when they send their own work outside the city in order to effect a nominal saving? The interests of church and press are identical in the community, and there should be mutual assistance rendered, instead of aid in which all the sacrifice is made by one of the parties.

THE MINISTER OVERSEAS.

IT WAS A HANDSOME compliment that the deputation from St. Andrew's Church, Cobourg, paid Lieut.-Col. Beattie when they waited upon the Presbytery of Peterborough yesterday and asked the members to decline to accept his resignation as pastor. The presence of the delegates and the kind things which they said about Lieut.-Col. Beattie expressed eloquently the regard in which he is held by his people.

Lieut.-Col. Beattie is one of the most distinguished chaplains in the Canadian forces now overseas, and it is little wonder that his people and the residents of Cobourg generally are proud of him. He goes into the very presence of death with the soldiers, and has saved the life of many a man by his prompt aid in getting him to the hospital. Lieut.-Col. Beattie has, besides, written home some of the most interesting and instructive letters that have been received from Europe.

It was characteristic of the lieutenant-colonel to tender his resignation. It was the interests of his church at home rather than his own welfare that he had in mind when he asked to be relieved of his clerical duties. He had been given leave of absence for the duration of the war, but the conflict has already lasted longer than he thought for at the start, and the prospects for an early peace are by no means bright. Lieut.-Col. Beattie believed that the church would suffer without a regular pastor, and offered to quit.

The members of his congregation at home are unselfish in this matter as their gallant pastor himself. No matter how long the war lasts, they are anxious to see him remain at his post in Europe until the close, and to come back to them when the war is over.

Here is certainly a model relation, alike creditable to both, between pastor and people. Many a man has given up a lucrative position in private or public life to go to the war with the understanding that his place will be kept for him until his return. His employers are making sacrifices when they dispense with his services, but we have yet to hear of the first case of a soldier in Europe being asked to resign permanently under such circumstances or of having his resignation accepted even if he sent it in.

There are churches in Canada that have pastors at the front in capacities other than that of the chaplain. Some of these have reverted in rank in order to get into the front of the battle. In their congregations at home there are, unfortunately, some members, slackers themselves usually, who talk of the church suffering in the absence of the pastor, and believe that he should make way for another. The pity of it is that in all his labors before the war broke out, the ministrations of the absent preacher have failed to work a change for the better in the nature of such specimens of humanity. The pearls have been consumed to no purpose. Those who devoured them are ravenous and untamed as ever.

TEACHERS' PENSION BILL.

THE BILL now before the Legislature to provide pensions for teachers was up for discussion in the House yesterday, and the details were more fully explained by the minister who has the matter in hand. There is little, if any, opposition to the principle involved, and the chances are that the bill will be passed unanimously after a few slight amendments have been made.

The rate of yearly pension allowed any teacher who has taught for fifteen years or more will be based on the length of his active service as well as upon his earning capacity. The latter is to be arrived at by taking the average of his earnings for the ten years immediately preceding his retirement, and not the final year alone, as at first stated. If the latter course were adopted, a teacher on the eve of retiring might succeed in inducing a liberal school board to increase his salary in order to entitle him to a more generous pension. With the ten years' provision in force such manipulation will be impossible.

All teachers will be required to pay into the fund two and one-half per cent. of their salaries yearly. If they teach for six or more years they will receive the money back upon leaving the profession. If they die before they are eligible for a pension, their heirs can collect the amount of their contributions.

After fifteen years of service any teacher is entitled to a pension of not less than $365 or more than $1000 a year. If he becomes disabled by disease or accident, he will be pensioned, provided a physician appointed by the Departament testifies that he is unable to earn his living.

Skilled actuaries have approved of the provisions of the bill, and declare that its conditions are ample to make it self-sustaining. Members of the teaching profession are now likely to receive their just dues, and the standard of excellence in teachers and schools will attain a higher plane than ever.

THE PROPOSED BANKING ANNEX.

SAY THERE ARE an average of forty pupils in each department of our local schools. In case an ambitious member of the Board of Education has his way and penny banks are established, about fifty per cent. of the children will become patrons of the new institution. One day a week deposits will be received. It requires as much time to enter a deposit of five cents as of five hundred dollars. An expert receiving teller in a regular bank would require nearly two hours to take care of twenty depositors, and at the end of that time would probably have not more than one dollar to show for his labors. With a school teacher new to the duty, a longer time would be consumed in taking care of the offerings and making the entries. In the meantime, some other and more essential department of the school work would be sacrificed.

With a savings bank in every block of the down-town district, banks where deposits of one dollar are received, it looks more and more as if such annexes to the educational system would be nothing more than a fad, a useless if not undesirable new burden on the curriculum.

MALE VERSUS FEMALE TEACHERS.

DISCUSSING the Teachers' Pension Bill, The Kingston Standard says that while the services of women as teachers are valuable to the public, it is yet a question whether men are not more desirable as instructors for grown boys.

That question has been settled to the satisfaction of expert educationists for a number of years. There is no doubt concerning the fitness of women as teachers of young children. Until a child reaches the school age he has been almost entirely under the care of his mother. There is no one so well qualified as a woman to lead him over the first stages of his academic career. No man can understand child nature so well, no man can be as patient with the caprices of childhood. Placing the pupils of tender years under women teachers is but carrying out the plans that nature has designed.

The boy, when he reaches years of manhood, will in the duties of life find himself associated almost entirely with men. It is essential, then, that men and the rising generation acquire an understanding of each other. No further argument in favor of male teachers for the higher grades in our schools is required.

SAFE IN PORT.

THE BELGIAN RELIEF COMMITTEE issues the following strong appeal for aid on behalf of the brave people who first opposed the murderous legions of Germany:

Up through the English Channel a big cargo boat, heavy laden, lumbered along through boisterous seas. Of the perils of the ocean highway her skipper and crew had had ample evidence, for within twenty-four hours two vessels had been sunk within sight. But she kept her course, undaunted by the danger of floating mines or lurking submarines.

Half a day's steam from Rotterdam, the black, sinister back of a venomous U-boat was seen to push out of the sea on the port bow, but even this pirate, acting on instructions, gave free passage to the relief ship. For any interference with the supplies of the Commission would thrust upon Germany the burden either of herself feeding Belgium or of condemning an entire nation to starvation, and her own soldiers to the pestilence that would follow.

Of that splendid cargo of wheat and beans and bacon, that came safely into Rotterdam, was any part furnished by you? Did you help provide a single sack of flour? Though no longer under the official protection of the American flag, the Relief Commission still carries on its work as resolutely as ever. Today it stands in greater need of your practical support than at any time since the fall of Liege. Send your contributions today to the nearest Relief Committee, or direct to the Belgian Relief Fund, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal. Help to load the next boat.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Fault Lay in Conditions.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Lord Kitchener is blamed for the fatal three weeks' delay in getting to Gallipoli the troops required for the operations there. He is dead and cannot speak in his own defence; but it is not difficult to believe that the fault was in the conditons rather than in the war secretary. Even as it was, we know that too large a proportion of the troops dispatched to Gallipoli were only half trained. It was out of Lord Kitchener's power to get enough seasoned soldiers for that work, and the delay may have been caused by his desire to give the men of the new army all the training possible before dispatching them to Gallipoli.

(London Advertiser.)

THE COUNTRY'S FINANCES

Near approach of the end of the fiscal year finds Canada's financial position sound. The customs revenue, which may be regarded as a fairly reliable barometer of trade conditions throughout the country, continues to break records. The figures for February showed an increase of more than ten per cent. over the corresponding figures for 1916; and there is reason to expect that equally satisfactory advances will be shown in March.

This is satisfactory in a double sense: it shows that despite the war the country's prosperity continues on the upgrade, and it acts as an incentive to the nation to lift that prosperity to a still higher level.

During the past two and a half years the nation's energies have been chiefly devoted to the war, and rightly so, because the whole future of the Dominion and the Empire depends upon the success of the vast issue in Europe. But it is nevertheless important, if not vital, that the commercial and industrial activities of the country be maintained and extended in every possible way, if only to bring about a condition whereby the Dominion will be in a stronger position to meet the heavy burdens that will necessarily be imposed upon it as a result of the war.

And, in addition to that important aspect, there is the future development of the country to be borne in mind. After the war there will be an unloosening of the national energies now concentrated upon a temporary but vital enterprise. The armies now battling in Europe will be forged into industrial armies and concentrated upon the task of regenerating the devastated industrialism of most of the nations now dedicated to war. There will have to be great reorganizations, and there will necessarily be great upheavals, and it would be folly on the part of Canada if, while expending her energies now upon the supreme issue in Europe, she did not, at the same time, make some preparation to maintain for herself, after the coming of peace, the splendid position she has so dearly won in this war.

THE PARTY WASTED WISDOM

During the recent session of Parliament, Hon. Frank Oliver and other Opposition speakers raised many loud and indignant objections to the National Service scheme. The Government was accused of introducing a subtle partisan enterprise disguised as a patriotic endeavor. The whole National Service idea, and particularly the cards to be signed by individuals, was utterly and roundly condemned.

Nevertheless, the Government was not convinced of the absurdity of the National Service plan. Neither, it develops, was Premier Lloyd George and his cabinet, who, no doubt, improve themselves regularly by reading the speeches of Canadian Liberal leaders.

At a great meeting in London held on Tuesday, February 6th, Premier Lloyd George launched a National Service scheme under the leadership of Mr. Neville Chamberlain as director-general. Except in the matter of wages and incidental provisions it is exactly modelled upon the Canadian National Service scheme, the promises of remuneration being naturally less attractive than are those offered by the Canadian Government. The same cards are provided and the same method of securing an estimate of available workers. The British Government scheme is open to the whole weight of objection raised by Opposition critics to the Canadian Government's plan.

A favorite cry raised against Sir Robert Borden by partisan detractors is that he is too slow. They demand "leadership." Here is an interesting case in which the country got it, and events have made possible the holding up of Opposition criticism to ridicule.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A WORD FROM "OUR TOWN."

Sir: I read in your paper about a bathing place for your town.

Let me tell you how we got one in "our town." We had a funny lot of chaps in "our town," and a more funnier lot of chaps you never came across, in our town council.

They belonged to all manner of societies, too, from the "Mashuns," "Old Pillows," "Order of Elephants, Cats and Dogs," and others too numerous to mention. I forget them all.

Well, if you were chief of the Water Trowers or chief of the Copper Pickers, or chief town crier, or chief of any old thing, and belonged to any of these societies, you could always get what you wanted in "Our Town." Well, I will just give you a couple of instances of what they done, and how they used to do us.

It was the Crimean War, I think. However, I know there were English, French, Russians and Turks fighting at be time. It was an awful war. Well, we wanted "sogers" to fight, and the officers wanted "our town" to help them. These "soger" fellows, mostly working chaps, you know, could not belong to these societies, as it is only for the big uns.

Well, our funny chaps in the council split their sides laughing at the idea, at least half of them did (I hope), so they voted, evenly—and saved tons of money for "our town"—about 1000 dollars. Gee!

But we got a bad name. "Our town" was never thought the same of again. Drat them, I say.

Well, we wanted a bathing place for the people, as a lot had been drowned every year, you know.

Of course, a lot of the people—I might say a terrible lot, too—did not belong to these societies, so our funny council done the same thing again—voted evenly against it—so we got no bathing place in "our town," and we got wild, I can tell you.

Some of our funny council chaps, too, were frightened of water, and in the summer time, when they took their collars off, you could see their high water mark—guess it was the same all the way down—half of the council could not swim.

Well, we had one or two drowned, and one or two rescued from the river by old country chaps—nearly ninety per cent. of these fellows can swim. How is it? Well, they have bathing places over there.

So we resolved in future—if any one was drowned bathing — these funny fellows in the council who voted against us should be on the inquest—just to show them what they voted for, and to ask them if "satisfied now, eh?"

Well, that done it. They did not like that, and we got a bathing place in "our town."

I may say that the other half of our council learned to swim, too, and you could not see any high water mark on them any more, or in any of the people of "our town," and we got a good name, too. We were called "Clean Town" by visitors for having such a nice bathing place.

The fellows who voted against us got sensible, too.

That's how we got a bathing place in "Our Town."

Mayor of "Our Town."

NO SOLDIER IS FORGOTTEN

A Canadian friend writes that she thinks every Canadian soldier must have got several parcels this Christmas, and that if there was such a thing as a lonely soldier in any battalion he could not consider himself so any longer when the parcels arrived. Lest anyone should suppose that our soldiers are at all spoiled, remember that even the best of food becomes monotonous and that "eats" as unlike those supplied by paternal authority as possible, are hailed with the warmth never given to articles sold to trusting relatives as "the very thing for the trenches," or to books reeking with the most lofty statements. "Socks and eats" should be graven on the minds of all who aspire to please the Canadian army.

Nor are the wounded and sick neglected, for the Parcels Department of the Canadian Red Cross has been busy seeing that each Canadian in hospital for Christmas gets a reminder that he is not forgotten.

"Send me any old food," wrote a Canadian to his aunt in London, on which she commented indignantly to a friend, who by right of birth understood the Canadian language, "Imagine Jack supposing I would send him 'old' food! He shall have the best I can get at the stores, poor darling!" and the Canadian friend was too pleased with the sentiment to explain matters.—Mary MacLeod Moore's English letter.

Play Aprons For the Little Girl.

From Paris come some lovely little aprons for children. They are made of practical materials, such as jean, poplin or fine French cotton fabrics, and they have borders which show printed flowers, animals or geometric designs to delight the eye of the little wearers.

The colors are blue, pink and tan and also white. Some of the models are made with shoulder straps, while others introduce plaits across the shoulder and have a ruffle finish. Nearly all the aprons are supplied with pockets. They make ideal play garments as well as offering protection for the little frock of linen or batiste.

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition.

There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams:—

She says:—"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women."—Mrs. NELLIE WILLIAMS, 31 West 3d Street, New Albany, Ind.

OMEMEE

OMEMEE, March 13.—Miss Shields, milliner for Mr. C. Ivory, arrived in town last week.

S. S. Skuce of Fenelon Falls visited Omemee friends over the week end.

Messrs. Wilde and Henderson spent the week end in Havelock.

Miss R. Fair of Peterborough Normal spent the week end under the parental roof.

Preparations are under way for a public reception for the Rev. J. P. McInnis, who arrived at St. John almost a week ago. Mr. McInnis was in service with the 109th Batt., but owing to ill-health was unable to go to France. It is expected the reception will take place in Coronation Hall on Thursday evening.

The Misses Bidmead and Smyth were visitors to Lindsay on Saturday.

Mrs. McLaughlin and son of Bancroft are guests of Rev. and Mrs. Downe.

Mr. W. Wilson was a visitor to Lindsay on Saturday.

Mr. R. Wilde of the Bank of Toronto staff has been transferred to the Barrie branch, Mr. McDowell of Toronto is his successor.

Mr. E. Bain has purchased the residence of Mr. T. Henderson and will move to the village this week.

Mr. Weir and family of Harvey have moved to the farm recently vacated by Mr. H. Nugent.

Mrs. Lee of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. A. Peters.

Mrs. Mark of Lindsay returned home on Saturday after a visit with her aunt, Miss Davidson.

Mr. and Mrs. Magill and children of Welland are the guests of Mr. John Magill.

Mr. H. Hall of Lindsay visited friends in Omemee on Saturday.

Capt. Thorn of Kingston is spending a few days at home with his family.

News of the death of Ethel Thompson, beloved wife of William Watson of Coboconk, and daughter of the late "Dr." Thompson, was received in Omemee on Thursday. Mrs. Watson was well known in Omemee having lived here as a child. Left to mourn her loss are her husband and one daughter, aged five, as well as her mother, sisters and brothers. The relatives have the sympathy of the entire village.

The Soldiers' Aid Society packed a bale of hospital supplies on Tuesday. Downeyville ladies donated 69 pairs of socks. Omemee ladies had 276 pairs of socks, 48 suits of pyjamas, 9 hospital shirts and 10 personal property bags.

Two men were talking of the hard times.

"Does your wife ever grieve because she threw over a wealthy man in order to marry you?" queried Hall.

"Well, she started to once," was the reply, "but I cured her of it without delay."

"I wish you would tell me how," said Hall.

"I started right in grieving with her," replied the other, "and I grieved harder and longer than she did."

Favors are seldom satisfactory. The best way is not to need them.

CAVAN

(Special Correspondence.)

CAVAN, March 13.—Mr. Edward Morton, mail carrier, has moved to his farm in West Cavan and Mr. A. Armstrong of Millbrook has come to take the place vacated by Mr. Morton.

Mr. Sam. Staples of Ida was married on Wednesday last to Miss Armstrong of South Cavan. Congratulations.

Mr. Geo. Wallace of Millbrook spent the week-end with friends in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Smith spent Sunday in Millbrook.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dawson left for the West on Tuesday.

Mrs. Howson of Lindsay and Mrs. Neil of Peterborough were here attending the funeral of the late W. H. Staples on Tuesday.

Mr. Will Cathcart of Toronto spent the week-end with Cavan friends and shipped a car load of horses to the West on Tuesday.

THE WAR LOAN

Three years ago Dominion of Canada bonds sold to yield only 4% on the amount invested. It is interesting to know how this loan now issued at 96 would work out when the loan would still have fifteen years to run.

Five Years From Now

It would sell at 100 to yield 5%
" " 105¾ " 4½%
" " 111¼ " 4%

The investor on this basis would have had 5.40% on his money for five years, and could sell, if desired, at a profit of $40, or $93.75, or $152.50 per $1,000, as the case might be.

We shall be glad to forward your application and look after all your interests free of charge to you.

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

HEALTH BOARD READY FOR TEST OF ALL MILK

Relief Officer Will Take Samples of Lactile.

A thorough analysis and test of all milk distributed in the city of Peterborough will be made at once, as per the instructions given by the local board of Health at their meeting last night. The board has had the matter under discussion for some time but the difficulty of obtaining laboratory accommodation has prevented the inspections from being carried out. Dr. J. S. McCulloch, chief officer of health for Ontario, wrote the board very strongly on the subject, pointing out that this was the best means of preventing a high rate of infant mortality.

Relief Officer Miller who has been doing the duties of sanitary inspector, consented to getting samples of all the milk.

Other communications received were:—

From Peterborough Utilities Commission, acknowledging receipt of the board's letter re inspection of the city's water.

From Miss Reid, superintendent of the Queen Mary Hospital, expressing her willingness to collect the fees due by patients as soon as the treasurer furnished the proper receipt book.

From the city treasurer, stating that the expenses of the Queen Mary Hospital for the last two months was $404.60.

Accounts to be Paid

The following accounts were recommended for payment when certified:—

J. Stevens & Son	$39.95
Wm. Brown	46.84
H. Reid	1.00
Jas. Juby	19.08
Mrs. Hoskins	2.25
C. W. Mack	.54
G. J. Jopling & Sons	15.39
Trebilcock Bros.	4.00

Bills Due Hospital

City Treasurer Adams furnished the board with a long list of accounts due the city for services rendered citizens by the staff of the Queen Mary Hospital. A careful scrutiny of them was made and the city solicitor will be asked to collect as many as possible.

CEDRIC IS SAFE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 14. — The White Star liner Cedric has arrived here.

DIED IN ACTION

Three Peterboro Men Are Reported Killed.

Pte. Chester Craft, R. R. No. 9, Peterborough, Pte. Wm. McKinstry, Orpington road, Brownton, and Pte. John Bertram Carvolth, 402 Monaghan road, are today officially reported killed in action.

Ptes. McKinstry and Craft met death on March 1st, and Pte. Carvolth was killed on March 5th. The first two named soldiers enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here.

Three recruits were taken on the strength of the 247th Battalion today. They are:

Pte. M. Hall.

Pte. Arnold Montgomery.

Pte. Percy R. Sullivan.

All three recruits come from Buckhorn.

The following promotions to lance-corporals are announced in today's orders: Privates P. D. Ferguson, W. H. Hall, F. Holden and H. R. Snider.

Pte. Melleville Hall, son of Mr. Charles Hall, of Buckhorn, enlisted with the 247th Battalion today. Mr. Hall's three sons are now in uniform. Pte. Harry Hall has been with the 21st Battalion for 21 months, and Pte. Leslie Hall enlisted with the 247th a few days ago.

The 109th Battalion band instruments have arrived at St. John, N.B. Word to this effect was received in Lindsay on Monday. They are to be forwarded to Lindsay, it is understood.

The Returned Soldiers' club rooms in the Barrie Building were formally opened last night by the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E., who furnished the rooms, which are given free by Mr. Barrie. The evening was a fine success, there being a good turnout of the returned men, who took great delight in the new rooms.

A large framed engraved photo of Lieut.-Col. Ackerman is among the gifts to the association from the Otonabee Chapter. Col. Ackerman was present and made a short address.

GERARD AT WASHINGTON.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 14. — Ambassador Gerard reached here today.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

A vivid example of acting is seen in "Intolerance," the stupendous moving picture exhibition which opens at the Grand next Monday, in the wrok of Mae Marsh as the poor little working girl who bravely fights her way through a hard life. With equal spirit Constance Talmadge kicks people on the shins as the mountain girl who adores Belshhazzar.

girl who adores Belshhazzar.

The story contained in "Intolerance" is told in four great chapters. The scene of the modern story is laid in an American city and shows the efforts of so-called reformers to stifle personal liberty. This results in the temporary wrecking of a home and the bringing of a man to the verge of death on the scaffold.

The story of the sacred time is laid in Judea in the year 27 and is made up of episodes from the life of Christ, ending with the Crucifixion. In the story of the middle ages the time chosen is during the reign of Charles IX., when, influenced by his mother, Catherine de Medici, he permits the massacre of the Hugehots.

The ancient time is in the beginning of Babylon, when it is finally destroyed by Cyrus and his countless myriads of Persians.

Nothing to equal the Babylonian scenes has ever been shown on the screen. They are simply marvellous. It does not seem possible that human agencies in these times could so reconstruct the ancient city and place before the camera such scenes of conflict and carnage. The irresistible sweep of the Persian army towards the doomed city, the attack on the walls, the attackers using great towers and catapults, the hand to hand fighting on the walls, in the streets and in the palace, the scenes at the feast in the great hall, a mile long, are reproduced with an effect that is positively startling.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM ARGUE

Mrs. William Argue of Cobourg, widow of the late William Argue, of that town, and sister of Mrs. Wm. Hill, Mrs. John Mann and Mrs. Geo. Kingdon of this city, died at Cobourg yesterday. The funeral will be held at Cobourg on Thursday at 2.30 p.m.

MRS. M. J. HICKEY

Mary Dunn, wife of Mr. M. J. Hickey, died at the family residence, 303 Boswell Ave., last night after an illness of over a year. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Dunn and is survived by her husband, one daughter, Madeline and one brother, Austin Dunn of Fort William.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's Cemetery.

ANDREW CALDWELL.

Andrew Caldwell died at his late residence, 1486 King street, Toronto, last night. The deceased was the father of Mr. James Caldwell of Turnbull & Co., and Mrs. F. J. Might.

The funeral will take place Friday afternoon.

Dear Fire Wood at Chemong Village

Chemong Indian village was in the throes of excitement yesterday when Indian Agent R. J. McCamus sat on a case in which Mr. Hanes, the husband of the school teacher there, was charged with having cut down a tree for fuel.

Magistrate McCamus found the defendant guilty and imposed a fine of $20 and costs, amounting in all to $22.75.

PROCEEDS OF $82.00.

The ladies' of St. Paul's Red Cross auxiliary very much appreciate the kindness of the Strand Theatre management in giving them the receipts of Monday, March 12th. The proceeds amounted to $82. They would also thank Miss Stevens, Mrs. Hughson Johnston and Mr. Asa Huycke, who so ably assisted with the program, and also the J. M. Greene Music Co., for the use of their Diamond Disc machine.

A vivid imagination is often even more dangerous than a little learning.

Save Your Waste for the Play Grounds

PETERBORO' COULD RAISE $6000 FROM WASTE PAPER ALONE.

What becomes of the waste paper? Dr. Jas. L. Hughes of Toronto has computed that if all the daily papers published in that city were turned in after being read $700 daily would be realized; that if each home were to turn in 10c worth of waste paper, rags, rubber, and old metal per month, over $100,000 would be secured.

Apply this to our own city There are at least 5,000 homes; 10c of waste per month from each home would amount to $6,000, enough to equip and supervise four playgrounds, give $3,000 for Red Cross purposes and have $1,000 left for some other benevolent project, such as assisting the city council in keeping down the tax rate to 38 mills.

Two pairs of old rubbers are worth 10c; 20 lbs. of paper the same; and a good bag of rags 90c. Of course the thrifty housewife will find that these prices do not prevail with the visiting junkman; he is the middleman and must have his profits.

Save your waste for the supervised playgrounds: the committee intend making a collection next month.

Annie E. Mowat, Convener.

The Season of Spring!

When the ideas of Women turn to thoughts of new raiment—and the flowers, the trees, the birds, and the live things of the earth shed their old and don the new.

An Exposition of Fashionable Attire—Millinery, Ready-to-Wears, Dress Goods and all that makes for Modishness in Dress

Spring has oft times come before, but has she ever been accompanied by such splendour of color or magnificence of design. She has, indeed, a fit companion in the smart style for 1917.

Huge collars, huge cuffs and huge pockets that are sometimes described as saddle, clock stitching and shoe string girdles are all fancies of fashion for this season.

Gabardines, serges, checks, velours, shuddah cloths, etc., are all equally popular and, no doubt, equally deserving. They are fashioned into the various designs to which they are best adapted.

The dyers have produced marvellous tints in the following shades: Indian Blue, Purple, Penguin Grey, Gold, Damson, Chartreuse, Citron, Apple Green, Cress Green, Clay, Putty, Beige, Tan and Trench Brown.

Spring!—and with it a riot of color, nothing is immune, but perhaps millinery presents the widest variety of all. A marked preponderanc of blue, gold, citron rose, putty and tan is noticeable.

The materials are chrysanthemum, tagel and caterpillar braids. They frequently depend upon georgette and satin to complete some pleasing arrangement.

The trimmings presented are charmingly embroidered ribbons, wings know no bounds in either direction "large or or small" hand ombroidery, soutache braid, flowers, medallions, motifs—but let us stop, we cannot enumerate them all.

Shapes—all sorts and sizes, wide brimmed sailors and wee turbans. If we must be specific then let it be "either one extreme or the other." Intermediate sizes are shown—but the vogue runs to the the tiny or the very large. There is unity on one point, the crown is much higher than we have seen for several seasons.

Gorgeous Weaves and Tints in Dress Goods Section

Splendidly equipped, for a season that will be sure to demand much in the way of color and weaves. Our Dress Goods Section now feels confident of the same fashionable following that has so liberally supported it in seasons past. Novelty and staple materials, in fact, no matter what the taste of the purchaser, we are sure that she will here find that which will satisfy.

AN ADDRESS BY MR. F. J. A. MORRIS

BEFORE A. B. C. CLUB OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

A largely attended meeting of the A. B. C. Club of St. John's Church was held in the guild room Monday evening, the president, Miss G. Crowe, being in the chair. Rev. Canon Cornish opened with prayer, which was followed by a piano solo by Miss D. Stuart.

Mr. Morris, of the Collegiate staff, read a very interesting paper, describing botanical life in Canada, and comparing it in some instances to that of England. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker at the conclusion of his address.

Miss G. Cuffe contributed a vocal solo, which was encored. Canon Cornish then addressed the club, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A business meeting then followed, and it was decided to put on a play in the near future in aid of the Red Cross. Watch for further announcements.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"

"The Million Dollar Doll," which will be the offering at The Grand Saturday matinee and night, March 17th, has already proven that it is the one big hit of all the season's musical offerings. The books, lyrics and music were written by Louis Weslyn of New York City, who is the successful writer for such well-known artiste as Rock and Fulton, Lulu Glazer, Marion Bent, Pat Rooney and many others. The entire work is original and far above the general run of muscal comedies. Mr. Weslyn considers this his best work. The production is staged by Harvey D. Orr Producing Co., who are well known to the theatregoing public. They have given this attraction the the most elaborate production ever sent on tour. The costumes, stage settings and light effects are beautiful and enchanting. The attraction is one of the largest and best on the road this season and is well worthy of the large patronage which has been accorded it since the opening date. The Orr Brothers, with the original New York cast, insure the greatest musical offering of the season

ST. PAUL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS

The mid-week service will not be held this wek as preparatory service will be held Friday evening.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell of St Andrew's Church will preach at the preparatory service. As this may be the last opportunity St. Paul's members will have of hearing Mr. Mitchell before he leaves for Toronto, it is hoped that all the members will endeavor to be present.

Another thing of interest at the Friday evening service will be the addition to our church membership of a greater number than has united at any one time during the present pastorate.

TEACHERS IN CONFERENCE HEAR EXCELLENT TALKS

Officers Re elected at the Closing Session.

"Our point of attack must be in the home," said Mr. E. W. Halpenny, in summing up after an excellent address on "The Care of the Child" before the Sunday school teachers' conference in George Street Church last night. Mr. Halpenny spoke of the influences which should surround the young life and gave some pointed illustrations which gave much effect to his address.

Dealing with the subject "The Most Critical Period in the Human Life," Rev. T. H. Mitchell, B.D., gave it as his opinion that the teen age was the most critical period of youth. Three characteristics were: physical transformation, mental unrest, and spiritual susceptibility; and three choices were: avocation, a life partner, and religion. Mr. Mitchell spoke of the influences of the home, school, church, street and atmosphere, and, in conclusion, said: "The greatest thing for the teacher to take to the Sunday school is an atmosphere, and the secret of that atmosphere is Jesus Christ in the heart."

Larger Balance.

The county delegates held their session in the morning, while the city convention opened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. R. G. Peever, with the president, Mr. Joseph Wearing, in the chair. The treasurer's report showed total receipts of $111.80, with expenses of $91.67, leaving a balance of $20.13 on hand. This amount is larger than carried over from previous years on account of a balance left over from the Laymen's Missionary Movement convention, which was turned over to the city S. S. Association.

Splendid reports were presented from the superintendent of the home department, T. W. Robinson; superintendent elementary grades, Mrs. E. D. Lewis; superintendent temperance department, F. E. Kerr; superintendent teacher training, Mr. A. Mowat. All these reports were received and adopted. The secretary directed attention to statistical returns from each of the Sunday schools, which would be required for his report to the provincial office, and also drew attention to the request from the treasurer that each school's apportionment be paid promptly, as returns must be in the provincial office before Easter.

These reports were followed by an address from Rev. E. W. Halpenny, B.A., secretary Ontario S. S. Association, on "The Sunday School Session Program," which proved very instructive and full of suggestions. Miss Bertha Laine, superintendent elementary grades, spoke on "Lesson Preparation and Presentation." Miss Laine was fully at home with her subject and gave a splendid address. The afternoon session closed with an address on "Teacher Training" by Mr. E. E. Ingall, B.A.

The Officers.

The evening session opened at 8 o'clock, with a good audience present. The devotional exercises were taken by Adjutant McElhiney. The nominating committee presented their report of officers for the year, as follows:

President—Mr. Jos. Wearing.

1st Vice-President—Mr. Malcolm Clark.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. A. Mowat.

Secretary—Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr.

Treasurer—Mr. A. J. Johnston.

Supt. Teacher Training—Mr E. E. Ingall, B.A.

Supt. Elementary Grades — Mrs E. D. Lewis.

Supt. Home Department—Mr. T. W. Robinson.

Supt Secondary Division—Mr. R. C. Read.

Supt. Adult Bible Class—Mr. H B. Cowan.

Supt. Missionary Dept. — To be filled later.

Supt. Temperance Dept.—Mr. F. E. Kerr.

President Wearnig said that no other association in Ontario had a better secretary than the Peterborough organization in Mr. J. J. Turner.

The musical program was supplied by Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton, the George street choir male quartette, consisting of Messrs. C. Parsons W. Dartnell, F. Walton and H. Jones, while Mr. John Renwick presided at the organ.

A vote of thanks was tendered the stewards and pastor of the George street church, also the organist, Mr. Renwick and those who contributed to the musical program, in placing the edifice at the disposal of the convention.

The meeting closed with God Save the King.

BACK TO THE LAND.

Government Has Plan Which Will Aid Farmers.

Another phase of the labor problem in Ontario is being developed to secure co-operation between the labour bureaus in cities and towns, established by the Department of Labor, and the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture as a means of meeting to some extent the scarcity of farm help.

For years it has been recognized that among the numbers of unskilled laborers in the cities there are men who have drifted in from the farms. In many cases these could be induced to go back to farm work if the opportunity was presented to them. While in the past the labor bureaus have not been particularly concerned or sufficiently well posted to deal with this problem under the system now being established the officer in charge of one of these branches will be in close touch with the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture. With detailed data available he will be in a position to offer an applicant who has had farm experience a choice of positions in the country. In view of the great demand for labor in all industrial centres it is not expected that a great deal can be done in this direction at the present time, but it will be the policy of the Government in the future to continue this co-operation between rural and urban officials as well as with a larger plan for settling Northern Ontario.

No man is so strong or great that he is not afraid of somebody. The chances being that the somebody is a woman.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

GILLESPIE FOR GROCERS HAD HIGH SCORE OF 569 IN THREE GAMES

In the bowling league game the Grocers defeated De Laval last night by taking two out of the three games. Great excitement prevailed, however, as in the second game De Laval got on an extra spurt and from then till the finish the result seemed to be in doubt.

Gillespie for the Grocers was in great form and spilled the beans for a 569 score in the three games. Carter for De Laval came next with a 536 count.

Thursday night the Printers, winners of the last league, play the C. G. E. team. A good game is promised as the G.G.E. are out to clean up.

The scores:

Curlers Gather on Monday Night

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held on Monday evening next. The prizes for the season will be presented to the members and the officers for the ensuing year elected.

Vice-Skips' Bonspiel

Messrs. A. C. Kay, W. J. Oke, C. C. Parsons, J. H. Metheral have been appointed a committee to arrange for a vice-skips' bonspiel as soon as possible.

This will be the last of the curling season.

Vanity of the Papuans.

The natives of most primitive countries are vain, but the Papuans are particularly so, and though they wear next to nothing in the way of clothing, they love to spend hours preening themselves like birds, combing their hair with long-toothed wooden combs and adorning the great mops with bright flowers, giving a most artistic effect. They also paint their faces with red and yellow pigments, in designs that are weirdly funny. In the remote mountains both men and women carry small grass bags containing their toilet requisites. Women, adds the writer in the February Wide World Magazine, who are recent widows or who are mourning for near relatives, blacken their already dark faces with a sable pigment or mud, which gives them a very strange appearance and makes them look so ugly that—especially in the case of widows—it very successfully keeps off lovers, thus ensuring a decent period of widowhood.

Y.M.C.A. INTERNATIONAL HEXATHLON RESULTS

Local Athletes Make Gratifying Showing.

The results of the Boys Hexathlon this year were very gratifying. Peterborough is now in Class A, owing to the large boys membership, and competes against the big associations of Canada and the United States. Compared with Toronto Central results the local boys have done fine work and have beaten the marks set up this year by the big association in almost every event and in every class. One hundred and eight boys competed in six events in the contest just finished and 82 boys counted in at least one or more events among the first eight scores, the number to qualify in Class A. In the Unlimited Class the contest for the all-round high score was close, Jack Green only securing six points more than Hubert Martin.

Winners in each class—
80lb—F. Ash, 491 points.
95lb—T. Pogue, 465 points.
110lb—F. Rutherford, 521 points.
125lb—J. Thirnbeck, 476 points.
Unlimited—J. Green, 495 points.

Other Press Gangs.

There is an old Scottish lament wrung from the hearts of white men sent or sold into slavery in North and South America in the middle of the eighteenth century, which aptly describes the position of the Belgians to-day. One verse of it is:—

> We art yokit in a plow, and wearied sair now,
> In the land of Virginia, O.
> Wi' the yoke upon our neck, till our hearts are like to brek,
> And, O, but I'm weary, weary, O.

In "Kidnapped" Stevenson puts into the mouth of the sailor lad Ransome a reference to some unhappy slaves, who were either criminals, or innocents kidnapped, or "trepanned," for private interests or vengeance. They were known to the seamen engaged in the traffic as "twenty-pounders," that being the usual price paid for their transportation.—London Chronicle.

War on Bethmann-Hollweg.

When the Berliner Neueste Nachrichten, which is commonly known as the organ of the Krupps, describes the Imperial Chancellor as a weakling and demands his resignation, it gives expression to a sentiment common to the military party and to all Junkerdum.

The Chancellor has never been forgiven for his blunt admission that the invasion of Belgium was a wrong which could be justified only on the grounds of military necessity. His determination to keep the peace with the United States aroused the bitter resentment of all the Tirpitz party, which was committed to ruthless submarine warfare, and the Tirpitz party was supported by most of the General Staff. The retirement of the Grand Admiral was due to his opposition of the Chancellor's policy in yielding to the American demands, and only the present intervention of the Kaiser saved the situation. Now that the German peace proposal has been rejected by the Allies, it is inevitable that the campaign against Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg should be renewed with greater fury and bitterness than ever. The Neueste Nachrichten has merely fired the first gun, and it will have the active support of all the blood-and-iron extremists who still believe that Germany is a law unto itself and prepared to fight the world. Thus far there is no hint of a crisis; yet nothing has been more certain for the last year than the precariousness of the Chancellor's position.

Great men do much for others and take it out in posthumous fame.

Hard Part Yet to be Faced

She—What's this I hear about you being engaged?

He—It's merely a protocol; we haven't had the treaty ratified by her father.

LOCKED OUT MEN RETURN TO WORK ACCEPT TERMS

The trouble between the Metal Products Company and their machinists and toolmakers has been settled. The company acceded to the demands of the men for 55 hours a week straight time, day or night shift, and time and a half for over time. The terms were accepted at a meeting of the men in the Labor Hall this afternoon. The night men will go to work this evening and the day men in the morning. All will be taken back except two who quit a week ago.

Organizer Harper says the terms are perfectly satisfactory to the men.

SALE OF STOCK IN NEW CONCERN

MILK PRODUCTS, LIMITED, APPEALS TO MEN WITH MONEY.

The sale of ice cream at a July picnic is a tame affair compared with the readiness with which stock in the Milk Products, Limited, is being taken up by the people of means in the city and county. Some of the local capitalists who are noted for their caution in making investments are among the purchasers. Others who know a good thing just as soon as it is called to their attention have taken stock in the new concern, which means so much to the prosperity of the community. Messrs. Morden and Bull, who are promoting the company, are meetings with flattering success on all sides, and the venture will soon be financed and fully launched. The best feature of the entire enterprise, too, is that it will be largely an industry kept up by hime capital and in which the entire community will have direct interest.

GOOD BILL AT ROYAL.

The special bill at The Royal tonight is a very strong one. The high-class Fox feature, "A Tortured Heart," with Virginia Pearson as the principal actor, supported by all-star actors of the William Fox corporation, was shown at Loewe's Theatre, Toronto, two weeks ago to overflowing houses. Also two reels of the Beatrice Fairfax series, "The Stone God," with specially selected comedies. The prices in Toronto for this show were 25c, 50c, 75c and $1. At The Royal, only 10c in the afternoon and 15c in the evening.

BRITISH MOVE IN MACEDONIA

BRITISH LINE ON DOIRAN FRONT ADVANCE 1000 YDS. ON FRONT OF TWO MILES

Within Two Hundred Yards of Enemy Positions.

Straightens Salient of Exposed Positions.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 15. — The British line southwest of Doiran on the Macedonian front has been advanced 1000 yards over a front of 3500 yards, says a despatch from Saloniki today. The British trenches are thus brought in some places to within 200 yards of Bulgarian and German positions. The movement was carried out at night, without opposition.

The new line shortens the British front by straightening the salient on Horse Show Hill which has always been an exposed position. It also strengthens British defences by the addition of an extra line of trenches. Furthermore it facilitates additional raids upon hostile positions in this sector by reducing "no man's land" to the limits of a short spring.

WORK DONE BY CAPT. BURNHAM

Capt. J. H. Burnham has received the following letter, which explains itself:

Listowel, Ont.,
March 14, 1917.

Dear Sir: I am pleased to note by this morning's paper that you are not relaxing your efforts to utilise the women power of Ontario in the great cause to which we are devoted.

It is a source of great grief to me and to many others that so much force and energy are left idle and uncalled for where there are so many great needs. If you can organize and use the will and the ability of all the voluntary workers who would rally to your call, you would be one of the greatest national benefactors Canada has produced. If British women have been able to accomplish so much and in such a splendid manner, there is no reason why we in Canada should not emulate their example.

If there is anything I can do in any way or in any place, I shall be only too glad to dedicate myself and all that is in me, to prove our worth. —Yours very truly, (Signed) Adelaide H. Clayton.

Bonar Law Asks Additional Vote Of $323,000,000

LONDON, March 15.—Bonar Law asked the House of Commons today for an additional credit of three hundred and twenty million dollars, of which he said ninety million was wanted for wheat from Australia, a hundred and fifteen millions is for advances to the Allies and British Dominions, and the balance for munitions. This makes the total complete vote for the year ten billion, fifty million dollars, and since the war began, eighteen billion, nine hundred and fifty million dollars.

FOR GREATER PRODUCTION

Below are defined the lots so far available in the greater productiin movement. Anyone proposing to use land can look the prospects over at leisure, and, if willing to participate, may register with the city clerk the amount of area proposed to be used.

By D. W. Dumble, five acres, lies south of Dumble avenue, east of the old Chemong railway and west of Argyle St. A good location and one easily accessible to residents in the north ward.

By B. D. Hall, northwest corner of Lake and George streets. Size 70 x 90 feet. This seems to be about our size and should have many takers. Don't all speak at once. But first come first served is understood.

By R. J. Wolstenholme, Lots 34 and 35, also Lot 26, Plan 120 Prince street, and Lot 11, Plan 120, Lansdowne St. These lots are right in the right place. Easily reached by people living in the south ward. The ground is easily cultivated; a dry summer will not have serious effect. Just go down and pick out how much you will use. Use, remember, not take. Don't secure more than you can cultivate well and easily. Remember the story of the man with the hoe.

Further details will be given of additional registrations. In a week or two the matter of preparing the land will be taken up and some plan arrived at.

OTTAWA SENT OFFICIAL TO THIS CITY TO SETTLE LOCAL LABOR TROUBLE

All Munition Factories Now Operated Subject to Industrial Disputes Act---Lockouts and Strikes Illegal Until Thirty Days Notice Has Been Given by Employers or Men.

It does not appear to be generally known that all the munitions factories in Peterborough and throughout the country come under the operation of the Industrial Disputes Act. When that Act was put in force it applied only to labor disputes in public utilities. Some time ago there was an agitation set on foot to have the Act include all plants engaged in the manufacture of munitions and Parliament was expected to take some action. The change, however, has been made by an order-in-Council, with the approval of the Military Board. Strikes in munition plants in this city or elsewhere are accordingly impossible without due notice and the submission of the matter in dispute to a board of arbitrators.

When Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, heard that there was trouble between the employers and the men in a local munitions plant, he at once took control of the situation by sending W. D. Killins, one of the fair wage officers of the department, to Peterborough to investigate. He reached here Monday night and the precence of a Government offical gave the affair a new aspect, and it was to Mr. Killin's efforts, to a large extent, that the amicable adjustment is due. Organizer Harper worked in cooperation with him.

To Prevent Strikes

As the law now stands, the men employed in the munition factories cannot declare a strike or in any way quit work without first giving the company thirty days' notice of their intentions. If they go contarary to this provision every man out is liable to a fine of not less than $10 or more than $50 for each day or part of a day that he is on strike.

There is nothing in the law to prevent men from quitting work individually without serving notice on the firm. The Act becomes operative when not less than ten men concertedly and without notice abandon their places. All penalties are enforced by the authority prescribed in Part XV. of the Criminal Code, relating to summary convictions.

Any employer declaring a lock-out without first giving the men thirty days' notice is liable to a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 a day for each day or part of a day that such lock-out exists.

Men Opposed to the Act

Organized labor has always been more or less opposed to the Industrial Disputes Act, ever since it became a law in 1907. Their opposition was crystallized at the meeting of the Dominion Trades Congress in Toronto last fall, when the delegates by an almost unanimous vote, adopted a resolution asking Parliament to repeal the Act. The men claim that the advantage is all on the side of the employers as the provision for thirty days' notice gives them an opportunity to provide against a threatened strike by bringing in new men.

If any trouble arose in a munitions factory now the legal course is to leave the point in dispute to a board of arbitration, the men to select one and the employers another man. If these fail to agree on a third the appointment shall be made by the Minister of Labor.

The findings of such boards are not binding on either party but experience has shown that public opinion is generally strong enough to force the acceptance of the verdict.

PENSION FOR CHILDREN OF PTE. TAMBLIN

$12 PER MONTH PER CHILD FOR HIS THREE CHILDREN.

A pension has been awarded for the children of Pte. Albert W. Tamblin, who was killed on service Dec. 8, 1916. Previous to this his wife had passed away. The children have been in the care of relatives, one child in the city and two with an aunt near Haliburton. An application for a pension for the children was made and considered by the pension board, with the above result. The pension amount is at $432 per year, payable to the guardian of the children, Mrs. Agnes Tamblin, 6 Victoria Avenue, City. This will work out at about $12 per month per child and will continue to be paid until the children are of ages of 16 for a son and 17 for a daughter.

3653 of the Larger British Ships Are Available.

And Fair Amount of New Tonnage is Launched.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 15. —From Feb. 1 to March 10, according to the Board of Trade reports, the number of British ships of over 1,600 tons sunk was approximately 78, leaving 3,653 of the larger British ships available for overseas trade. This loss takes no account of replacements, and it should be remembered that a fair amount of tonnage is being launched. Every month during this period British ships came and went freely. There was no blockade and the Germans will not probably again have the equally good opportunity for carrying out their destructive plans because:

Firstly, a large number of those ships destroyed were old slow tramps;

Secondly, British naval authorities have been able to make a successful study of the latest German submarine campaign and the methods;

Thirdly, arming of merchant ships is proceeding apace;

Fourthly, anti-submarine devices are being daily perfected;

Lastly, a good number of trained submarine crews, including some of the most daring and skillful commanders, are being lost and cannot easily be replaced.

British losses are now in a rapidly diminishing ration, and the effect on imports even for Febraury, when the submarine campaign was at its height, has been small.

A PEACEFUL REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA

REACTIONARY PARTY HAS BEEN OVERTHROWN, LONDON SAYS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 15.—A successful revolution has taken place in Russia. The reactionary party has been overthrown.

BERLIN, March 15.—According to the Overseas News Agency, a peaceful revolution has been successfully brought about in Russia. The Agency says the Duma decided on Sunday not to accept the Imperial Ukase dissolving it and declared itself a provisional Government. It arrested all ministers and sent them to jail, declaring that the Ministerial Government no longer existed. Deputy Engelhard, Colonel of the Great General Staff, was appointed Commander of Petrograd. The prolamation by the Duma asserts that order is swiftly returning in the capital and that the Provisional Government has the support of the population and the army.

AN ESTIMABLE CITIZEN LOST TO MILLBROOK

LATE JOHN C. KELLS WAS THE SENIOR MEMBER OF KELLS, FOWLER & CO.

After a life of usefulness and devotion to the interest and welfare of the village of Millbrook, in which he had lived for forty-five years, Mr. John Christopher Kells died this morning, aged 62 years. Mr. Kells met with an automobile accident last August and while his injuries were not considered very serious at the time, his nerves were affected and he failed to rally, death being due to a collapse of the nervous system. He was a son of the late John Kells and was born in Lindsay in 1855.

Deceased was senior member of the firm of Kells, Fowler & Co., general merchants in Millbrook. For many years he had taken a forward movement in all matters pertaining to the welfare of Millbrook and surrounding district. He had served on the council for a number of years and had held the office of reeve with distinction for several terms, many improvements for the village being due to his initiative. He was a member of the J. B. Hall Lodge A. F. & A. M. and a past master of the lodge and a member of the Grand Lodge.

An Anglican in religion, the late Mr. Kells had been an active and ardent member of St. Thomas' Church where he had served as church warden.

He was universally esteemed and in his death Millbrook has lost one of its most distinguished citizens.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters, Miss Anna Kells at home and Mrs. Sims of Barrie, and one brother, Richard Kells, formerly a merchant in Peterborough, now residing in Toronto.

The funeral will be held from the family residence in Millbrook on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment at St. John's Cemetery, Cavan.

Work Not Satisfactory, Contractor For Snow Removal Fined $5

City Engineer Parsons placed a fine of $5 against Edward Ferguson, a snow plough contractor, for not getting out early with snow ploughs on the day of the heavy snow storm.

Ferguson appealed to the board of works last night to have the fine remitted. Street Commissioner Evans stated that this was not the only occasion that the contractor was late. Several times the commissioner had gone to Ferguson's home, to find out that "he did not know it was snowing." The people in the north ward section of the city were complaining. On the occasion which resulted in the fine, the centre section of the city had been gone over twice. Ferguson made only one trip over his district. The matter had been reported to the city engineer, who made the fine to wake Ferguson up and to do his duty.

It was decided to take no action, on a motion of Ald. Duncan and Smith.

SUDDEN CALL TO PORTER S. WHITE AT HIS HOME

WAS AT HIS PLACE OF BUSINESS ON GEORGE ST. YESTERDAY.

It was with great surprise as well as regret that the citizens heard this morning of the death of Mr. Porter S. White, the well-known George St. merchant. It was only yesterday that he was at the store and this morning on awaking he complained of not feeling well, and his condition gradually became worse, until the end came suddenly shortly after ten o'clock.

The deceased was born in Bethany about fifty-four years ago and was a son of the late Samuel White. He is survived by his wife and two children, Louise and Roy. His mother, one sister, Minnie, and four brothers, Joseph, John, Thomas, James, all of Bailieboro, survive him. He was a member of Murray St. Baptist congregation.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 511 Stewart St. on Saturday afternoon. Funeral service by Rev. J. R. Webb.

CARING FOR THE FATHERLESS.

THERE ARE AT PRESENT forty-five parentless children in the St. Vincent Orphanage, and they are well cared for in every way. The duty of providing for them has been assumed by a denomination, and not by the State. No aid is received from the city and none is asked for. Those in charge of this commendable charity depend entirely upon private contributions.

Saturday has been selected by the members of the Ladies' Aid of St. Peter's as Tag Day for the benefit of the orphanage. Shamrocks will be offered for sale on the streets and in every corner of the city. The man who buys one of the emblems that commemorates the nativity of one of the most illustrious religious workers the world has ever known can do so with the assurance that he is aiding one of the highest forms of benefaction.

THE MAYOR OF "OUR TOWN."

THE MAYOR OF "Our Town" had a letter in The Review yesterday referring in sarcastic vein to the action of five obdurate aldermen who, by hanging together in a conspiracy of old fogeyism, blocked the grant for municipal bathing beaches for which there was so popular and general a demand. By way of a parable, the writer of the letter tells of how the residents of an imaginary town overcame the scruples or obstinacy of a bunch of aldermen who had no use for bathing places. It is an invention worthy of a master of fiction, because the germ of an excellent idea is there.

The aldermen who thought bathing beaches were foolish fads, and that if the natives were disposed to regard cleanliness as a virtue they could bathe at home or in the horse trough, were required by law to serve as jurors at the inquest into the death of every victim of drowning. One such service was sufficient to work in them a change of heart.

The suggestion is worthy of serious consideration. The next time a boy loses his life in the Otonabee River let the five aldermen who denied that boy the measure of protection to which every citizen is entitled, be called as jurors. Let them view the remains of the unfortunate youth and witness the grief of the parents, and the chances are that they will repent in sackcloth and ashes and at the first opportunity undo the mischief they have wrought, their only excuse being their anxiety to shave another fraction off the tax rate.

Year after year a majority of the worldly wise members of Parliament, replete with biblical lore pertaining to the Mosaic age, but woefully lacking in a working knowledge of the sublime precepts of the Nazarene, vote to perpetuate capital punishment. If all who thus declare themselves were compelled to be eye-witnesses of one hanging, especially when the work is bungled and the victim dies in horrible contortions, that would suffice, rather than a world of argument, to convince them that on occasion the State, by an easy stretch of fancy supposed to be above wrong-doing, can be cruel and barbarous.

Tell it not in Gath, but there are still left magistrates and judges who sentence juveniles and adult offenders to the lash. Make it a part of the duty of these members of the judiciary to witness these floggings, to see for themselves the agony of the victim, and the brutality of the officials in charge, and the last will soon be heard of these relics of a bygone age.

When Abraham Lincoln was a boy he saw with his own eyes the horrors and inhumanities of the traffic in human slaves. He never forgot the lesson. For years he waited, but his opportunity came at last, and when it did he knocked the manacles from the wrists of over three million unfortunate children of A[illegible]a.

THE GAME AND THE CANDLE.

TORONTO IS THE CITY in which the school bank fad was born and cradled, and it is in that city where the system finds it warmest champions. It is in Toronto, too, where the most vigorous opponents of a banking plan diverted from its legitimate standing are located. The members of the Toronto school board are in favor of penny banks, but that is the same school board that has shown so much of a disposition to go contrary to the popular will, that the taxpayers found it necessary to break up their authority and modify their spirit of independence by calling upon the Legislature to reduce their term of service from two years to one.

It is a wise teacher who does not place himself at variance with the board that engages him. Of the 972 members of the teaching staff in the Toronto public schools, 73 per cent., when called upon for an expression of opinion, declare themselves in favor of the banks; 15 per cent. are opposed to them, while the balance are indifferent. These replies were sent in when the chief inspector asked the teachers to express opinions one way or the other. The chief significance of the figures lies in the demonstration that the majority of the teachers evidently thought it the part of wisdom not to run counter to the powers that be.

There are 60,389 pupils enrolled in the public schools of Toronto, and of these a trifle over 50 per cent. patronize the penny banks. During the past twelve months the total amount of deposits was $206,000, or an average of $5.27 per pupil. The total, when considered alone, looks formidable, but the record shows that it cost the ratepayers of Toronto $20,000 in taxes to collect this amount. This compilation is made by taking account of the time that principals and assistants devote to taking care of the money and making the entries. The records show that seventy days per week were devoted to this purpose, fourteen and one-half days to counting the money in the principal's office, fifteen and two-third days to posting the ledgers, and one day a week to carrying the deposits to the regular banks.

Take the case of Peterborough, in the event of penny banks being opened here, and assuming that the Toronto ratio would be maintained. Approximately 1,000 pupils would avail themselves of the opportunity to become bank depositors. Their yearly savings would amount to $5000, and the cost of collecting this would be ten per cent. The money of the ratepayers raised for a specific object would be diverted from the purpose for which it was originally intended, and as a business proposition the penny banks would prove a flat failure. Fads are objectionable enough in principle, but especially so when their cost comes as high as ten cents on the dollar. No bank could keep its doors open and do business on a basis of an outlay of ten cents on every dollar received at the teller's window.

An enterprising publicist in this city has attempted to secure an expression on the part of the teachers with regard to the proposed educational innovation. The teachers, whatever may be their sentiments, are likely to remain non-committal so long as the matter is in the hands of the board.

FOR THE WORKINGMAN'S BENEFIT.

THE WAGE-EARNERS of Ontario can no longer with justice complain of a lack of paternalism on the part of the Provincial Government. Three years ago the Workmen's Compensation Act was passed in the interests of labor. Peterborough has recently had a striking illustration of how the measure works out. Beneficial as the Act has proved, it is to be amended at the present session and its provisions made more liberal than ever.

As the law now stands, there is no allowance made from the fund to furnish medical attendance for the workman who is injured while on duty. When the law is amended, all the medical expenses of such victims will be paid out of the accident fund, and one of labor's most strenuous objections to the new law will thus be overcome.

All danger of escaping payment through technicalities has been removed by the insertion of a clause providing that when a workman meets with an accident or is killed while working temporarily in another province for a firm with headquarters in Ontario, the Act shall apply to all such cases.

As the law now stands, the widow of a workman killed while on duty receives a pension of 55 per cent. of his average monthly earnings and $5 a month is paid to each child under the age of 16 years. One of the proposed amendments will, in case of the death of the mother, increase the monthly allowance to the children to $10. It is better to take care of the family in their own home than in a poor house or orphanage.

When a child is an invalid or is incapable from any cause of earning its living, the alowance will not cease when it reaches the age of 16, but will be continued so long as it lives and the disability exists.

Best and most significant of it all, Attorney-General Lucas, who has the amended bill in his charge, announces that the decisions of the board will in all matters be based on the merits and justice of the case, and that no attention will be paid to strict legal precedents. Workmen and their families will not be kept out of their dues by any tricks on the part of members of the profession.

A short time ago The Review set up the claim that the Ontario Administration now in power had done more for the workingmen and for the masses of the people generally than any government or party that this country has ever known. Here is an additional proof to support that asertion, and it will be found on election day that the workingmen have not forgotten the ministers from whom they have received so much substantial recognition.

U.S. SCHOOLS AND SCHOOLMASTERS

In 1916 23,500,000 persons were attending schools of some kind in the United States. This estimate is made by the United States bureau of education.

In his last annual report the commissioner of education says: "This means that approximately 24 per cent. of the inhabitants of the United States are attending school, as compared with 19 per cent. in Great Britain, 17 per cent. in France, 20 per cent. in Germany and a little over 4 per cent. in Russia." The bureau remarks, however, that the result is much less favorable to the United States if daily attendance, rather than enrollment, is taken as the basis for comparison, since some of the other nations have better attendance and a longer school term than the United States.

Of the 706,000 teachers in the United States during the last year 169,000 were men and 537,000 women. The number of man teachers has increased very slightly since 1900; the number of woman teachers has almost doubled. In public elementary schools the number of man teachers has decreased 20 per cent. since 1900, while the number of woman teachers has increased 8 per cent. In 1900 teaching positions in public high schols were evenly divided between men and women. At the present time the women outnumber the men by 8,000.

The average annual salary of all teachers is $525. The figure is highest in the east and north Atlantic states, with $699 and $6[illegible] respectively, and lowest in the south Atlantic states—$329. It varies from $234 in Mississippi to $871 in California and $941 in New York.

In discussing educational movements the report reveals that most of the recent contributions are in the domain of practice rather than in theory. The report declares: "There seems to be a clearer vision as to the essential aims of education. Educational surveys have multiplied to a remarkable extent; almost no field has been left untouched, and the latest findings in scientific measurements are being utilized in survey work. The health movement in education has experienced a notable stimulus from the preparedness situation and the demand for military training. Rural education has more and more enlisted the interest of the general public outside of professional circles and has clearly become a problem of administration and financing, rather than promotion. Vocational education is advancing slowly but steadily in a way that seems to afford the best possibly guaranty of permanence."

"I love you, dear, when you are a good girl," replied her father.

"But, papa," said Edna, "I love you even when you ain't no good."

"Are all these beautiful flowers for me?" asked the teacher when small Jimmy presented her with a bouquet.

"Oh, yes," said Jimmy, "unless the girl I swiped 'em from sees 'em."

Wit and Wisdom

The manager of Kidem's great menagerie had induced all the crowd to become patrons, except one individual, who stood gazing up at him with mouth agape.

"Right in this way, sir, if you wish to see some deerstalking," shouted the animal king.

"N fear, lad," came the reply. "I was in yesterday and none of 'em said a bloomin' word."

"Does your wife pay you any compliments?" asked Frederick Jimson of his friend Benderley.

"Never," replied Benderley.

"Well, mine does; she falters me."

"Often?"

"Oh, yes, frequently—particularly in winter," replied Frederick.

"Why does she flatter you so much in the winter?"

"Whenever the coal fire needs replenishing she points to the fireplace and says, 'Frederick, the grate.'"

"The worst of all isms," said the lecturer, "is pugilism."

"Pardon me, my friend," rejoined a man who had just entered the hall on crutches, "but I know a worse one than that."

"What is it, sir?" queried the lecturer.

"Rheumatism," answered the other.

"Which side of the house do you think the baby resembles most?" proudly asked young Popjoy.

"Well, um-m," answered Smith, smiling weakly and trying to say the right thing. "I can't see that he looks so very much like the side of a house."

Willie Only Resting

He had yelled steadily for twenty minutes. Then he stopped, and all was quiet.

"I am glad to see you have stopped crying, Willie," said his mother.

"I ain't stopped," exclaimed Willie, indignantly. "I was only restin'! Yaaaaaaaa."

Mildred, who had a small friend to spend the afternoon with her, found that the care of her little brother interfered sadly with their plans.

John showed a tiresome persistence in joining in their games. Meeting with little encouragement at last, somewhat wistfully:

"Milly, can't I play something."

"Yes, John," she replied firmly. "Go into the back room and play you're dead for half an hour."

HER NEW HUSBAND

An Old Man Marries Young Girl, That He May Teach Her Wisdom

BY FLORENCE E. CAMPBELL.

Mam'zelle Lisette Guitard was weeping in the hyacinth beds, and Monsieur Gaston Drouet wept, too, unreservedly. But then he was only twenty-two—four years older than Mam'zelle; nevertheless. Outside the night air was fragrant with the odor of hyacinths and jonquils, and the moon shone as brightly as it always shines in New Orleans in spring—that is to say, twice as brightly as anywhere else.

Ma'mzelle had stolen out of the house in which her father and mother and the two uncles and the maiden aunt and Sister 'Toinette and Brother Robert and the four bridesmaids and the ushers were busily rehearsing the part that they were to play at Ma'mzelle's wedding on the morrow. Monsieur Thiboult was fifty-seven and enormously rich, and it was to be a fashionable affair. Ma'mzelle did not love Monsieur Thiboult, but her parents did.

"Poor Gaston!" she murmured, laying her warm hand upon his icily cold one. "Tonight we must say goodby for ever."

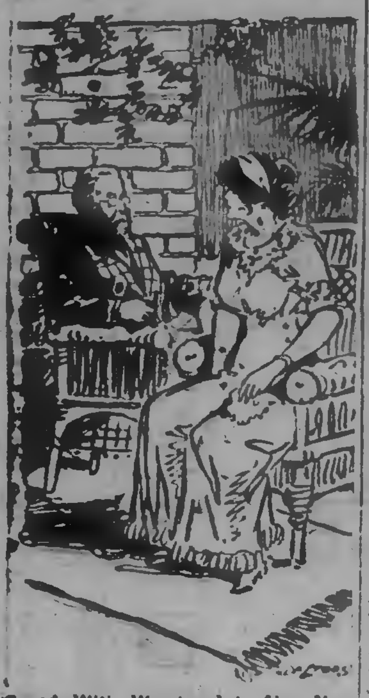
And, being only eighteen, she could not help but feel a thrill of romance in the sadness of the separation.

"Angel! Beloved! Adored one!" exclaimed the young man. "I cannot let you go. Come with me now and let us be married somewhere. You do not love him, that old pig of a Thiboult."

"No, poor Gaston. I love you only," answered the little bride-to-be. "But consider, Monsieur Thiboult will give me much money and I shall make my parents rich; poor parents, who have slaved so hard for me."

"You shall not marry the pig!" shouted Gaston. "I will kill him first!"

"Hush, Gaston!" exclaimed the girl. "He will hear you. He prowls about his garden by night—yes, would you believe me, he is like a young man since he loves me, and he composes songs to the moon—as you do. He told me so himself."



Gazed With Wonder Into Her New Husband's Face.

"Kiss me, Lisette!" pleaded Gaston, drawing very close to her. "When you have kissed me you will no longer resist my entreaty. Then we will go—"

"No! No!" cried the girl, struggling out of his arms. "It is wrong. I am pledged to him. Let me go!"

"Lisette!" cried Uncle Henri from the door. "Where are you, little one! Come! We are to have cakes and wine."

For an instant Gaston hesitated; then, with a despairing sigh, he plunged through the hyacinths and disappeared into the darkness. Uncle Henri came down the path.

"Pest! Cats!" he exclaimed, throwing a clod of earth in the direction of the retreating Gaston. "Why do you roam among the flowers so late, little niece? Ah, it is the inspiration of Monsieur Thiboult! It is love for him! Never was any marriage so happy!"

Ma'mzelle Lisette cast a glance of contempt at her uncle, but he did not see it, because it was quite dark under the eaves of the cottage. He followed her indoor.

The wedding was over and Monsieur and Madam Thiboult were seated comfortably upon the porch of their home. It was only a few steps to the cottage next door, occupied by the bride's parents, for Monsieur Thiboult had simply taken his bride home with him. That was his arrangement, and his will was law, for it was the will of a semi-millionaire. Madam gazed with wonder into her new husband's face. It was indeed wonderful to think that two hours before she had been Mademoiselle Guitard while now she was Madame Thiboult. Her silly little head was swimming with pride and astonishment, and the passion for poor Gaston was already buried, although deep down beneath the surface of things there was a little ache—if she had let herself perceive it.

But monsieur was very much older than she. She had never before noticed how red his face was, how white his beard and hair. He was an old, old man, and she wished he were young like Gaston. And suddenly the sense of her inexperience of life, the tragedy of Gaston's sorrow, and her own little fleeting happiness which had been accomplished at such a cost to him overwhelmed her. She began crying, and she looked at her husband timidly, as though she had done something that she ought not to have done.

Monsieur Thiboult had been smoking in the darkness. Now he laid his cigar aside and Lisette saw the red rim of it circle and descend and rest upon the rail of the porch. Her husband took her little hands in his and spoke to her.

"Do you love Gaston very much, Lisette?" he asked.

She started and then began sobbing convulsively. He knew then! He knew! How wicked she had been.

"Yes, I knew for a long time, my dear," said Monsieur Thiboult. "It must be quite two months since you have loved Gaston. And before that it was Leon Brevett and before that Charles Bourget; and before that—who was it before that?"

Lisette was shaking with fear. He had known all the time, then, of these little childish love affairs!

"My dear little Lizette," said monsieur, caressing her cold hands, "listen to what I am going to tell you. I have never thought that you loved me—an old man like me, old enough to be your father's father. But I love you, just as though you might be my own daughter, and I married you because I knew that if I did not you would some day run away with Gaston or some other foolish young fellow and live a hard life and taste the realities of existence. And you are not made for hardship, my little Lisette. So I considered, and I thought to myself: 'If only she were a few years older and wise and knew the world, and had plenty of money, so that when the real love came she would know him and go to meet him.' Then I said to myself: 'How can you help her, you old fellow?' And the answer came to me: 'Marry her yourself, but let her be like your daughter to you, so that when you are dead she can inherit all your money and marry some young fellow whom she really loves.'" He paused. "My dear," he said, "I shall not live very long. The doctor told me that only last month. Perhaps one year, perhaps two—not more than three. And then, if you still love Gaston, you will go to him and make him happy, and your little head will be filled with wisdom instead of foolishness."

He pressed her to him and kissed her cheeks reverently. "Good-night, little daughter," said Monsieur Thiboult.

WORLD LANGUAGE OF SIGNS

Sir William Ramsay Has Plan to Use Pictorial Characters Based on Chinese.

To make possible the exchange of ideas among all peoples of the world Sir William Ramsay, the English scientist, has begun to develop a pictorial sign language, based somewhat upon Chinese, which he hopes will eventually spread among all races.

The Chinese character to express "man," for instance, is made with two converging lines that represent simply his legs, looking much like the legs of the crude man that the schoolboy draws.

Sir William's character goes further and adds a vertical straight line above the converging lines to represent the body.

"The first thing that one thinks of," he argues, "is existence expressed in the verb 'to be.'"

So he has selected the arithmetical equality mark to denote existence. All things relating to one's state and condition, he said, can be expressed by these two parallel lines.

For time which stretches away, or action that is constant, he uses a dash. Instantaneous time or action he represents with a dot. Thus a dot placed squarely between and in the middle of two lines of the equality mark denotes the immediate present, or "I am." Similarly the dot, when placed at the left and between the two lines denotes past, or "I was," and when placed to the right indicates the future tense, or "I am to be."

To denote a woman Sir William draws a line closing the diverging ends of the legs of the sign for man. On the theory that "I" is the most important thing in the world to any man, Sir William utilizes the straight vertical line that represents the body of his man figure to depict the word.

THE TONIC THAT BRINGS HEALTH

"Fruit-a-tives" Builds Up The Whole System

Those who take "Fruit-a-tives" for the first time, are often astonished at the way it builds them up and makes them feel better all over. They may be taking "Fruit-a-tives" for some specific disease, as Constipation, Indigestion, Chronic Headaches or Neuralgia, Kidney or Bladder Trouble, Rheumatism or Pain in the Back. And they find when "Fruit-a-tives" has cured the disease, that they feel better and stronger in every way. This is due to the wonderful tonic properties of these famous tablets, made from fruit juices.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

What He Was After.

It was a very hot day and the fat drummer who wanted the 12:20 train got through the gate at just 12:21. The ensuing handicap was watched with absorbing interest both from the train and the station platform. At its conclusion the breathless and perspiring knight of the road wearily took the back trail and a vacant faced "red-cap" came to relieve him of his grip.

"Mister," he inquired, "was you tryin' to ketch that Pennsylvania train?"

"No, my son," replied the patient man. "No; I was merely chasing it out of the yard."—Saturday Evening Post.

HOW SAILORS SALUTE

One of the first things taught to the Naval recruit before he goes on board his ship is that he must "salute the quarterdeck" when passing onto it when on board his ship at any time whether from a boat or direct from the shore. This is an ancient custom and is carried out by every officer and man whether he be the commander-in-chief in his own flagship or the ship's cook's youngest boy assistant.

The Naval salute is different to that used in the army, the upper arm is not raised at right angles to the body, but to an angle of about 45 degrees from the perpendicular, while the palm of the hand instead of being turned to the front is kept turned towards the face, the forefinger nearly touching the peak of the cap in line with the eyebrow. As in the army the "off hand" is used for saluting. The "able-bodied seaman" is equivalent in rank to the private in the army, and is expected to salute all officers, naval and military, in uniform, the same remarks apply to the sister service and all soldiers should salute naval officers when in uniform.

BEAUTIFUL SPIES

Russia's Successful Use of Fascinating Women Spies

In the secret service of every country, beautiful, fascinating women are largely employed, but no Government makes such successful use of them as that of Russia. Our ally, says Tit Bits, chooses her spies from the fairest of Russia's daughters, and, without exaggeration, it may be said that the charm and beauty of these accomplished Russian women is almost hypnotic, even more so, perhaps, than that of the fair ladies of France. One of the most successful of Russian women spies is the beautiful widow of an army officer. She has travelled all over the world for the Russian Government, and once, when in Japan, nearly lost her life by being given poisoned sweets.

Another beautiful Russian spy has masqueraded for years as a dancing girl on the Russian border, although in reality she is of noble birth. Her beauty and seeming simplicity have won the heart of many officers in the Greek, Turkish and Bulgarian armies, and many of these affairs have resulted in valuable information for the Russian Government. But the dainty, careless dancing girl is never suspected.

A Russian countess who is in Russia's secret service has in the course of her career successfully masqueraded as an American, learning the tricks of language and mannerisms perfectly. When in Japan, too, she adopted that country's costumes and language without arousing suspicion. She mingled with Japanese officials and was received in the best society. A Japanese statesman, from whom she got much information, implored her to marry him, but as soon as the Russo-Japanese War was over she took herself to another land.

HOME LIGHTING

Brilliant Lamps Do Not Necessarily Give Good Light.

HARDSHIPS OF EYE STRAIN.

Try to Illumine Your Room to Meet the Use You Put It To—Strive For a Replica of Sunlight From Overhead and Sidewise.

One American society consists of more than 1,000 members interested in lighting from various standpoints—engineering, economic, hygienic, aesthetic. These men recognize the importance of spreading knowledge about the use and misuse of light, because ignorance is apt to injure one of man's most precious possessions—good eyesight. And in order to preserve eyesight for the future it has brought together expert hints which may well be considered by the average man and woman.

Do not think that because a lamp looks glaring and brilliant it is giving good light. It may be merely giving you too much light in the wrong place. On the other hand, a well shaded table lamp may appear to be dim because it is well shaded and yet be giving first class light for working. See that your light is steady. If the light flickers, your eyes endeavor to adjust themselves to the wavering motion, with the result that the flickering light keeps the eye seesawing, and the muscles that govern the eye get tired, reacting on the nerves and causing discomfort as well as pain.

Beware of reflections that come from polished glass, metal, bright, varnished surfaces or even from glossy white paper on which a too powerful light is shining. From time immemorial mankind has received light mostly from the sky and has become accustomed to it. For this reason it is best to have artificial light come from above the head and somewhat sidewise, as it does from the sun.

It is a mistake to use a bright light against a dark background, and, while an artistic fixture is well enough as a decoration, yet lamps which in themselves are good and suitable will not be satisfactory from a hygienic standpoint unless the fixtures are in the right position. In planning the illumination of a room it is only common sense to determine just what you are going to use that room for and then to arrange the lighting. By doing this it should be possible for people of middle age to add years of excellent eyesight which otherwise would soon diminish. Where children of various ages are in a family the matter of artificial light is of great importance. The general health of a growing boy or girl may be seriously affected by careless lighting, especially in rooms where children read or study their lessons.

In recent years boards of health all over the country have become so much impressed with the importance of proper lighting, even natural sunlight, that laws are enforced strictly as to the placing of windows in public schools.

"I don't know; I never was."

"Well, you haven't got any edge on me."

"Why not?"

"I never fell out of a balloon."

Still Better.

"How are you feeling?"

"I am able to go to my meals."

"That's distressing."

"Why so?"

"Can't you arrange to have them brought to you?"

Getting Ready.

"What are you going to make of your son?"

"A pugilist."

"Is he taking boxing lessons?"

"No; he is practicing on the typewriter."

Lots of the Sort.

"Are you a disciple of beauty?"

"You bet I am."

"What special form does your lifting take?"

"A beautiful curve and a swift hit."

Very Useful.

"I believe no use has been discovered for the appendix."

"Oh, yes, there has."

"What is it?"

"To give the surgeons exercise."

COOKING VEGETABLES.

Be Sparing In the Use of Water and Adding Seasoning.

In the cooking of vegetables there are a few things to remember—first to retain all the mineral matter and nutriment possible, to soften the cellulose and to develop the flavor, making them more palatable.

Spinach cooked properly should be well washed and cooked without the addition of water or very little. This vegetable, being rich in iron, which is soluble in water, by being cooked in a large amount of water may be rendered nearly valueless as a food. This is true of green peas and beans or, in fact, any of the delicately flavored vegetables. The seasoning is another important item. The flavoring never should be disguised by seasoning. Usually butter, pepper and salt, not too much, are best because the plainest.

To accomplish these results one may use several methods—cook the vegetable whole or in large pieces, cook with the skin on when possible, cook in as small an amount of water as possible without burning, serve the water in a sauce with the vegetable whenever possible, and season after the vegetable has started cooking, so that the salt does not draw out the flavor.

FOR BEGINNERS.

Hints to Help Mrs. Newlywed Over Hard Spots.

In making soups always put the meat in cold water. Corned beef and ham should be put in boiling water. A tablespoonful of vinegar put in the pot will make tough meat or chicken tender.

To roast beef allow twenty minutes to a pound.

All vegetables should be put in boiling water.

Cut hot brown bread by putting a string around the loaf the right thickness for a slice and draw quite tight.

Anything mixed with water requires a hotter oven than anything mixed with milk.

A dish of cold water put in the oven will prevent cake from burning.

In making tea allow one teaspoonful for each person and one for the pot. Allow one tablespoonful of coffee for each person and one for pot.

Unshorn Father Thames.

The Thames, on which pleasure traffic decreased last year, had a rather unusual summer season. The uppermost reaches of the river had many visitors, but above Lechlade, where the stream is only navigable for very small craft, boating was a wild kind of adventure owing to the growth of water weeds. Stretches of clear water alternate with patches of weed so thick that the dabchicks can run across the river, but are unable to dive. As a rule the weeds are cut every year, but it is a task requiring six or more strong men, and in places where the river is used only by little pleasure boats the cuttings has not been done since the war.—London Chronicle.

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:

10	per cent	on application;
30	"	16th April, 1917;
30	"	15th May, 1917;
26	"	15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent. on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

Miss Winnifred McKenzie spent Monday in Peterborough.

Mrs. Gordon Northey spent a couple of days this week in Peterborough.

Mr. Robt. Duff spent Tuesday at the Indian village on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Johnson, of Peterborough, spent a couple of days in the village.

Mr. James Grahame spent the week-end in Peterborough visiting friends.

Messrs. W. Curtain, John Blancho, Dick Grahame and Hurley Blancho, who have been spending the past two weeks in the village visiting friends, returned to their homes in Sanford, Man., on Monday.

The girls' auxiliary of St. John's Church held their annual meeting on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. O. A. Sawyer.

The weekly meeting of the Lakefield choral class was held in St. John's S. S. hall Monday evening.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held in the basement of the Methodist church Monday evening. The Fairview League conducted the meeting, which opened with the usual hymn, prayer, and Bible lessons. The topic, "Our Printing Press and Evangelistic Work in China," was presented by Mr. Harold. The following program was then rendered:

Presentation to Mr. David Weir

As Mr. Weir has been a resident at Lakehurst and is moving to Omemee the members of the Lakehurst Methodist Sunday School presented him with a family Bible. It was presented to him on Sunday evening after service at the Methodist Church on March 4. Mr. Wilbert Harrison and Pte. Gordon Harrison sang a duet and the pastor made a suitable speech. The following address was read to Mr. Weir, who made a suitable reply:—

Dear Mr. Weir: We, the members of the Lakehurst Methodist Sunday School, embrace this opportunity of expressing to you at least in some degree, our appreciation of your services which you have rendered so efficiently as teacher in our School. You may have felt at times that your efforts were of little or no avail. But we wish to assure you that whatever you have taught has been a benefit and a help to inspire to a higher and nobler life. And we trust that the seed so carefully sown will mature and bring forth fruit.

To your scholars you have not only been a careful, painstaking teacher, but a wise counsellor and faithful friend. But we have been and are deeply impressed with the influence of your Christian character and we rejoice in the fact of that you are a Christian gentleman.

We have found you ever ready to assist in any worthy cause, and as we look back over the years you have been in our midst we have pleasant recollections of your association with us both as a worker in the Master's service and as a worthy citizen in all the walks of life

The teachers all and scholars,
Are filled with deep regret,
By your departure from us,
For we will not forget

That you were long our teacher,
In this our Sunday School,
And that for many seasons,
It was your faithful rule,

To lead us every Sunday,
Both prayerfully and well,
As many of us remember,
And all of us can tell.

No, not for one year only,
Nor yet for two or three,
But nigh a quarter of a century,
You've proved your loyalty.

And like a Christian soldier,
With "Jesus" on your shield,
Right manfully you've battled
And held for Him the field.

And if you grew discouraged,
And if you felt your work
Was overlooked nor heeded
And felt inclined to shirk.

Yet still you had the knowledge
Your task was but the Lord's,
And that His approbation
Exceeded earth's rewards.

As members of the school we have great pleasure in presenting you with this Bible, which we hope you will accept in the spirit in which it is given, as a slight token of our appreciation of services you have rendered. And as your family and you sever your connection with us, be assured you carry with you our best wishes for the propsperity, health and happiness of you all, and in making new friends in your future sphere of life, we trust that you will not forget the old. We pray that God may ever proper you and yours through the years to come, and that you may be blessed in all the work you undertake for the advancement of Christ's kingdom.

(Signed on behalf of the Sunday School)—F. Johnson, Pastor; Joseph Harison, Superintendent; Gertrude Shearer, Secretary.

Duet—Messrs. Bell and Gilbert.
Recitation—Miss Beatrice Deck
Duet—Misses Mae and Effie Bell.
Recitation—"Over the Hill to the Poor House"—Miss Ella Heard.
Recitation—"My Dream"—Mrs. McKee.
League Benediction.

The remaining part of the evening was spent in contests, after which refreshments were served. The gathering dispersed after the singing of the National Anthem and the benediction by Rev. Mr. McKee.

TAKE GERMANS BY SURPRISE

ATTACKS OF ENEMY ON FRENCH POSTS UNSUCCESSFUL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 15—East of the Oise a surprise attack which we made in the region of Moulin Sous-Toutvent enabled us to take prisoners, says today's official statement. Several German attacks on small French posts in the vicinity of Vingeo, west of Navarin farm and in the Argonne were broken up by our fire.

In the region of Moisons de Champagne there was rather spirited artillery fighting without infantry actions. There is nothing to report elsewhere.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salon Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

These powders are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

YOU CAN'T SEE IN THE DARK

And you can't get along without your glasses if you wear them steadily. If you break them you find yourself almost as badly off as if you were trying to see in the dark. You need not be long that way if you come to Fowler's optical establishment. Repairs are done very quickly and scientifically and your glasses made good as new.

MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT MOVEMENTS

(Special Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, March 14.—Pte. A. Richards was a guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Richards, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W Bray were visitors to Bethany on Sunday.

Rev. W. H. Higgs attended the Alliance Convention at Toronto last week.

Mr. G. Twigg and daughter of Bethany were in town on Tuesday.

Miss L. Luxon left for Port Hope on Monday to attend high school.

Mr. J. H. Wilson, auctioneer, of Port Hope, was in town on Monday.

Mr. N. Blewett and son Jack of Regina, Alta., and Mrs. A. H. Mellville, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Duncan.

Mr. George McDonald of Manvers was in town on Friday.

Mr. J. H. Walker of Port Hope was in town this week.

Bandsman W. Harkness has returned from England and is staying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Harkness, for a few days.

Died—At his home in Manvers, on March 9, 1917, Alexander Stevenson, aged 71 years. The funeral took place to Pontypool Cemetery on Sunday, March 11.

Dr. Lee attended the Presbytery meeting at Peterborough on Tuesday.

The song service held in the Methodist Church Sunday evening was much enjoyed by all present. The pastor preached an eloquent sermon from the subject Things We should Hold Fast, and a musical program was rendered by the choir.

Dr. Lee will preach from the following subjects next Sunday in Grace Church: 10.30, The Shield of Faith, 7 p.m., Finishing the Pillars; at Garden Hill, 2.30, The Breastplate of Righteousness.

Died—At Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on Wednesday, March 7, 1917, Benjamin McMahon, son of the late George McMahon, of Manvers. Deceased was born in Manvers 59 years ago. About 12 years ago he was united in marriage to Miss Annie Bruce of Hope, who predeceased her husband about three years. He was a member of the Anglican Church, a splendid good-natured gentleman. The funeral to St. Paul's Cemetery, Cavan, on Friday, was largely attended, Rev. Canon Allen conducting the services at the Queen's Hotel and at the grave. Those left to mourn his loss are four brothers: George and Jeffrey, of Michigan, James Albert of Virginia, and Arthur of Cavan, one sister Miss McMahon of Brockville. The pallbearers were Messrs. T. and L. Bristow, H. and F. McMahon, Wm. Armstrong and Wm. Gray.

In St. Thomas' Church on Friday, March 16, at 4.30, Rev. Canon Cornish of Peterborough will preach the special Lenten sermon. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Thomas Church will take place at the home of Mrs. A. G. F. Westmacott on Monday at 8 o'clock. It is hoped every member will be present.

Those who availed themselves of the oportunity to hear Rev. Byron Stauffer give his entertaining lecture The Funny Pennsylvania Dutchman in the Methodist Church, Millbrook, on Monday evening, also had the pleasure of hearing Mr. F. Whitehouse of Peterborough, on the violin and excellent vocal solos by Miss Ella Elson of Cavan. Rev. Wm Higgs, the pastor, was chairman. The program commenced with the singing of a hymn, after which Rev W. P. Wickett led in prayer. Mr Whitehouse then played that beautiful Chant Du Soir, by Bye, and Salbrella, by Papine. He also gave, by request, The Bagpipes, and a hymn with variations. Mrs. W. C. Allen played the accompaniments with her usual ability. Miss S. Hetherington accompanied Miss Elson and the choir. For upwards of two hours Rev. Mr. Stauffer held the audience in rapture. The evening was pleasing and profitable.

The third annual meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary was held on Thursday, March 8, at the home of the president, Mrs. Westmacott. Fifteen members and one visitor were present. After the devotional exercises, the president, secretary, treasurer, pledge-treasurer, and secretary-treasurer of the Babies' Branch gave their reports, which were very satisfactory. The delegates to the annual Toronto meeting were appointed and the officers for the new year elected. Miss MacNamara took a short review of the missionary readings and read an interesting missionary story. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Westmacott for her kindness during the year. Mrs. Whyte made a few remarks and the closing hymn was sung, after which refreshments were served.

Next Monday evening the Epworth League is uniting with the Sunday School in a service that ought to be of special interest. Miss Burnham and Miss Hatherly will give reports of the best parts of the Provincial Sunday School Convention, held at Smith's Falls. Let every member make an effort to be present.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes Every Man and Woman Adopts This Splendid Morning Habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living, for every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile, toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweeting and freshening effect upon the system.

WARD FIVE ASSOCIATION WAIT ON BOARD OF WORKS

Want Remedy for the Surface Water at Cricket Place.

The Ashburnham Ratepayers' Association, represented by Mr. H. Gainey, appeared at the Board of Works meeting last night and asked that some remedy be devised to get rid of the surface water at Driscoll Terrace and Cricket Place. A catch basin was suggested. After considerable discussion over the difficulties attending, the subject was referred to the city engineer and chairman, with power to act.

City Solicitor Gordon submitted an agreement between the Catholic diocese of Peterborough and the city regarding the right of way on Rubidge Street from McDonnel to London. The agreement, which was approved of, gives the use of the right of way to the St. Vincent's Orphanage for $1 per year, with the understanding that either party can terminate it on giving three months' notice.

Reeve Anderson of Otonabee, chairman of the County property committee, will be notified of the date of the next meeting of the board.

Mr S. Lucas, of Los Angeles, Cal., who wrote the city regarding bridge engineering and offering his services will be informed that his application is on file.

The Bell Telephone Co. wished to erect three poles on the south side of King St., between George and Aylmer Streets, and the city engineer had approved of their application. The application was granted (one alderman said with regret) as the poles have been up some time.

J. Minogue, of Driscoll Terrace, complained that his sewer was so near the surface that it had frozen up. The city engineer will report.

City Engineer Parsons recommended to the board that any castings required for street work this year be got as needed and the work divided among the different firms. This was agreed to.

The township of Otonabee will be written to in reference to the repairs on the boundary road near Downer's Corners.

The tree planting report prepared by City Engineer Parsons will be dealt with at the next meeting.

The street department wanted a new truck and the board ordered that the old hook and ladder wagon, now in storage, be cut down and made suitable for the work department. This truck is in good shape and will fill the needs for many years.

Mr. G. L. Hay wrote the board of works some time ago in reference to the sewer service to his house at the corner of Hunter and Roger Streets. He claimed that it was too high at the street line and prevented him from connecting standing tubs in his basement. The city engineer was instructed to find out who was at fault providing that Mr. Hay would pay the cost if it was found the connection was all right.

Mr. Hay replied that he would like to have a sewer connection from Rogers Street if the city was found at fault and would agree to pay the expense if it was found that he was mistaken.

The city engineer was instructed by the board of work to find out who was wrong and if the city was at fault to lower the sewer to the house line on Hunter Street.

Contract For Pipe Awarded

Tenders for cement and sewer pipe were opened at the board of works meeting last night and the contract for the pipe was awarded to T. Taylor & Son at 67 1-2 discount of list for 4 to 12 inch pipe and 65 per cent of list for 15 to 18 inch pipe. There were no other tenders for pipe submitted.

Last year the discount allowed was 70 per cent., but this year's list price has advanced 30 per cent., so that the price is considerably higher.

The firm would not submit prices for a term longer than Jan. 1, 1918. The tender called for the year ending March 15, 1918. The board decided to call for tenders for cement up to Jan. 1, 1918.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

The Property Committee will meet tonight to interview applicants for the position of sanitary inspector.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Would Fine the Garbage Collector

NO COLLECTIONS FROM CORNER OF RUBIDGE AND CHARLOTTE.

Mr. H. Dearle, who lives at the corner of Rubidge and Charlotte Sts., complained to the mayor and aldermen, by letter, that the garbage collector has passed the collections of both garbage and ashes since the latter part of February.

The property committee will investigat. Ald. Duncan suggested that a "fine" system would be a good idea to work on the garbage collector.

THE SMALL INVESTOR AND THE War Loan

The man with $100 has the same opportunity as the man with $1,000,000.

He can help his country to the extent of his ability.

He can have a share in winning the war.

He can invest that $100 in precisely the same security, at the same rate of interest, as the Bank or the Insurance Company or the Trust Company or the man with a million.

As in England, so in Canada, the small investor is appealed to help—now—in this loan.

We look after the small investment as cheerfully, without charge, as we do the large.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Business was firm on the market this week. The supply of hay and straw was about equal to the demand, and the farmers with wood had little difficulty in disposing of their loads.

Little if any cattle are being shipped owing to the unsteadiness of the outside markets, and the scarcity of good butcher stuff in this district. Hogs are quoted at $14.75 for delivery this week.

Eggs are falling in price every day and from all over the province reports come that the hens are real busy and the gathering of eggs heavy.

Farmers having horses for sale don't want to forget the opening of the Horse Fair on March 28. It is expected that about fifty buyers will be at the Market Square ready to buy any age or breed of horse.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, March 14.—Toronto's horse trade was moderately active, with a well-sustained demand for horses for the West, and with the Ontario trade continuing to open up. The event which is occupying most attention on the part of horsemen is the sale of Clydes and Percherons, which is scheduled for tomorrow at the Union Stock Yards Horse Exchange. Mr. Harland Smith states that this annual event promises to eclipse all previous records this year. About 80 per cent. of the 125 horses sold at the Union Yards last week were disposed of at private sales. Prices ran between $127 to $200 for blocky horses of 1,300 to 1,550 pounds. All of these were fresh from the country. Dealers are finding it very difficult to buy in the country at prices which enable them to sell at prevailing prices in Toronto. Prospects for trade in the immediate future are good, but no advance in prices is looked for. One handsome chestnut, an express horse weighing 1,350 lbs., sold at $200, and a bay horse of 1,450 lbs. brought $210. A number of good pairs of mares sold at $400, and a bunch of ten good mares brought $187.50.

Some people acquire by experience, and others won't even acquire the experience.

It takes a lot of auto suggestion to make us think we like it when we are working hard and other people are reaping the benefit.

Importuning.

The song of Simple Simon
Is of a coming
Who thought but for the asking
To get a hunk of pie.
It may sound rather silly,
But how is one to say
Without polite requesting
What's his to take away?

It takes so little effort,
It doesn't cost a sou.
If something's very lovely
To ask if it's for you.
Of course you may not get it
Right off, without delay,
Presented on a platter,
And then, again, you may.

But just take this for granted,
A gentle tip from me—
That few things worth the having
Come to you C. O. D.
But if you ask a favor,
One you may not deserve,
The person asked may grant it
And say, "I like your nerve."

True merit oft may languish
While gall takes off the prize,
Goes packing home the favor
Before it's very eyes.
So do like Simple Simon,
For, though the man may frown
And say his pies cost money,
He can but turn you down.

THE COSTLIEST FOOD

Despite the record price of meats, vegetables are much more expensive in the long run, according to Prof. Howard R. Smith.

"Potatoes at 85 cents a peck, for instance," said the speaker. "Potatoes are 85 per cent water, cabbages at 1½ cents a pound and cabbages are 90 per cent. water. How high, then, are the prices you are paying for the dry substance of potatoes and cabbages! The water is much less in meat, and the fat value of meat is higher than the starch value of potatoes."

Conditions that brought about high meat prices were abnormal in many ways, Prof. Smith said. The western plains, he explained, where as late as 1900 great herds of cattle and sheep roamed and fed themselves for practically nothing, today have ben usurped by settlers raising wheat. The European war, too, had something to do with the rise in prices, and the foot and mouth disease played its part.

Prof. Smith says that he believes the high prices of live stock would stimulate production in all parts of the country as never before.

If you are suffering from constipation or sick headache, try Dr. Norvall's stomach and tonic tablets. Be sure you get the genuine, as they are guaranteed and should they fail to give you relief, return the bottle to your dealer and he will refund your money.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

OFFERS CUP FOR COMPETITION

Mr. J. McKelvie, the well-known curler of Norwood, has presented the Union Bank trophy, which he won, for a challenge competition between the Lakefield, Peterborough, Keene, Hastings and Norwood clubs. The first contest will be held here next Tuesday, and when the winner is decided the delegates will decide on rules for a challenge series similar to those governing the Carew Cup at Lindsay.

Munition Workers' Diseases.

The high pressure under which the production of munitions has had to be performed has brought with it destructive maladies. These are particularly noticeable in connection with the manufacture of high explosives. Thus, in handling trinitrotoluol after a prolonged period one becomes drowsy, suffers from frontal headache, loss of appetite, and may even become afflicted with a distinctive eczema. Unless the operative takes a rest in time jaundice may supervene, with decided danger to life. In a few instances death has been directly traced to the handling of the explosive.

Tetryl throws off a slight dust, which, unless timely precautions are taken, leads to troublesome eczema. Another medium inimical to health is the varnish with which the wings and bodies of aeroplanes are treated. Tetra-chlorethane enters largely into the preparation of this varnish, and this throws off a noxious vapor which produces drowsiness and loss of appetite, and if work is persisted in ultimately jaundice, liver complications, and coma. In this case an alternative varnish has been discovered which is free from the evil constituents; but it has not come into general use for the simple reason that there are insufficient supplies of the necessary ingredients to meet demands.

Hoping for the Best.

That building activities at Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, will probably be recommended on a large scale as soon as the war should have ended is shown by the various projects now under consideration, both as public and private enterprises. Among others is a plan that calls for the erection of a number of apartment buildings for the use of unmarried women engaged in business or professions and without home connections.

FRENCH MINISTER FOR WAR.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 15—Admiral Lacase, minister of marine, has been appointed temporary minister of war to succeed Gen. Lyautey.

EMPLOYERS STAND FIRST COST OF ALL INJURIES

Important Amendments Proposed to Workmen's Compensation Act---Move Liberal Allowances to Orphans.

TORONTO, March 15. Full medical expenses for a period of 30 days after an accident are to be paid under the Workmen's Compensation Act by the board, assessing the cost upon the employers, according to the most important clause in the amendment to that act, brought down by Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday. No mention was made of change in the waiting period.

Other amendments to the act provide for: Compensation for permanent disability or injury rather than on loss of earning power; compensation for employes injured while temporarily out of Ontario, doubling the $5 for fatherless children if their mother also dies; continuance of compensation to invalid children beyond the age of 16, and the payment to the compensation board of the full amount of the $100,000 for expenses from the province.

Though authorized by original bill to pay over to the commission $100,000 for expenses, the government has been in the habit of paying over only $25,000 and the salaries of the commissioners. The government will now pay the whole of the amount, which it is believed will cover the entire cost of administration. The various amendments would add materially to the charges on the fund, said the minister.

"Miners' consumption" is included in the list of "indutsrial diseases," provided that the board is convinced that the disease was contracted during employment in this province.

Adopted children also are brought within the provisions of the act.

Mr. Lucas said that the Act had worked so well in this province through insistence that the cost of administration and competition should be eliminated, that while the amounts paid to employes here were more than in New York State, the amounts paid by employers were less.

LABOR CLAIMS RIGHT TO HAVE VOICE IN THE EVENT OF WAR

Organized labor representing approximately 3,000,000 workers in the United States has announced to the country its war platform, embodying the condition under which labor would co-operate "to defend, safeguard and preserve the republic of the United States of America against its enemies, whomsoever they may be."

In the most remarkable document of its kind ever issued in the U.S. 147 representatives of national and international trades unions in conference announced in advance:

First, that labor should dictate the terms and limitations of war or national defence, and

Second, that organized labor should be consulted as to the conduct and methods of operation involved in war.

After seven hours of almost continuous debate, in which the conclusion of the statement was vigorously attacked by a large pacifist group led by certain pro-German influence, the statements prepared Friday night by the executive council was adopted unanimously on a viva voce vote.

Keynote of Statement

The keynote of the 2,000 word statement is ocntained in the following paragraph:

"We hold this to be incontrovertible that the Government which demands that men and women give their labor power, their bodies or their lives to its service should also demand the service in the interest of these human being of all wealth and the products of human toil—property.

"We hold that if workers may be asked in time of national peril or emergency to give more exhausting service than the principles of human welfare warrant that service should be asked only when accompanied by increased guarantees and safeguards and when the profits which the employer shall secure from the industry in which they are engaged in have been limited to fixed percentages."

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

WHEN to an exaggerated ego we add an exasperated ego the result is positively alarming.

Even an earthquake would make no impression upon the placidity, inertia and self satisfiedness of some people.

Be not forgetful to entertain the chance comer, for it may be that she has a long tongue and a short temper.

Why is it that the things that ought to be seem to bear no sort of relation to the things that are?

Sometimes we are so contrary that it is a positive pleasure to have people thoroughly dislike us.

We look before and after and sigh for the money we didn't earn and gloat over that which we threw at the birds.

Wisdom isn't indispensable if you have money to back up your foolishness and buy off your critics.

A man will do almost anything for his family except go without his tobacco.

One reason why a man sometimes refuses to make an apology is because he doesn't know how the blamed things are put together.

No man pays his taxes from a spirit of brotherly love.

The world looks bright to a young man who has just had his salary boosted and himself accepted by the only girl.

The woman who declares that a kitchen job is better for a girl than an office job seldom hunts the first sort for her daughter.

The strained look about a man's face is sometimes due to his trying to live up to what his wife would like to have him, but not often, sister, not often.

Winter Winds.

Winter breezes sing a tune
  That hardly calls to mind
The bright and merry days of June,
  When all the world was kind.
They search out like a secret sin
  The haunts the gaunt wolves press,
And those whose clothes are old and thin
  Can bank on their caress.

How hollow is their tragic tone!
  How somber is their mood,
As though they uttered forth the moan
  Of want's undying brood!
And any poor, downtrodden jay
  Whose rent is overdue
Can hear them whistling some such lay
  As "twenty-three for you!"

Through forests, leafless, stark and dumb,
  They whisper sad and low
Of days more dreary yet to come
  And ills more dire bestow.
And any one with half an eye
  Can see their purpose grim
If he in worldly goods is shy
  To have some fun with him.

It does not soothe my soul to hear
  The grim, bleak winter breeze.
I think I'd rather rest my ear
  With ragtime, if you please.
I'd rather hear a phonograph
  Play "Waiting at the Gate"
Or listen to a [illegible]
  Bemoaning its [illegible]

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ARMSTRONG—STAPLES

A quiet and pretty wedding was celebrated on Wednesday, March 7, at midday, at "The Elms," Bailieboro, when Mildred May, eldest daughter of Mrs. J. H. Armstrong, was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel Sandford Staples, son of Mr. Joseph F. Staples of Cavan. Rev. Canon Allen, M.A., officiated and Mrs. Allen played the wedding march. The bride entered the room on the arm of her brother, Mr. Gerald Armstrong, wearing a dress of white silk crepe de chine, with trimmings of Georgette crepe, and veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. After the ceremony the company adjourned to the dining room, where they partook of a dainty luncheon. The happy couple took the C.P.R. train for Toronto, followed by the good wishes of the community.

Mrs. H. Dean has returned from an extended visit in Hamilton and Detroit.

Mr. John Crane is in Toronto on business.

Mr. T. and Mrs. Chas. Crowe, 508 Rubidge St., are at Fraserville, attending the Deyell-Lewers wedding.

The married ladies of the gymnasium class at the Y.W.C.A. held a St. Patrick's party at the building last night. The ladies appeared in costume. Refreshments were served and the event proved very successful. Another party will be held on Friday evening by the gymnasium and club girls.

The Canadian Kitchener League are calling a very special meeting for Friday evening, March 16, in the Oriental drawing room at 8 o'clock. It is important that every member be present.

Miss Groat of Toronto is visiting Mrs. W. R. Widdess, 400 Downie St.

The officers and members of the Peterborough Curling Club entertained the visiting curlers from the Toronto Victoria Club last night after the game. Dinner was served at Hooper's Palm Parlors.

Those assisting at the tea to be given by the Local Council of Women on St. Patrick's Day are requested to be at the rooms at 2 o'clock.

The Red Cross tea held at the home of Mrs. P. Glover Tuesday afternoon by St. Andrew's Church Patriotic League was a huge success. Mrs. Glover received her guests in the drawing room, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. J. Wood. The pretty tea room was aglow with colored lights and flowers, and looked very attractive. Mrs. Kerr poured tea, and was assisted by Mrs. Waram, Mrs. Fills, Miss Belleghem and Miss McLelland. Mrs. C. S. McClelland had charge of the music afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Miss Alice McFarlane sang, and in the evening Mrs. Lock sang. Both were much appreciated. Mrs. F. L. Robinson and Mrs. John assisted in the drawing-room.

The last of the series of Red Cross teas by St. Andrew's Patriotic League will be held at the home of Mrs. A McNabb, 528 Gilmour street, on Tuesday, March 27.

Millinery and Mantle Displays

Peterborough has reason to be proud of the splendid showing of millinery and mantle goods on exhibition in the windows of its leading stores today. This is the opening of the Easter millinery show and it will last tomorrow and on Saturday. In every department the most recent modes in ready-to-wear, the up-to-the minute styles in hats and trimmings, to say nothing of the wonderful shades and combinations got together for the 1917 season.

The Cressman Co. have an exceptionally attractive window designed to represent the piazza of a summer hotel with an outlook on a lake. The costumes and figures are very naturally placed, which, with the dainty floral decorations has an effect that it hard to equal.

Miss Brooks, who has charge of the millinery department, has some surprise creations for Peterborough's particular ladies.

The ladies' ready-to-wear section has a large assortment of styles that are sure to please.

The Turnbull Co. have all their windows very beautifully set with millinery, lingerie and ladies' ready-to-wear costumes. Some of the hats on exhibition are wonderful and the originators of some of the designs have much to be proud of. The garments are authentic spring styles and the color effects are up to date. An exceptionally well selected stock has been secured for the careful inspection of the ladies.

In every department will be found something entirely new and novel to delight the most particular shopper.

The T. C. Elliot Co. have a very excelelnt display of millinery goods. Every item was chosen having regard to giving the ladies the most recent styles, colors and trimmings. In some departments the styles and patterns are exclusive, and in some instances only one was secured for this store. It will be of especial interest to the department heads to show the models at any time.

Hats of predominating colors and size are shown by Robert Fair & Co., and the window displays are as usual attractive to the feminine eye. Miss Gillespie and her assistant, Miss Iva McIntosh, were very busy today in the millinery department, where a wide range of hats has among its attractions a novelty that promises much popularity. It is two hats in one.

Miss White and her assistant, Miss Lawrence, in charge of the mantle department, have the best selections from the houses of Dame Fashion. New Jersey silk and cloth suits are among the features.

ST. JOHN'S W.A. HOLD MEETING

OFFICERS FOR 1917 ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION.

The annual meting of St. John's branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of the M.S.C.C. was held Tuesday afternoon in the guild room, when a large number of members assembled for what proved to be a most intersting session.

Miss Peck, the retiring president, occupied the chair, and Rev. Canon Cornish led the devotions and gave an encouraging address, assuring the members, from personal experience, of the immense value of the work of the W.A. in the West.

Reports from the committees were read and approved, as were the summarized reports of the secretary, Mrs. R. J. Devey, and the treasurer, Mrs. Aylmer. All pledges have been met and a bale, which includes an outfit for an Indian girl, will be forwarded to the Gordon School, Sask., next month.

The officers for 1917-18 were elected by acclamation as follows:

Hon. President—Mrs. J. C. Davidson.

President—Mrs. Abbott.

1st Vice President—Mrs. A. L. Amys.

2nd Vice President—Miss Peck.

Secretary—Mrs. R. J. Devey.

Treasurer—Mrs. Aylmer.

Literary Secretary—Mrs. Hall.

Dorcas Convener—Miss Large.

Dorcas Secretary—Mrs. Evans.

Extra Cent-a-Day—Mrs. Fessenden.

United Thank-offering—Mrs. Mulholland.

Leaflet Secretary—Miss Whitt.

Babies Branch Secretary—Miss R Quartermaine.

Superintendent Junior Auxiliary—Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron.

Organist—Mrs. Fessenden.

Visiting Convener—Mrs. Cuffe.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Miss Peck, the retiring president, on the motion of Miss Amys, seconded by Mrs. Fessenden. Mrs. Abbott, on taking the chair, asked for the hearty support of all the members, and concluded the meeting with the members' special prayer.

BUY ROAD OIL

FROM THE IMPERIAL OIL COMPANY.

The question of road oil for the streets took up considerable time at the meeting of the Board of Works last night. Many of the firms who had been asked for prices were not prepared to tender owing to freight conditions. The Canadian Tar Products Co. offered to supply oil at 6c per imperial gallon f.o.b. Montreal, which would figure at about 7⅘ or 7 8-10c f.o.b. Peterborough, basing the freight rate on the oil ordered from them last year.

Ald. Weir did not think this oil altogether satisfactory. It seemed to evaporate too quickly.

The Imperial Oil Co., Toronto, quoted a price of 7 85-100c per gallon f.o.b. Peterborough.

This oil was used here last year to some extent and is 40 per cent. asphalt. It gave good satisfaction.

The quotation for Tarvia B was 9c.

The Western Oil Refining Co. of St. Catharines quoted a grading scale of 9¼c high and 7⅘c low f.o.b. Peterborough.

Letters were also read from the British American Oil Co., the Crescent Oil Co., the Crown Oil Co., and others.

It was finally decided to have the local agent of the company notified of the acceptance of the offer of the Imperial Oil Co.

City Engineer Parsons will prepare an estimate of the cost of a concrete oil storage tank to hold ten thousand gallons, and also the feasibility of erecting it at the city yard.

Hotels to Close

According to hotelmen, the hotel situation in Toronto is extremely critical. Among the first-class hotels there are at least three which regard the existing situation as hopeless.

Finnish Railway Lines Are Blown up Suspending Service

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Mach 16—An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Stockholm quotes the Aftonbladet as stating that Finnish railway lines have been blown up at several points and that the train service between Sweden and Finland has been suspended for more than a fortnight.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS NOW CENTRAL FIGURE IN RUSSIA

Military, With Exception of Reactionaries Among Officers, Together With All Popular Forces of the Empire, is Backing the New Government—The Grand Duke Endorses Measure of General Political Amnesty

Grand Duke Nicholas, idol of the Russian army and ranked as Russia's master strategist, looms up as the big military figure of the hour in the empire which has just witnessed a successful and almost bloodless revolution and the abdication of its emperor. The relinquishing of the throne by Nicholas automatically deprived him of his rank as commander-in-chief of the Russian armies. The heir to the throne is an infant, and Grand Duke Michael, named as the regent, while a soldier of repute, is not of commanding military experience ; thus the nation, Petrograd despatches indicate, is turning to its most trusted military leader, Grand Duke Nicholas, who is reported to have arrived at the capital, and the probability is pointed to that he will take command of the troops.

Of the complete success of the revolutionary movement, in which the lead was taken by the Duma, there seems to be no doubt. While there have been few advices received as to the attitude of the army at the front, such news as has been received indicates that the military, with the exception of reactionaries among the officers, together with all the popular forces of the empire, is backing the new government. Civil forces of the nation are co-operating with the government move heartily, and this is restoring normal life in the empire.

The Duma, which is the chief factor in shaping the course of a new regime, and the Zemstvo council are reported as co-operating successfully in straightening out various tangles which have resulted from the momentous change in government control.

The food problem is being attacked, and the people themselves seem to be exercising their own authority to repress any element of the population that might be inclined to indulge in excesses.

A measure of general political amnesty is reported in the course of preparation by the new Russian minister of justice. Grand Duke Nicholas is said to have endorsed this move as one necessary to save the empire and bring the war to a successful conclusion.

Can Householder do Own Plumbing

ADVICE ASKED FOR BY THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

W. P. Castricum, 552 Stewart St., applied to the property committee last night for permission to instal his own plumbing at his residence. The plumbing inspector had refused a permit for the work on the ground that the applicant was not a qualified plumber.

J. R. Corkery, who appeared for Mr. Castricum, stated that his client was an engineer and could save $66 on the job by doing his own work. It would have to pass the inspector's examination when completed. The committee thought that a precedent might be involved and referred the matter to the city solicitor to report on.

BOMBS DROPPED ON WESTGATE

NO CASUALTIES AND ONLY SLIGHT DAMAGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 16— The War Office anounces a hostile airplane today dropped bombs on Westgate, a watering place near Margate.

There were no casualties and only slight damage.

LOAN TO ROUMANIA

LONDON, March 16—Great Britain has agreed to loan Roumania forty million pounds, acording to an official statement issued at Jassy, the temporary Roumanian capital, and forwarded by the Reuter correspondent.

ABDICATION OF EMPEROR OF RUSSIA NOT YET IN EFFECT HIS WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 16—Bonar Law told the House of Commons this afternoon that a telegram received from Petrograd said the whereabouts of Emperor Nicholas were unknown. He read the following telegram from the British Embassy in Petrograd: "What was stated in my previous telegram does not appear to be quite accurate. The Emperor's abdication and the appointment of the Grand Duke Michael as Regent, have not yet taken effect, although decided upon by the Executive Committee."

NEW MINISTER OF JUSTICE INSISTS ON FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

LONDON, March 16.—At a conference of members of the Duma Executive Committee and delegates representing workmen, which lasted until five o'clock this morning, says a despatch from Petrograd, an agreement was reached concerning the transitional period before an election of the Constituent Assembly. The executives insisted, in the interests of the war, on the necessity of order being re-established before holding elections. Workmen at first opposed the proposal of the committee, but later, Deputy Kerenski accepted the portfolio of Minister of Justice on condition that the Constituent Assembly would be convened.

Elections will be based on universal suffrage.

PETROGRAD, March 16.—The old regime of Conservatives has been supplanted by a Government of Liberals. Kerenski, the new Minister of Justice, is a Socialist. He accepted the portfolio on the stipulation that there should be absolute freedom of speech and of the fress and full political amnesty. The Cabinet has been chosen exclusively from the present and past members of the Duma.

NEW GOVERNMENT ENFORCED IN FIFTEEN PROVINCES

PETROGRAD, March 16—The Council of Nobility already has held special meetings in fifteen provinces and has enforced the new revolutionary Government.

RESOLUTION ORIGINATED WITH PROGRESSIVES TO KEEP MINISTER OF INTERIOR FROM DICTATORSHSHIP

LONDON, March 16—From an authority close in touch with Russian official circles, it is understood, says Reuter's correspondent at Copenhagen, that the revolution originated rather with the Progressive members of the Duma than with the people. This probably, the authority says, was because the Progressives were convinced that the hated Minister of Interior Protopoff was about to make himself dictator and thus the last last hope of regulating food stuffs and carrying out reforms in the way desired by the Progressives would disappear

VETERANS REQUEST AN INVESTIGATION INTO DEATH OF A SOLDIER.

KINGSTON, March 16.—The Veterans Association is making a protest and asking for an official investigation of a report published in the Bancroft Times, of the death of Pte. G. H. Ries. The report states that Pte. Ries went overseas with the 67th Batalion and suffered wounds that disfigured his face and head. Unfit for service he was sent to a convalescent home here. The day after his arrival he was given leave to visit his home, seven miles from Maynooth. At Maynooth he asked several people to drive him to his home but could not get anyone. He walked the seven miles and as a result suffered pneuomnia and died.

FIRE AT BELLEVILLE

BELLEBILLE. March 16— The Armories here had a scorch this morning shortly after three o'clock but little damage was done. Fire broke out in the office of the Quartermaster of the 254th Battalion. The floor was partly burned and some damage was done to documents by smoke and water. The blaze was confined to the one room.

French Occupy German Points and Take Prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 16.—A French detachment advanced last night between the Avre and the Oise and occupied a number of points, taking prisoners, the war office announces.

German raids on the Verdun front were repulsed.

Artillery engagements occurred in the Champagne.

Hold Campaign to Add Membership

HEALTH ASSOCIATION TO ACKNOWLEDGE GRANT BY THE COUNCIL.

At one of the best meeting of the Peterborough Health Association in the Bank of Montreal Chambers yesterday afternoon, Rev. Father Phelan presided and he congratulated the members on the interest they were taking in the work of the society. He commended the City Council for the increased grant and asked that the secretary acknowledge the grant with thanks.

A discussion took place on the constitution of the association, and several suggestions were referred to the committee.

Miss Hamilton, the association nurse, gave an acocunt of her work during the past month.

A united effort of the members will be made to augment the funds of the association. It is expected that the membership will be considerably increased by a campaign.

RUSSIAN SUCCESS

Dislodge Turks From Positions West of Kermanshah.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 16— Russian troops have dislodged Turkish forces from their fortified positions on the summit of Narleshkian, to the west of Kermanshah, in northwestern Persia, says an official statement issued today by the Russian War Department.

Nationalists' Attitude Might Compel Appeal to Country

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 16—In discussing the Irish situation in the House of Commons today, Bonar Law declared the attitude of the Nationalists might compel an appeal to the country on the ground that the Nationalists were unwilling to permit the Government to get on with the war.

FIELD NIGHT BY THE ODDFELLOWS

VISITING BRETHREN ARE ENTERTAINED BY THE LOCAL LODGES.

The Independent Order of Oddfellows held their annual district reunion last evening, when all the lodges in the district, Millbrook, Pontypool, Lakefield, Norwood, Havelock and two Peterborugh lodges participated. The ceremonies attending the gathering were very interesting and during the evening twenty new candidates were initiated and degrees conferred.

The Otonabee team had charge of the first degree work, while Peterborough team put the new members through the second and third degrees. When the ceremonies were concluded those present repaired to the banquet hall, where dinner, prepared by T. Hooper and Son, was partaken of.

The following toast list and program was carried out:—

The King.

The Grand Master and Grand Lodge—proposed by Bro. R. Hillier and responded to by Bro. B. Watts, D. D. G. M

Song—Albert Lee

The Visiting Brethren—Proposed by Bro T. C. Elliot, responded to by Bro. W. A. Logan.

Song—F. Hartshorn

Humorous address—Ward Patterson

The Empire—Proposed by Col. J. W. Miller, responded to by Bros. W. H. Barry and Rev. R. A. Whattam

New Members—Proposed by Bro. H. Huffman, responded to by Rev. W. Higgs of Millbrook.

Absent Brethren—Proposed by Bro. R. Reid, responded to by Bro. W. Young.

An enjoyable night was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem

Accepts Call to Tweed

Rev. L. S. Wight, B.A., B.D., of Edmonton, has accepted, subject to approval of Conferences, an invitation to the pastorate of the Methodist Church at Tweed at the close of the present conference year in June

Rev. Mr. Wight is well known throughout this conference, having been one of its most popular members previous to his going to the West.

The question of transfer will be made easy through the acceptance by the Rev. C. E. Cragg of Napanee, of a call to Lethbridge.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1917.

RUSSIA AWAKES.

THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE are seeing the light. The Czar ordered the members of the Duma to disband, as he scented treason in their deliberations. They refused to heed the order, and a revolution, long and carefully planned and startling in its suddenness was the result. The people win a recognition of their rights without bloodshed. The reactionary party has been suppressed and the pro-German element in the autocracy has been eliminated. The people are heart and hand for the prosecution of the war to a successful finish. The Allies need no longer doubt the fidelity of their Slavonic colleagues.

Russia's sun is rising at last and a bright day is in prospect. The sacrifices that the people have made since the war began will not be in vain if, out of the struggle, they get a new democracy that will put them on a level with the races on whose side they are arrayed. If this is a war against German militarism, it is also a struggle from which new forms of human liberty for others than the Teutons will emerge. The abdication of the Czar is one of the most significant events that has transpired in the world for a generation. History is repeating itself. Just as the corrupt and dissolute French monarchy was overthrown as a result of the Franco-German war, so the aristocracy of Russia is threatened with destruction. The despots of Europe can regard recent events in the land of the Czar and tremble as they think of their own probable fate.

Left to himself, Czar Nicholas would have emancipated the masses over whom he ruled. Of all absolute monarchs on earth, he was probably the most beneficent. He was closer to the people, studied their conditions and planned for their welfare as few of his predecessors ever did. Czar Nicholas was a man of peace. It was at his suggestion that the first Hague convention was called, and it was he who first proposed universal disarmament of the nations. Had his suggestion been accepted, the present war would have been an impossibility, the millions of men now under arms would have been engaged in the production of wealth instead of its destruction, and the ships now waiting for an opportunity to destroy each other would be carrying the commerce of the world with the freedom of the seas assured by an international patrol.

But Czar Nicholas, absolute monarch only in name, was the tool of intriguers who used him for their own ends, which tended to his destruction. His overthrow is rather a blow at the party and system which he represents than an evidence of personal unpopularity with his subjects. The deposed Czar was not responsible for the disastrous war with Japan in 1904. That conflict was precipitated by the schemers who surround his throne, and the people have never forgotten or forgiven the blunder.

Emperor Nicholas II., the deposed monarch, was the son of the late Czar Alexander III., and succeeded to the throne upon the death of his father in 1894. He was born in the year 1868 and is now nearing his forty-ninth year. During the famine which devastated his country in 1891 he was at his own request made president of the Committee on Succor, and worked with unflagging energy for the relief of the starving millions. This was sufficient to assure his popularity when he became the nation's ruler three years later.

From the beginning of his reign the Czar attempted to establish friendly relations with all his fellow sovereigns. After his coronation in 1896 he made a tour, which included visits to the emperors of Austria and Germany, to the King of Denmark, to Queen Victoria and to the President of France. The latter visit resulted in perfecting the alliance between France and Russia, officially announced one year later, and which made allies of the two powers when the German emperor started the present war.

Nicholas married the Princess Alex of Hesse-Darmstadt in 1894, three weeks after he became emperor. They have four daughters and a son, the latter now 13 years old, and who would have succeeded to the throne but for the epochal events of the past few days.

There may be a diversity of opinion as to what effect this revolution will have on the outcome of the war. At this time it looks as if it is the war party that has triumphed, and that, so far as Russia is concerned, the conflict will be waged with greater spirit than ever. The people who have brought about a revolution in their own country will persevere until deliverance has been brought to other races enthralled as they themselves have been for centuries.

THE FUTURE OF THE MOVIES.

SLOWLY IT MAY BE, but none the less surely, the moving picture is coming to the front and is being recognized as one of the greatest agencies for adding to the store of human knowledge. Men and women who would never think of listening to a lecture, however scholarly, or of reading an historical work, will attend a moving picture show and in a few hours acquire an insight into the records of the world and the events that have shaped the destiny of their nation. Study becomes a pleasure instead of a task, and the slumbering mind is aroused to take on a new interest in the affairs of life.

There is an ever-present difficulty in getting children to attend school, and, even when they are there, to take an interest in their work. Perhaps, after all, the trouble lies in the method of imparting instruction, and not in the children themselves. Teach them the history and geography of the world through the medium of the moving picture, and force would be required to keep them out of the buildings in which such a course of study was on the timetable. Sunday schools that throw Bible scenes on the screen are able to report an attendance more than doubled.

The day is not far distant when the use of moving pictures in the places of worship will become general, and, when it does, no one, preacher or layman, will have occasion to marvel or to ask why people do not attend church. The present edifices will be inadequate to accommodate the throngs that will turn out to every services. Men and women who while at home seldom are found in a church pew, have gone all the way to that obscure little village in Bavaria to witness the Passion Play, and have returned spiritually and mentally improved by the experience.

The Bible, by common consent, is regarded, even by men who question its verbal inspiration as Divine, as the most wonderful book in the world. It records events that are described in matchless language. The Hebrew poetry is without a peer in literature, and one of the most popular poems of modern itmes owes its chief claim to distinction to the fact that its author found the measure in one of the Psalms of David. The Sermon on the Mount holds its place unchallenged as the model discourse, and the startling miracles in the Old and the New Testaments are spoken of in a language so simple and direct that the thoughtful reader cannot but believe that there is something more than human authority behind them.

And yet the majority of people cannot be induced to read the Bible, probably because self-seeking denominationalists have made the sacred volume the text-book of discord and bickering and its study has been insisted upon as a stern and sacrificial duty rather than what it should be, a literary and spiritual delight. The preacher, however earnest and eloquent he may be, often is confronted by a Sahara of empty pews. Even his intelligent rendition of the Word fails to move the masses.

A travelling evangelist of bizarre methods comes to a city church and makes ragtime of the sacred melody and a burlesque of what is truly beautiful in literature. He gets an audience until it is necessary to lock the doors against those who would hear him. The banner under which he works saves him from censure. How can a man who approves of the vaudeville evangelist raise any objection when a faithful pictorial representation is made of the very scenes that the sensational ranter in clerical garb turns into a farce?

The story of the life and passion of the Nazarene is to be recited in pictorial form in one of the local theatres next week. It has appeared in other places, and the census of intelligent opinion is that it is one of the strongest commendations of the world's central historical event ever presented to the people.

THE RUSSIAN DUMA.

IT WAS IN THE DUMA that the Russian revolution that results in the abdication of Czar Nicholas was hatched. This body was a concession made by Nicholas in 1905 to the demand of the masses for a voice in the Government. It was made up of representatives elected by the non-titled classes, but was merely consultative, without any right to mould their opinions into laws. When they became too radical in their utterances the members dispersed by Imperial order. A recent ukase to disband was unheeded, and the smouldering embers of revolution suddenly burst into flame.

However limited may have been the functions of the Duma, the members really possessed as much power as those of the German Reichstag.

CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY.

RUSSIA has placed millions of dollars worth of war orders in the United States. Experts have been sent from the Czar's country to see that the goods furnished are according to sample, and these representatives are not the creatures of political favor but are men who thoroughly understand their business and upon whom the wiles of the grafter have no effect.

A resident of Peterborough, who was in Ottawa recently, met several of these Russian business agents and learned from them that they are amazed at the sordid commercial spirit, not to say downright dishonesty, of the Americans. Some manufacturers, they declare, appear to have neither scruples nor conscience, and appear to be utterly devoid of anything like a sense of business honor. They have no regard either for their verbal pledge or written agreement. Their sole ambition seems to be to make as much money as possible out of every transaction.

When the war is over and the current contracts with Americans run out, no more orders will be placed in the United States, at least for several generations. Uncle Sam's reputation as a business man has suffered to such an extent among the Russians that it will require years to establish anything like confidence in his integrity.

With the United States out of the reckoning, the Russian agents naturally turn to Canada for supplies, and the Peterborough citizen was given to understand that it was the intention of the Czar's agents to place large orders in this country to build up their own land when the war is over. There promises to be a ready market for agricultural machinery operated not by horse power but by gasoline. Small tractors for the cultivation of the soil will be in constant and general demand, and Canadian manufacturers are likely to find a new field to be supplied from their plants. All that the Russians will insist upon first of all is square dealings. Goods furnished must be as represented.

For years Russia has been the dumping ground for the cheap and inferior products of the world. Manufactories of too low a grade to find a market anywhere else were shipped into the Czar's domains until the country has been flooded with the rejects from factories in all sections of the globe. Germany has practically enjoyed a monopoly of the Russian trade, but the Teuton's commercial hopes lie no longer in that direction. When the war is over Russia will look for her supplies in other places.

The commercial intelligence branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, and on which Peterborough is represented, is constantly on the lookout for new markets for Canadian products. The prospects for large exports to Russia when peace is restored are constantly increasing. The chances are that upon the conclusion of hostilities Canada will enter upon a period of commercial prosperity never before dreamed of, and that her manufacturing industries will take on a new impetus unknown even by the munition makers in their heyday. The prosperity destroyed by the war must be restored, the three years and more lost by the regular producers must be succeeded by double that time of manufacturing effort. This hope is held out by men in a position to know the situation and should dispel the dark clouds that are forced upon the firmament by the pessimists, who would have us believe that the gloom of war is nothing to the depression that will settle upon an exhausted world with the restoration of normal international relations.

POLITICAL NEWS AND NOTES

CANADA'S FINANCING

Presiding at the annual meeting of the Bank of British North America in London the other day, Mr. E. A. Hoare, one of the directors, said: "The financial history of the war will contain nothing more astonishing than the part played by Canada."

Mr. Hoare went on to say that Sir Thomas White "had shown extreme sagacity in the manner of his borrowing." It was a tribute which no one who has followed the Dominion's financial record in this struggle will deny. Conversion of Canada from a country that was borrowing abroad before the war at the rate of a million dollars a day into a country financing its own war expenditure to the extent of more than a million a day, and loaning Britain money besides, is an achievement not least among the Empire's notable accomplishments in this war. It reflects credit alike upon the people of Canada and their leaders.

WITHIN THE LAW

It was a four story house which the owner had turned into apartments, one flat per floor. The Adamses lived on the first floor, the Bakers on the second, the Chutneys on the third and the Drakes on the top, says the New York Sun.

Early one evening in the seventeenth year of the present century Abel Adams was frying eggs for himself and his brother Abner on their electric plate; Bell Baker was cooking chops for herself and her sister Beulah on their gas stove; Charles Chutney was boiling wieners for himself and his son Chester over a jet, and Delia Drake was preparing a pork tenderloin for herself and her daughter Dora on an electric grill.

An inspector of the Tenement House Department, sniffing his way down the street, paused in front of this happy place. Then he went up the steps and rang all the bells. . .

"Under the laws of 1901," he shouted up the tubes, "cooking is not permitted in houses of more than two families unless the building is fitted up as a tenement house at horrible expense. Eat your meals in restaurants or go to gaol.'

Well, you know how it costs to eat out. The next day Abel Adams was married to Bertha Baker, Abner to Dora Drake, Chester Chutney to Belle Baker, and the widower Charles Chutney to the widow Delia Drake.

When the inspector came snooping around again one large family told him serenely to do his worst.

TOOL OF THE TRUSTS

"The Borden Government is the tool of the trusts," shriek the Liberal press from day to day. Yet the Borden Government has just had occasion to compel the Paper Trust to reduce its price of newsprint to two and a half cents to these very newspapers. Of all the manufactured nonsense that has been recklessly used by the Liberal party to discredit the Borden Government during the past five years, this cry that it was the puppet of the trusts was the most nonsensical of all.

NEW I.C.R. REGIME

The annual report of the Department of Railways and Canals shows a net surplus for the Intercolonial of $1,617,296 after crediting $1,515,895 to equipment renewal account. This fiat business administration of this road rescued it from a lengthy list of costly deficits to a position of financial stability. For years the Intercolonial was chiefly regarded as a partisan auxiliary of Maritime politicians. More and more it became a mill-stone around the neck of the country and a reflection upon the theory that government ownership was sound. Hon Frank Cochrane was the first Minister of Railways to conduct the road along business-like lines. Partisanship and patronage have been slowly but surely eliminated from the railway's administration, and the country taught that in future it is to be conducted by the people for the people instead of by the politicians for the politicians. The splendid surplus of last year speaks well for the new regime.

NEW SEASON GOWNS OF BARREL STYLE FIRST POEMS OF SPRING

The begonia barrel skirt is in bloom. The malachite indestructible voile puts forth its tender buds. Here and there the robin's egg yoson peeps out of the boulevards and the nutria nymph sheen is abroad in the land. For spring has come—milady's spring of the dainty fabrics and the rejuvenated sport skirts, which is to Chicago what the spring of the lark and the meadow grass is to Forkville.

The Fashion Art league assembled in session at the Auditorium Hotel in the Windy City announces spring and soon the avenue girls and the boulevard matrons will burst into bloom and the cities of the earth, Peterborough included, will be filled with new effects in awning stripes and original creations of an art which surpasses nature — the dressmaker's.

Some Harbingers, These

On the ninth floor of the show at Chicago young and pretty women did service as the harbingers of the warm and robust season, promenading in the latest things, and if the first robin is of great import to the suburbanite, the first model of spring is of greater significance to the city dame and damosel.

Dressmakers from many parts of Illinois came to study at the Fashion Art league show, and dressmakers from all the boulevard shops and department stores of the city also came. Many made addresses, and, as far as could be gathered, the tenor of their talk was "Economy in numbers and greater quality in style."

Why Write Poems? Be One

"For," said one of them, "there are women who write poems and women who are poems. But the majority of women who spend money on clothes have not learned to be select. They buy too many gowns and instead of being poems they become a series of jingles or advertising rhymes or something."

"The Canadian and American woman is the most beautiful in the world," said Mme. Marguerite, prominent member of the league, "but she has not learned to express her thoughts, her emotions, her very soul in her dress, as have the French and others."

There was a display of "practical gowns." There was a showing of spring and summer fashions; trophies and prizes were awarded. Then there were other displays and talks on how to wear clothes and what to wear by the most prominent dressmakers, and finally there was the awarding of a prize to the best fashion design submitted by an art student.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: I have been informed by a reliable authority that when women are allowed to vote it is their intention, with the assistance of the Ministerial Association to secure legislation to prevent the use of tobacco and to compel all men to be home by 10 p.m. unless they are attending some church entertainment properly chaperoned by their wives.

Before they resort to this extreme I would suggest a compromise and for the present would allow men to smoke between the hours of seven and eight provided they betake themselves to the cellar while they indulge and promise besides, to return for the privilege, to attend church twice every Sunday.

In the meantime, I would appeal to the men of this city and district to organize and get busy initiating women in the delights of tobacco to the end that they will eventually acquire the habit themselves and so refrain from depriving their husbands, lovers and brothers of the luxury.

ANOTHER OF THE FEARFUL.

THEATRICAL

Mutt and Jeff in real life at the Grand yesterday afternoon and night gave performances that pleased two large audiences. The funny antics of Bud Fisher's cartoon characters kept the audience well supplied with material for laughter.

Some parts of the performance were a disappointment in view of the usual excellence of Gus Hill productions, but this was due, probably to the basence of members of the company who are ill.

Service in Argentina.

Wherever you find a citizen of Argentina outside of his native land, in a cafe in Paris, on railroads in Chile, in New York hotels, the chances are he can produce a little fellow, leather-covered book. The data inside this little book goes away beyond census statistics, because it is intended at the same time to serve both as census information and military registration. On page 1 you will find the owner's name and the particular military region and subdivisional district to which he belongs. He has a given designating number and is assigned to the class corresponding to the year of his birth. Then follows his parentage, permanent and temporary address, and details of physical identification similar to those which are asked for in issuing passports. In a boxed-in space for that purpose is his thumbprint. On the page opposite appears his photograph such as riding a horse, driving a motor car, speaking foreign languages, etc. The little yellow book also contains blanks for the record of compulsory medical examinations which occur at stated intervals. Thus the Republic may know just how fit each man is to perform his specified job when the need comes for him to perform it.—The World's Work for February.

"I Am a Cat."

The Japanese literary world is mourning the death of Kinnosuke Natsume, better known by his pen name of "Soseki," who was the leading exponent of Anglo-Saxon thought in Japanese literature.

Natsume went to England as Government student in 1900 and soon began to write. A study of how English poets conceived nature established for him a definite place in current Japanese thought. Returning to Japan as a lecturer, Natsume published his first novel under the unusual title, "I Am a Cat." It created a sensation in the conventional world.

Natsume's death mask was taken by the sculptor Taketaro Shinkai. The post-mortem examination by medical experts, which was made at the author's explicit desire, showed that the convolutions of his brain were unusually deep and that the brain weighed 75 grams more than the average Japanese man's, which weighs 1,350 grams.

Honors for Three Sons.

A record of three sons out of four on service having won distinctions is furnished by the family of Mr. and Mrs. Nasmith, of Weybridge, Surrey, England. Lieut.-Commander (now Captain) Martin Nasmith, the second son, won the V. C. for his exploits in a submarine in the Sea of Marmora, where he destroyed seven Turkish ships in addition to driving another ashore, and then returned to torpedo a Turkish transport. Captain Arthur P. Nasmith, the eldest son, gained the D. S. O. for displaying great courage and initiative in organizing and leading a successful attack; and Major Reginald Nasmith, the youngest son, has been awarded the Military Cross. The fourth brother, L. Lieut. [illegible] Nasmith, who joined his old territorial unit at the outbreak of war and [illegible]

Preacher Monkeys.

The author of the "History of Brazil" tells of a species of monkey called "preachers." Every morning and evening these monkeys assemble in the woods. One takes a higher position than the rest and makes a signal with his forepaw. At this signal the others sit round him and listen. When they are all seated he begins to utter a series of sounds. When he stops these cries he makes another signal with his paw, and the others cry out until he makes a third signal, on which they become silent again. This author, Mr. Margrove, asserts that he was a witness to these preachings.

Ill-Guided Zeal.

William Wilberforce, the slave-liberator, had a sister who was a hustler. She hustled for William at the hustings and succeeded in getting him elected to Parliament. On one occasion, when she had concluded her stump speech, some enthusiasts in the crowd shouted:

"Miss Wilberforce forever!"

The lady stepped forward.

"Gentlemen, I thank you," she said, "but, believe me, I do not wish to be Miss Wilberforce forever."

A Grass Trimmer.

A grass trimmer that resembles horse clippers and is operated with both hands has been patented by an Englishman.

NEW LUNDY BLOCK B. CHESLER 289 GEORGE STREET

A party of British officers at Salonki fell into a dispute. The question was which smelt the worse, a Turk or a goat. One of the officers was duly constituted judge. A goat was led in, and the officer fainted. Then the Turk was brought in, and the goat fainted!

THE CITY BERNSTORFF MISSED

(1) A Water Carnival.

(2) Dry Dock, Halifax, N.S.

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF and his party stayed longer in Halifax than they would have wished, and saw less of the town than any other tourists on record. For while the neutral passengers on board the "Frederick VIII" were allowed to promenade on deck, the German passengers, deprived of their hundreds of suits of pyjamas and their thousands of phonographic records, were condemned to gaze at each other in wrath, or stare Halifaxward at the dock wall through a mere porthole!

And this despite the fact that some of the very best of the original settlers at Halifax were Germans—born to be sure, before the Kaiseristic taint had entered the good old Teutonic blood.

Halifax from the harbor looks like a long grandstand rising tier on streeted tier with the fort at the top gazing out over the immense circle of grey-steel water where the whole British Navy could take shelter if it wanted to. When a consignment of Canadian troops is due to start for its sub-endangered trip across the Atlantic, cruisers, destroyers and submersibles hover like grey clouds over the slate sea, and the visitor who isn't thrilled with the sight of so much potential hell must have bilge water in his veins in place of blood.

But there was no such commotion in the harbor or on the land when Colonel the Honorable Edward Cornwallis arrived with his fluttered little fleet chaperoned by the sloop of war "Spinx," in the summer of 1749. Nothing was to be seen but "a range of low hills with an unbroken forest that grew to the shore."

Halifax is none of your war baby cities, born of chance and the spirit of adventure. Halifax came into the world fathered by the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations because the fair Boston to the south wanted a sizable guardian to protect her from the French of Quebec, who were unceasingly able to raise fleets, punitive expeditions, Indian insurrections and Cain generally.

The Earl of Halifax, at the head of the Lords Commissioners, who took the request from Massachusetts, imbibed from it some latent American spirit we must suppose, for to produce his city he immediately anticipated by a hundred and fifty years the method of the beer that made Milwaukee famous and the car that saved Hy. Ford from oblivion—he advertised.

London newspapers carried his propaganda somewhat after this fashion. Halifax had a grand situation but she had no settlers. She must have 'em to match. Wherefore, to any private of any regiment disbanded since the recent French wars, the Government promised free passage, free grant of land of fifty acres, freedom from taxes for ten years, free arms, agricultural, fishing and building implements and free food for twelve months. To any officer above the rank of captain the land grant swelled to six hundred acres, with additional grants for every member of his aristocratic family that he could induce to follow him.

In two months' time 2,576 adventurers had signed on—men, women, children and suffragettes—thirteen transportsful of heroism. It took them a month to reach Nova Scotia, but the day they landed they got to work to turn the forest into log cabins and the situation into a city. Timbers and boards for the most pretentious buildings were brought from Massachusetts.

From Boston in the following year came the framework of St. Paul's Church, that staunch colonial meeting house which still gazes haughtily across the Parade at its upstart neighbors. George II contributed the edifice to his new colony, to which shortly afterward he sent five hundred of his German cousins—Hessians and Brunswickers—some of whom built the town of Lunenburg, while others settled in Halifax itself, putting up a church of their own which still stands, showing what careful carpenters these ex-soldiers could become when their Lutheran hearts were in the work. The [illegible] who is interested in the Halifax dockyard will see the little Dutch church a couple of blocks to the west with its graveyard beside it. An awesome bit of history is the fact that three successive pastors sent to the Halifax Lutherans from Hanover were all wrecked and drowned during the voyage! It surely speaks volumes for old-time German heroism and doggedness—of the pre-Kultur and anti-Bernstorff type—that a fourth minister was found foolhardy enough to volunteer and lucky enough to arrive.

The Northwest Arm was a favorite resort of the early settlers, who were as fond of merrymaking as the present Haligonians, despite the fact that in those grey-homespun times they could put on no such colorful spectacles as are achieved by the Waegwoltic Club of to-day on carnival occasions. But the fishing was as good, we may be sure, then as now, and the bathing has always rivalled that of the famous Annapolis Basin. In the old days the mouth of this pleasureful "Arm" used to be closed by a huge chain cable, lest a hostile ship should slip in like a shark and disturb the merrymakers.

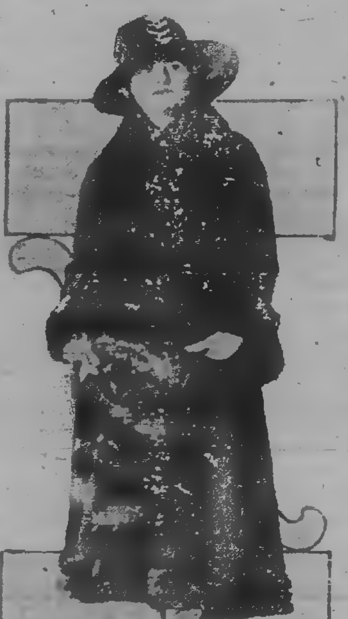
If Bernstorff had been allowed off his boat he would undoubtedly have liked to drive out to the picturesque Quinpool Road to "Dutch village," built by his countrymen of the pre-decadent period. Here lived two naturalists who instituted the first Zoo in America—sixteen years ahead of Central Park. A short drive across country would have brought the Ambassador to Bedford Basin where, if there had been no Treitschke and no war, he would doubtless have been entertained by all the yachtsmen of the jolly summer colony.

Finally, if the cast-off Count had been of the old-time German worth, he would doubtless have taken the Dominion Atlantic Railroad line to the township of Clements, in the beautiful apple-blossomed Annapolis Valley between Old Port Royal and Digby. After the close of the Revolutionary War, four hundred German-speaking loyalists from New York and New Jersey took up shore lots, with two parallel lines of German settlers behind them, still known respectively as the Waldeck Line and the Hessian Line. These old soldiers turned out to be excellent peace-time settlers. Although they met at the English Church before service to sing their German hymns, they always stayed to listen reverently to a sermon in the tongue of their adopted brothers, the English.

HER SPORT SUIT.

Young Girls Are Wearing Them Built Like This Design.

This winter sport clothes are worn on the street frequently. So this boxy coat and skirt of tobacco brown gaberdine will serve both ends. The seasonable touch of fur is kolinsky. Please note how the brown velvet hat band is laced on to the crown.



THE JAUNTY ONE.

FOR THE SICK CHILD.

Toys That Will Amuse Without Exciting Your Patient.

It is difficult to keep the sick child entertained. Especially when convalescence starts is the task is a trial to nurse or mother, for the child that is ill dislikes to stay in bed unless it is too ill to care about anything.

A supply of toys is, of course, a great aid in making the hours of convalescence pleasant to children. Many gifts of toys were solicited and received by the hospitals in the cities where infantile paralysis made such big inroads last summer, for the hospital authorities realized that convalescence passes much more pleasantly and perhaps more quickly to the child that is happily engaged with toys.

If you are buying toys for a child that is ill remember first that they must be simple. Nothing complicated or too exciting must be chosen, for excitement is bad for anybody who is not in the best of health.

For the little girl well along in convalescence, the girl of six or over, paper dolls are a delight. Hours can be passed in cutting them out and other hours in playing with them.

Dainty Hints.

Those who fear that the use of cold cream or skin food will induce a growth of surplus hair can substitute warm milk. This should be applied in exactly the same manner as the creams.

If you value complexion never use hard water with which to wash. Hard water contains mineral salts such as lime, which when combined with the fatty acids of the soap form what is known as stearate of lime. This clogs up the pores and makes them large and open and coarsens the skin. Should rainwater not be available soften the hard water with borax or oatmeal.

If you are bent on trying to have a beautiful mouth do not fall into the error of assuming a continuous grin. Muscles that are always kept on the stretch finally lose their original contour, and wrinkles result.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Land Where Skating Is the Custom.

OLD AND YOUNG GO ON STEEL.

Little People of Holland Glide to School In Winter Over the Frozen Surface of the Canals—How These Waterways Came to Be Built—Leapfrog.

Well, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, I suppose you had fine sport on your skates today. So I am going to tell you about a country where EVERYBODY SKATES.

Doubtless you think it would be very nice if you could put on your skates whenever you had to go anywhere and skate off instead of just crawling along in overshoes.

If you lived across the ocean in the little country named Holland, the land of the Dutch, that is what you could do.

Holland is cut up by canals. Once the country was nearly all swamp or water. But the people built great walls of earth to keep the sea from coming in on the land where it was very low. Where it was very swampy or wet they dug long ditches, and they walled these up and thus formed the canals. This left the land nice and dry so that they could build houses and sow crops of vegetables and grain and plant orchards upon it.

Their canals and sea walls are carefully watched so that the sea may not leak in or the canals get filled up again with sand. In summer the people travel up and down these little canals in boats on their way to and from market. Horses, sometimes dogs, walking at the side, drag the boats.

In winter, though, it is very cold, and all the canals are frozen over. The little boys and girls of Holland get out their skates, tie their woolen mufflers carefully over their caps and ears and around their necks and go skating off to school hand in hand. My, how those little Dutch boys and girls can skate! They learn to skate as soon as they can toddle.

But skates are still more useful in Holland. When in the winter the little Dutch children's fathers or mothers wish to go to market with a basket of eggs or butter they get on their skates and, balancing the baskets on their heads, go skimming off to town as lightly as birds.

Every one skates in Holland. In winter it is the best way to get about. Horses and wagons are dear, and the people are too thrifty to spend a penny that they can help.

Their outdoor life makes them strong and rosy. They wear queer old fashioned clothes, such as one sees in pictures of long ago. They have wooden shoes on their feet, and the women wear quaint white caps.

All over Holland you will see windmills. The clever Hollanders have harnessed the wind to do their work. Giant-like windmills help them pump the water out of the marshes. These they are still busy in making into dry land, and little by little they force back the sea with their high walls, which are called dikes.

"Huckle Buckle Beanstalk."

One of the old games, called "huckle buckle beanstalk," is played as follows: The company goes out of the room while one who remains makes disposition of some small object, such as a coin. Let us say this coin is a dime. Well, the rule is that the coin [illegible] not be hidden, but shall be [illegible] within view, but not more than that. A dime is a small object, of course, and there are plenty of ways of making it hard to see. Now, the person who first sees the dime makes no remark whatever, but quietly takes a seat. Next likewise. Next ditto. And so it goes until only one person remains up and hunting. Naturally this person who cannot see what every one else sees is very much laughed at—

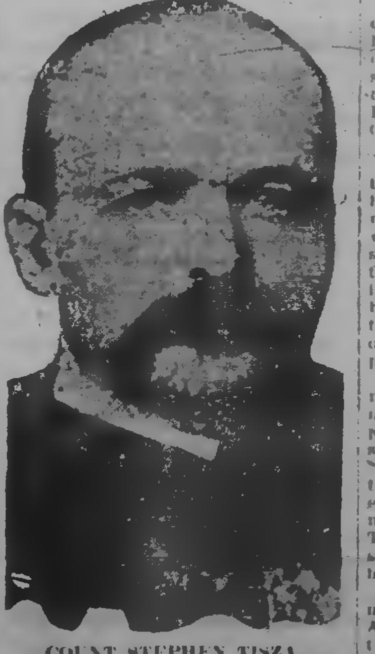
Count Stephen Tisza

Whose Political Motto Is "All For the State"

COUNT STEPHEN TISZA, Minister President of Hungary, has been alternately the most hated and the most loved man in his nation. Out in the Balkans, they blame him for what the rest of the world brands the Kaiser. Steeped in Machiavellian lore, "all for the state," he has for years been one of the most fascinating and perhaps sinister wills in European statecraft.

Eleven years ago, January 5, 1905, after a long political deadlock and an extremely reactionary extra parliamentary regime of the Tisza Government in Hungary, all the opposition parties united, mobbed the parliament, passed the military guard, and demanded Tisza's resignation. His Ministers resigned hastily. None came to take their places, and until June 17, when King Franz Joseph reluctantly dismissed him, he ruled Hungary iron-handed and alone. Letters by the thousand threatened him, revolution muttered in the streets of Budapest, assassination was several times attempted, he was spit on by the crowds that jeered at him. And yet when he retired, even the Opposition granted he was the most courageous man in the country.

He came back on June 10, 1913, still distrusted and disliked by Liberal and by pro-Russian Magyars, and for the greater part of the time up until August, 1914, his life was not safe on the streets. In August, 1914, students and populace hailed him, bands played under his windows, adoring crowds followed him in the town, old Kossuth songs were revived in his honor. The steering gear of Austria Hungary was in his hand. Not since Count Andrassy's day, and not even then, had a Hungarian statesman been so dominant in the Dual Monarchy. It was known that his had been the hand to pen the dictatorial note to Serbia, and his popularity continues because it is now known that his were not the changes, but Count Berchtold's and Count Forgach's, which made the note too severe for Serbia's stomaching. For Count Tisza is Bismarckian enough to have cautiously counted the costs.



COUNT STEPHEN TISZA.

His father before him, Count Kalman Tisza, led Hungary for eighteen uninterrupted years, and trained his son consistently for statesmanship. Count Stephen Tisza arrived not by accident. He comes near being the only statesman in the Dual Monarchy with courage, experience, resourcefulness, and indomitable health. Garbed always in gloomy black, courteous but abrupt, dry and brief, he is not a [illegible] [illegible] has a wit like Martin Luther, and he has the most celebrated racing stables in Hungary. Tall, almost gaunt, his gray hair is cropped criminally close. His eyes are pale gray and cat seeing. His face arrests you, the stern bones of the forehead and cheek, the straight, thin lips, the military carriage of his neck. No one recalls having seen him smile for years. And yet he is witty upon occasion.

A member of the consular corps at Budapest remembers discussing some little affair with him a few years ago. Both gentlemen kept their tempers and both were very much irritated. When he got home from the interview, the consular officer found a huge basket of fruit there before him "to make it up." Another remembers a Tisza sally during the embarrassing salt scandal of 1912, when the then Minister-President Ladislaus de Lukacs, figurehead for Tisza, was being fatally found out for his part in selling the salt monopoly. The Liberal papers called it spending booty when Mr. de Lukacs gave an official dinner to two hundred persons. The Balkan war was in progress, and the table at which Mr. de Lukacs and Count Tisza and the consular corps were seated gave itself over to a neutral discussion of national foods. The French Consul suggested that Hungarian foods were excellent, but perhaps rather piquant. Count Tisza spoke for the first time, glancing at Mr. de Lukacs: "Monsieur finds them perhaps too salty." The hit reached himself, at that, for his own brilliant mind had suggested the Salt Panama largely to provide campaign funds for his party, the National Working party.

On Count Stephen Tisza depends any move that Austria may make for separate peace.

TORTURE OF PRISONERS.

Terrible Cruelty Inflicted on Captives by Germans.

Hideous in the extreme, and only equal in awfulness to the frightful horrors of the Inquisition of the dark ages, is the story told in a semi-official French communique of the tortures inflicted upon French, Russian, and English prisoners in German prison camps.

Examples are given, as follows:

In reprisal camps of occupied districts of Russia this treatment has been applied with terrible refinements of cruelty. Thus, a mattress was at times placed between the stake and the head of the sufferer to render his position more exhausting. Sometimes the victim was tied bareheaded at midday with his face toward the sun, and with the points of barbed wire arranged so that they penetrated his chin.

At Landshut seventeen Frenchmen were enclosed in a cage four metres long by three metres wide, exposed to all weathers. As a result, several of them went mad.

Punishment of the pit. The victim was forced into a hole in the earth, of an average length of one metre and eighty centimetres deep. The floor was strewn with sharp stones and the walls covered with barbed wire.

In Courland the lashing was administered on the loins of prisoners. At Stargard on Sunday mornings the wives of officers and other persons were invited to witness the bastinado.

CLUB FOR ENGINEERS

Organize With Mr. C. E. Canfield as President.

Members of the engineering profession met at the Oriental Hotel last night and after luncheon elected officers for the Peterborough Engineers' Club, and discussed other matters of interest to the club. Mr. H. B. Rogers was elected hon. president, Mr. C. E. Canfield president, Mr P. P. Westbye vice-president and Mr G. R. Langley secretary.

The directors are Messrs. Munro, Parsons, Sisson, Sangster and Fisk.

A constitution was drafted. The question of suitable club rooms was delegated to a committee for a report.

The gentlemen present displayed much enthusiasm over the organization proceedings.

Will Reach the Mark

The Campaign Committee for the three-day canvass for the Patriotic and Red Cross Funds in Waterloo have close to $45,000 reported and the goal of $56,000 is looming in sight. It is expected that there will be no difficulty in exceeding the objective before the close of the final push today.

Although the returns are not yet complete for the canvass at Kichener, everything points to the Patriotic and Red Cross Funds' campaign reaching the $100,000 mark.

National Council Meeting

The annual meeting of the National Council of Women takes place in Ottawa March 21 and 22.

GEORGE W. POWEEL NOW RECOMMENDED FOR JOB OF SANITARY INSPECTOR

Asks Salary of $750 and $2 Weekly for Expenses.

George W. Powell will be the new Sanitary Inspector, if the recommendation of the Property Committee is confirmed by the Council. The six candidates, asked to appear before the committee, were all examined as to their qualifications, and then Dr. Deyell was called in for a conference. The committee then took a vote, and the contest narrowed down to two candidates, Messrs. Powell and Stapleton, and the former received four votes to Mr. Stapleton's three.

The members of the Property Committee, Alderman Saunders (chairman), Dobbin, Duncan, Smith, Langford, Taylor and Mayor Duffus, were all present, with Alderman McIntyre an interested spectator.

The applicants were called in in the order that their applications had been received.

R. J. Mahood, 743 George street, had the recommendation that he was a returned soldier. He asked a salary of $700. He had been turned back in England, having rheumatism very bad. Had had very little experience in dairies, and admitted that the written application was not in his own writing. About slaughter houses he had some knowledge. His knowledge of hygiene and sanitation was very limited. Mr. Mahood enlisted with the 50th Battalion at Calgary, Alta.

Plenty of Experience.

George W. Powell had conducted a butcher shop in Peterborough for many years. The salary he asked was $750 and $2 per week for travelling expenses. He had read over the agreement with the previous sanitary inspector, and was confident that he could quickly familiarize himself with the details of the office. He was familiar with the diseases of cattle, and felt himself quite capable in this respect. In regard to the testing of milk, if it was necessary, he could read up on that line and gain sufficient knowledge to pass an examination. He had not canvassed any of the aldermen for the position, believing that the best qualified man should get it.

George Metcalf, 278 Dublin street, wanted $900 and $75 expenses. He had a thorough knowledge of the dairy business and could test milk by the Babcock or Lactometer methods. In inspecting a herd of cows it was a comparatively easy matter to pick out an animal that was not up to the mark. A sick cow in a healthy herd shows itself. He could not tell all the diseases that animals might suffer from, but knew how to administer the tuberculin test. He had taken a course in hygiene and sanitation at the Ontario Agricultural college, and would insist on good ventilation in stables where cows were kept.

Could Save City Money.

William Henry wanted $700 and $75 expenses each year. He could answer in the affirmative all the questions asked by the members of the committee. He stated that it was easy to detect tuberculosis in cows. He pointed out where the city would make money by saving the waste paper, rags, bones, etc., at the incinerator.

This last idea did not appeal to the committee.

Chas. S. Stapleton would attend to the duties of the office for $900 a year, with $100 for expenses. He was familiar with the necessity for cleanliness around slaughter houses, butcher shops, restaurants, etc. Two years' experience with Dr. Crevier had given him an insight into diseases of animals. He would not condemn an animal until a qualified veterinary had passed on it, but would insist on all cow stables, from which the city milkmen got their supply, being kept clean and well ventilated.

Pte. H. Smith, of the R.A.S.C., wanted $700 to do the work required. He had had some experience in England in this line, but knew nothing about the conduct of dairies or the diseases of cattle.

It was the general opinion that only three had passed the necessary qualifications, Messrs. Powell, Metcalf and Stapleton.

Favored Returned Soldier.

Mayor Duffus thought that Dr. Deyell, who was a returned soldier, practising in Peterborough but not living in the city, should be given a hearing.

Ald. Smith would not class a veterinary who went as a vet. in the same class as a returned soldier.

Mayor Duffus felt sure that if Dr. Deyell was given the position and made good, he would move into the city. The city wanted the best man for the position, and he believed that Dr. Deyell had the maximum qualifications, and the additional fact that he was a returned soldier.

It was decided to call Dr. Deyell, and he arrived with little delay. He pointed out the necessity for dairy cattle to be tested twice a year for tubercular trouble. At present 18 per cent of the beef cattle and from 30 to 35 per cent. were affected in some way or other. Probably half of the cattle supplying city milk were not in good stables. If the ventilation was bad, the milk and the cattle would not be up to the mark, and conditions should be remedied at once. The necessity for a more careful handling and covering of the meat offered for sale on the market was dwelt on. No garbage from the city should be fed to hogs or other animals unless thoroughly cooked.

In answer to the Mayor, Dr. Deyell stated that milk from a tubercular animal which went into cheese was not dangerous. The government inspector, when he found an animal suffering from T. B., so branded it on the ear. He would not allow milk from a herd that had one T. B. animal in it to be supplied to the city. The danger from fly-blown meat and the danger from dirty scales was referred to. The case of where a family at Orono had been wiped out by typhoid germs deposited on meat left exposed to flies was cited. If given the position he would want $100 a month, and would treat everybody alike and be the friend of nobody. He had been one year in France with the Army Veterinary Corps.

Monthly Reports.

After Dr. Deyell had retired, the Mayor insisted that the inspection of milk and meat had been neglected. There should be monthly reports from the sanitary inspector of work done.

Ald. Dobbin was much impressed with Dr. Deyell. The city had thrown a few hundred dollars away on parks, etc. Surely the health of the city was very important.

Ald. Langford thought the difference in salary was too great. The government inspector might be secured to inspect he herds.

Ald. Smith thought that apart from the examination of cattle any of the other three men were just as good.

Ald. Dobbin felt that it was getting back to the idea that it was a matter for the board of health to handle and so moved.

Mayor Duffus seconded the motion

Ald. Taylor thought the Council should appoint the inspector, and on a vote being taken the motion was lost.

The Vote.

Ald. Langford moved that George W. Powell be appointed.

Ald. Dobbin seconded.

Mayor Duffus could not get a seconder to his motion that Dr. Deyell be appointed.

Ald. Smith moved that C. S. Stapleton be appointed, and Ald. Taylor seconded.

On a vote being taken Mr. Powell was chosen on the following division:

For Powell—Aldermen Langford, Duncan, Dobbin and Saunders.

For Stapleton — Aldermen Smith, Taylor and the Mayor.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING MILITARY NOTES

The secretary of the local branch of the Soldiers' Aid was pleased and gratified this morning. Is, as a matter of fact, fairly well pleased each morning by the good things that a heap of excellent people are doing. All of these good efforts are not shown on the surface, but are appreciated and remembered. Outside of grumbling at the City Council people are fairly content to lend a hand. But the Council will presently change itself, and remonstrance will take a fresh grip and go after new objects and new hopes. However, all of this is a strict aside from the acknowledgment in hand.

Things are coming our way after a period of waiting. Miss Celia Dunsford, treasurer of the Peter Robinson Chapter, Independent Order Daughters of the Empire (the name is printed in full as a well-deserved concession to the Peter Robinson who was very early, nearly a hundred years ago, in fact, embroiled in the first doings in Peterborough, and to give the full name of the Chapter) handed in a cheque for $87.25, the avails from the entertainment given by the friends in the Turning Point evening in the Opera House. Fine. Positively munificent. It may be explained that "avails" is an English commercial word, and means what is left after everything in the way of expense has been paid. So the effort was well worked out to be able to preserve from the entrance fees such a sum.

It is gratefully acknowledged, and will be used with discretion and care and will enable the branch to do some things, held over for a lack of funds, the branch hesitating to intrude its claims for recognition on the public while so many other patriotic purposes were in view. Some other gifts are in anticipation, and of these due acknowledgment will be made.

The following are copies of letters received from France by the Kitchener League:

France, Feb. 16, 1917.

Please accept, and extend to the other ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League my most grateful thanks on behalf of the Signal Section, R. C. R., for your kind gift of socks received today. There were enough to go round, with two extra pairs, which I kept for myself. Socks, I may say, are very gratefully appreciated over here; one has to change very often. Please thank the ladies of the League for their kind wishes.

Yours sincerely,
HAROLD SCOTT.

France, Feb. 18, 1917.

On behalf of myself and the Peterborough members in my platoon, I would like to thank you for the fine parcel of socks that I received from you this morning. I received your letter saying you were forwarding the parcel, some time ago, but I waited until I received the parcel. There are five other members in this platoon that came from Peterborough so I shared the socks among them all and gave them the address that was in the parcel, so I guess Mrs. Knox will receive letters from them in due course. If you only knew how much we boys appreciate these kindnesses that we get from friends at home you would be fully repaid for the hard work you all do for us. A fellow out here really needs to change his socks every other day to keep his feet in decent condition. Please excuse this note if it appears to be short, but news is so scarce, we have really nothing to write about. Again thanking you and the workers of the Canadian Kitchener League. Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,
GEORGE MELTON.

SIR IAN HAMILTON SILENT AND FRANK

Never Wastes a Word and Confesses That He Never Goes Into Battle Without Misgivings

To his friends and subordinates Sir Ian Hamilton, who was placed in command of the operations against the Dardanelles, is known as the "Silent Soldier." More taciturn even than Lord Kitchener, he seems to have reduced the necessity for speaking to a minimum. When he was Quartermaster-General at the War Office, one of his confreres was once heard to declare that "one of Hamilton's grunts was more expressive than a whole sentence from anyone else."

Sir Ian is one of the few men who really made a great reputation during the South African War. When he went out to the Cape in 1899 he was only a colonel, but for his distinguished service as Chief of Staff at Elandslaagte, in Ladysmith during the siege, and afterwards in command of the mounted infantry division, he was promoted first to major-general and afterwards to his present rank of general. And striking testimony to his gallantry and personal bravery is provided by the remarkable fact that both Generals French and White recommended him for the V.C., but it was decided that he was "too senior" to receive the decoration.

When Sir Ian returned from South Africa with Lord Roberts, he not unnaturally thought he had finished with active service for a time, and settled down at the War Office as military secretary. But when a few months later it was seen that the task of ending the war was likely to prove more difficult than was at first anticipated, it became obvious that Lord Kitchener was in need of a first-class assistant. Lord Roberts was very anxious that Sir Ian should return to the front. The latter, however, demurred somewhat, and was by no means eager to go out if someone else could be found.

He Filled the Bill

At last there came another letter from Lord Kitchener, again asking that a Chief of Staff should be sent him, and adding, in his characteristic sardonic way:

"One with brains preferred."

"There, Hamilton," said Lord Roberts, with a laugh, as he handed the letter to Sir Ian, "that settles it. You will have to go out now."

And go Hamilton did.

Referring again to Sir Ian's personal bravery for which he should to-day be wearing the V.C., it might be mentioned that he has more than once been referred to as the "unluckiest soldier" in the army, on account of the number of times he has been wounded or sustained injuries. While on the Indian frontier he practically lost the use of his left arm through the bursting of a shell. On another occasion he very nearly lost his sight, through a shell bursting in his face. One day, when lying badly wounded on the veldt, two Boers tried to make him surrender his sword, which he refused to do, and just when things were looking extremely ugly a Boer officer appeared and commanded the men to take him prisoner. He was released, however, as his captors thought him too badly hurt to live, but he found his way back to his comrades, although it was a long time before he fully recovered from the experience.

GEN. SIR IAN HAMILTON

A Candid Confession

Frank to a degree, Sir Ian does not hesitate to express his views, even when they directly concern himself, and it was in one of the service messes, when the conversation turned upon the sensations experienced by a general when taking troops to action, that he remarked: "I never went into action yet but that I was in a blue funk and wondering how on earth I should get through, and I don't believe that the man has ever been born who felt much different."

A further illustration of his frankness was provided at a meeting of the Royal Army Temperance Association at Caxton Hall, when he was chairman. "When I reflect," he said, "that in my thirty-seven years' service some 10,000 quarts of dutiable liquor have passed down the throat of him whom you have asked to be your chairman, my conscience pricks me. But it is one of the traditions of the British army that the officers do not say to their men, 'Go on!' but 'Come on!' I shall be happy to put myself in the position to do so by taking the pledge. I shall be uncomfortable, I know I shall, I am prepared to pay the price."

Poet and author, Sir Ian has several books to his credit, and those who know him best are convinced that he would have made a great name for himself had he turned his attention to Minerva instead of to Mars.

French Motors

Serving the French army are over 10,000 motor vehicles, driven and kept by 2,500 chauffeurs and mechanics.

GUARDING MILITARY SECRETS

In war time there are numerous important State secrets which must be prevented from leaking out, and they are guarded by various ingenious devices. For instance, in Government offices the writing on important documents is dried by means of roller blotters. These consist of revolving cylinders covered with blotting paper, which are run over wet ink. The The writing is impressed on the cylinder in a confused jumble impossible to decipher, as would be the case if the ordinary flat blotter were used. In some cases black blotting paper is used to dry official letters, as it is much safer than the pink or white variety. Important telegrams, if not in code, often have to be guarded from prying eyes by Government officials. For this purpose they use a simple little invention which consists of a telegraph form prepared with a perforated gummed edge. The message having been written, the form is folded over and the edges gummed down, as in the case of a letter card, and its contents are hidden from the messenger who carries it to the telegraph office.

Each battleship carries a book of code signals which holds the meaning of the little flags which flutter at the masthead when ships communicate. The code book is of immense importance, and strict precautions are taken against it falling into the hands of the enemy. Each volume is heavily weighted with lead in the cover, so that in an emergency it can be thrown into the sea with the certainty that it will sink. The code book is thrown overboard when a battleship is sinking or has been crippled by an enemy ship which is likely to despatch a boarding party.

In war time all Governments utilize cipher codes for communicating with their commanders in the field or with their Ambassadors in neutral countries. Such ciphers are cleverly worked out by an official especially employed for the purpose. The object of official codes is to make them absolutely unintelligible to the ordinary person, whilst they can be read by the initiated by means of a simple key that can be memorized. It occasionally happens that commanders in the field are obliged to communicate with one another by means of despatches written in plain language. In such cases elaborate precautions are taken against the communications falling into the hands of the enemy. They are secreted in the sole of a despatch rider's boot, sewn into his clothing, or, as was described in a recent letter from the front, carried in the pneumatic tire of a motor cyclist's machine.

Lord Kitchener has a policy of guarding important military secrets by seldom entrusting them to any but unmarried men. During the many years that he was busy perfecting his plans for his swoop upon the Mahdi he did not have a married man upon his staff. If one of his staff wished to get married he had to be transferred elsewhere, in case he should not prove capable of keeping military secrets from his wife.

BARBARIANS ALWAYS

Germans of To-day True Descendants of Bloodthirsty Ancestors

The barbarous manner in which war is being waged by the German armies is attributed by many to a moral degeneracy due to the megalomaniac theories of Trietschke. Yet if we but refer to Sir Herbert Maxwell's "Life of Wellington" (published in 1900) we shall find that the Iron Duke writing to his mother in August, 1807, after describing the failure of the German contingent under General von Linsingen, goes on to say: "I can, however, assure you that, from the general of the Germans down to the smallest drum-boy in their legion the earth never groaned with such a set of murdering, infamous villains." "They murdered," he says further on, "robbed and ill-treated the peasantry wherever they went." It must be remembered that English eye-witnesses of the Thirty Years' War assure us that after a victory the Germans always began a massacre, slaughtering soldiers, civilians, men and women and children indiscriminately. The German, in fact, is a true chip of the old block—the Goth, his ancestor.

British Battleship Drill

Mr. George McLaren Brown, European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway in London, has forwarded the accompanying pictures, which allow those of us who are safe at home a glimpse of those who are keeping us safe at the risk of their own lives. The first illustration portrays musketry drill aboard a British battleship in the Mediterranean Sea, and the second shows a number of Jack Tars loading a naval quick firing gun.

Undoubtedly the greatest force engaged in the present conflict is the British navy. Ever since the outbreak of war it has guarded the motherland and the dominions jealously as a tigress protects her young. Silently the navy moves about the waters of the deep in search of enemies that might be out on errands of destruction. Seldom they appear in sight, but when they do appear a few barks from her mouth terrifies and chases them away.

For the deck, it was their field of fame
And the ocean was their grave.

Thus wrote Thomas Campbell of the old-time British mariners. It is true that the ocean is to the sons of Britain as familiar a field of activity as the land is to the sons of other nations. Lord Byron represented the thought of the average Britisher when he wrote:

And I have loved, thee, Ocean! and my joy
Of youthful sports was on thy breast to be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward;
from a boy
I wanton'd with thy breakers—they to me
Were a delight; and if the freshening sea
Made them a terror—'twas a pleasing fear,
For I was as it were a child of thee,
And trusted to thy billows, far and near,
And laid my hand upon thy mane—
as I do here.

But the sons of the British Empire are amphibious creatures. They can live, and fight, and die as well on land as on the sea. The third picture portrays British soldiers dressed in their winter clothing somewhere in France in the vicinity of the trenches.

TRANSPORT SHIPS

Since the outbreak of the war transport vessels with their freight of troops, guns, and provisions have steamed to and fro across the Channel with the regularity of clockwork. Hundreds of ships were commandeered for this purpose, cargo boats, cattle boats, steamers, and emigrant vessels being pressed into service. Each transport was fitted so as to carry horses, guns, motor cars, aeroplanes, and the hundred-and-one necessities of war. Great cranes on the quay side hoist the guns, with their waterproof covers, on to the transports, and they are firmly stacked in the hold with other heavy objects where weight does not perceptibly interfere with the balance of the ship. When possible, horses are led on to the transports through covered-in gangways, but those who prove vicious are coaxed into a wooden cage and are slung on board by cranes. Each horse on the vessel is placed in a narrow stall only 2 feet 5 inches in width. It is not possible for the animal to lie down in this narrow prison, so to provide the horse with some means of resting his legs, a canvas sling or a hammock is placed under his body. On this the animal can rest his whole weight and can sleep without falling.

The captain of a transport has to convey the troops on board safely to their destination, and there his responsibility ends. The feeding of the soldiers is in the hands of the Government, who supply the food and drink necessary for men and horses during the voyage. A military commander sails with every transport and controls the troops. In the present war the troop transports cast off from the English shore with little excitement or fuss. There is no shrieking of sirens, playing of bands, or crowds or hand-waving friends to give the ships a "send-off," as was the case in the South African War, when voyages considerably longer than that that across the Channel had to be negotiated.

Honor Redeemed

"A burglar has won the Victoria Cross, seventy other burglars have laid down their lives for their country, and more than 700 persons listed in police records are now fighting for Great Britain," said the Bishop of Thetford at Richmond, Yorkshire.

Frying Need Not Smell

If the disagreeable smell of frying pervades the house, examine the bottom of the frying-pan, and you will find it covered with burnt fat which smells as soon as it is hot. To prevent the smell, besides washing the pan with strong soda water just after it has been used, it is necessary to boil it out in a larger vessel with soda in the water. Rinse, put in some clean water, and the smell will no longer exist.

China Cement

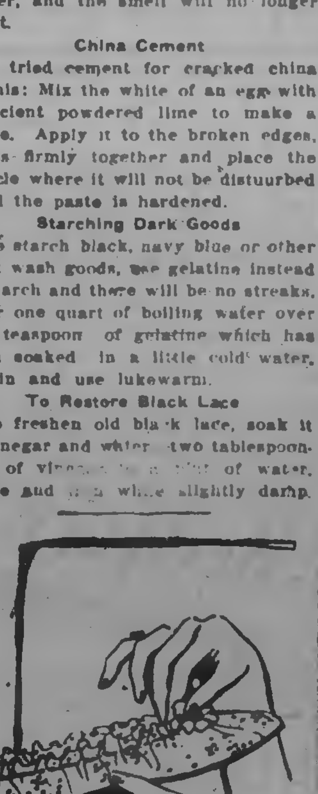
A tried cement for cracked china is this: Mix the white of an egg with sufficient powdered lime to make a paste. Apply it to the broken edges, press firmly together and place the article where it will not be distuurbed until the paste is hardened.

Starching Dark Goods

To starch black, navy blue or other dark wash goods, use gelatine instead of starch and there will be no streaks. Pour one quart of boiling water over one teaspoon of gelatine which has been soaked in a little cold water. Strain and use lukewarm.

To Restore Black Lace

To freshen old black lace, soak it in vinegar and water—two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a pint of water. Rinse and [illegible] while slightly damp.



PASTEURIZING MILK

Easy Method For Home Use—Makes Milk Perfectly Safe For Baby

There are times when families are obliged to use milk secured from unknown sources. Although milk cannot be made perfect by pasteurization, the dangers from it can be lessened by this process.

It is estimated that one-third of all children born die before they are three years old, and one of the chief causes of mortality among infants is unwholesome milk. For these very reasons it is fitting that mothers should know the simple way of pasteurising milk.

The following brief directions will serve:

Plug bottles nearly full of milk with absorbent or other cotton. Place them in an upright position in a vessel which has a false bottom and which contains enough water to rise above the milk in the bottles.

Heat the vessel until the water is 155 degrees Fahrenheit, or to boiling point if special precautions are required, but do not let it boil more than a moment.

Remove from the fire and keep tightly covered for half an hour. At the end of that time take the bottles from the vessel and cool as quickly as possible either by cold water or ice. Keep in a cold place.

Milk prepared in this way will usually keep about twenty-four hours and is best used within that time.

A covered tin pail may be utilized as the vessel, and an inverted pie pan with perforated bottom may be used as the false bottom.

Mutton or Lamb Pie

Cook two pounds of mutton or lamb in little water until all meat slips from bones. Salt after cooking. Place meat in pudding dish. Measure broth, and to each cup add one cup of milk. Blend a heaping tablespoon of flour for each cup of liquid; boil and turn over meat in dish. Season to taste. Make biscuit dough of one cup of flour, two teaspoons of lard, half teaspoon of salt, and three teaspoons of baking powder. Cut with knife until all is well mixed. Add half cup of cold cooked rice and half cup of milk or water. Must be soft. Shape into biscuit, put bit of butter on each, place on top of meat and bake 12 minutes in hot oven.

THE CULT OF KHAKI

The following article on the paramount popularity of khaki appeared in the London Times:

The red coat and the black, fabled in other days irresistible to the feminine eye, have surrendered at discretion to the dun-colored suit of the modern campaigner. Khaki's the only wear, and lucky is he who has youth enough or sufficient standing in the service to put it on; for thereby he has womankind at his feet. In itself, particularly in the officer's uniform, and the horse soldier's at that, this unostentatious cloth is curiously becoming. Splendid and dazzling ceremonial uniforms may be, but this quiet habit has a spell of its own, for it approximates in its perfection to the excellence of faultless civilian dress, without abating one jot of martial quality. It is, indeed, most martial, and the god of war himself would look well in it. In the mass it suggests efficiency and eternal fitness; it carries, too, a note of reassurance in its protective mimicry, a hint borrowed from birds and animals. As you look at the long drab lines you know that no life will be wantonly sacrificed to needless display. The red coat had its undeniable glory and inspiration, but it took a wanton toll of bravery. It lies by, therefore, for gala days and the happy celebration of peace, when that in good time shall be here. Meanwhile, it is the day of the "khaki-man."

On fair lips the phrase "khaki-man" has become something sacrosanct. It is pronounced with a reverent affection which "red-coat" never won. It implies at the present hour the whole sum of womanly devotion. And in certain circles it carries an added piquancy, because of the unwonted constitution of our new armies. The society man as private and non-commissioned officer is just sufficiently bizarre to be lionized in a manner impossible to his superior in other times. Then the soldier one met was an officer as a matter of course, and it would have been banal to insist upon his rank or even to mention it. One did not say, "We dined last night, one colonel, two majors and three captains." Atrocious! But in these paradoxical days it is quite permissible to say, "Such a jolly dinner last night. Only think, one private, two corporals, and a color-sergeant!" And the private who has to call his own son "sir" on duty is a most exquisite, rare turn to [illegible] met. Better still if he took one to dinner.

Drab as it is, the inherent and becoming manliness of khaki prevails. Our fair allies across the Channel looked for an expeditionary force ablaze in traditional scarlet, and for a moment they were disappointed. Only for a moment. The man Thomas Atkins justified his garb and his garb justified him. Jeannette, were she questioned to-day would say she prefers him as he is, in quiet campaigning kit. She treasures his bronze badges as fervently as if they had been glistening nickel, or even silver. And here at home it is the same. Watch the returned on short leaves in any public place, fashionable or unfashionable, and see how the woman's eyes brighten and their manner radiates worship as they fete their warrior. For them he is no dull figure. Yet, essentially, they bow still before bright color as of old, for their soldier in khaki wears for them the red badge of courage.

EIGHT POINTS END FOR WILEY AGAINST BOUCHER

The vice-skips' bonspiel at the curling rink last night got away to a good start and everyone was on deck when the first draw was made at 7 o'clock. In nearly every round there were some contests that were as closely played as in the Tankard or District Cup series. The veteran Sam Ray was playing a great game as vice for Skip Metheral. For the second time in the history of the rink, an eight end was scored by J. Wiley against G. Boucher. The honor of being the first curler to put over the eight-end was Mr. T. Matthews, who outgeneralled Andy Webb last season.

The results and scores:

Preliminary

Seymour won from Harstone by default.

Metheral, 8. Dobbin, 7.

Bowes, 14; Towney, 8.

Parsons, 10; P. D. Fitzgerald, 7.

First Round

Metheral, 8; Seymour, 7.

Parsons, 6; Bowes, 5.

Patterson, 13; Eason, 4.

Pennefather, 10; Oke, 7.

Skinner, 13; Widdess, 7.

Wiley, 13; Boucher, 14.

Logie won from Adamson by default.

Bradburn, 8; Benor, 6.

Second Round

Patterson, 11. Pennefather, 3.

C.G.E. BOWLERS GAVE PRINTERS HARD TUSSLE TO WIN THREE

Great bowling was seen last night on the Water Street alleys in the City League, when the Printers took three games from C.G.E. The second game ended in a tie and an extra frame was rolled to break it and was won by the Printers. Both teams rolled in great form. Capt. Bishop of C.G.E. had the high count of the evening with 587 in three games and Moore of the Printers had 558. Cairns and Early also topped the 500 mark. Benny Moore had the high single of 221.

The scores:

Printers
Moore	152	221	185	558
Henderson	196	146	156	498
Myland	160	164	168	492
Wilson	164	134	186	484
Cairns	185	146	217	548
Totals	857	811	912	2580

Team average 860.

C. G. E.
Nicholl	143	139	190	472
Early	160	165	184	509
Somerville	166	162	150	478
Jardine	150	165	145	460
Bishop	215	180	192	587
Totals	834	811	861	2506

Team average 835⅔.

What's in a name? Come around Monday night and see for yourself. Capt. Bishop has received and accepted a challenge to prove his right to enter a team under the name of C.G.E. Bowlers in the City League. There are those in the C.G.E. works who feel sure that the present league team is not the strongest that can be secured and therefore it is not entitled to use the name. A three-game match to settle this question will be rolled on Monday night between the present league team and C.G.E. All Stars, captained by Mr. Langley.

We would get more enjoyment out of a dollar if it took as long to spend it as it does to earn it.

For Short Stemmed Flowers.

Fill a shallow dish or bowl half full of water. Throw in eight or ten common bottle corks. Arrange the flowers among the corks, which will be hidden entirely by the leaves and petals of the flowers and at the same time hold the flowers and leaves about the water in a most satisfactory manner. This suggestion is especially useful for violets, pansies and other short stemmed flowers.

Camembert Toast.

Take one can of American Camembert cheese, which is wrapped in tinfoil and is crustless, therefore the most economical to buy, and spread it thickly on toast rounds. Dust with cayenne pepper and salt, set under the gas broiler a few seconds to heat and serve at once. This is very nice with the salad course or for a late supper.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MANY a man works fourteen hours a day to the end that his widow has money enough to support a second husband in ease and luxury.

A woman can pretend that she likes a new kind of salad so successfully that she deceives herself.

There are some things that last longer than a hat that is out of style, but not many.

Not every man has the luck to get sick when he is confronted with a disagreeable task.

Because a man's name is well known is no sign that his credit is good with the corner grocer.

An Ever Popular Sport.

Everybody has played leapfrog, and doubtless folks, young and old, will continue the simple sport. Little people are especially fond of leapfrog, and the nimblest jumper is somewhat of a hero among his playfellows. Boys are more devoted to the game than girls, skirts being somewhat of a hindrance in taking a flying leap over a comrade's back. The camera man caught the two youngsters shown just as they were in the midst of their game.

Sleepy Time Story That Comes From Faraway Japan.

HOW A FISH LOST ITS SHELL.

Very Queer Medicine That Was Prescribed For an Undersea Queen—Adventures of a Monkey and a Tortoise Severe Punishment For a Tattle-Tale

Well, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, tonight I am going to tell

A FISH STORY.

Did you ever hear how the jellyfish lost its shell? The Japanese say it was in this way:

Once in the long ago the jellyfish had a shell which covered his soft body and kept him from getting hurt.

He was quite a somebody at the court of the sea queen and treated others with a very grand air indeed.

It happened once that the sea queen was taken quite ill. The king was much troubled.

At last some one said that if the queen were given the liver of a monkey to eat she would get well.

Now, there are no monkeys in the ocean, so when the sea king made up his mind that the queen must try a monkey liver he sent out the tortoise to look for a monkey.

The tortoise traveled until he came to an island where there were a number of monkeys playing and chattering in the treetops.

The tortoise was pretty sure none of the monkeys would go with him willingly, so he tried a trick. He lay down under a tree and waited until a frolicsome little monkey came so near that he could catch it and hold it with his claws.

Then he told the monkey that unless it came with him of [illegible] own free will and without struggle he would kill it.

So the monkey said all right, he would go with the tortoise. They started out, the monkey riding on the tortoise's back.

This was the first monkey which had ever visited the ocean world, and every one was interested in it.

"Poor thing! I wonder if it knows its liver is to be eaten," said the jellyfish as he watched the monkey frolicking around teasing the fishes.

So the jellyfish took the monkey aside and told it the fate in store.

The monkey had no wish to lose his liver, and so he pretended to the king and queen that he must go back to land and get his liver, which he had left hanging on a tree.

He went back as he had come, on the tortoise's back, but that was the last seen of him, for as soon as he got safely to shore he ran quickly away and never came back.

When he learned that the jellyfish had tattled to the monkey the sea king was very angry and said that after that the jellyfish should be punished by losing its shell and having to go undressed forever after.

PARCEL WAS RETURNED

KINGSTON, March 16.— A parcel of foodstuffs sent from Kingston to Germany three month ago through the American Consulate came back this morning marked "Could not be located." The prisoner had likely been moved to some other internment camp. The return of the parcel caused surprise.

Plain.

"Why are men so stupid?"

"Why?"

"Yes."

"They are the opposite of women, aren't they?"

Some Exceptions.

"Brevity is the soul of wit."

"That may be, but I can see neither wit nor soul in the brief statement, 'Please remit.'"

The Cheerful Season.

Hi, there, old sport!
Cut it short:
Put that large grouch
In a pouch.
Lose your visage grim.
Trim
Down that sour disposition,
Blanket your suspicion
And let a smile
Every twice in awhile
Chase
Itself up and down your face.
It is worse than treason
At the Christmas season
To go round looking as though
You'd like to throw
Rocks at your mother-in-law
Or to saw
Some one in two
To make it pleasant for you.
Loosen up and be gay.
Throw small change away,
Be reckless and wild
And make some child
Glad you were born.
Blow a horn.
Get a drum
And come
Prancing down the street
On your hind feet.
This isn't the time
To be plotting crime,
For untiring
Conspiring
Against the defenseless poor.
Sure
Not!
Such notions are all rot.
Get out a dollar
And see how loud you can make it holler.
Shed a five
To show that you are alive.
This is the season of good cheer.
Do you hear?
If you do
Blow yourself a few.

Lieut. Reg. Lockhart of Toronto is visiting in the city.

The 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. held a very successful tea yesterday afternoon, combined with a collection of rubber which exceeded the expectations of the committee. The room was beautifully decorated in green with shamrocks. The autograph quilt was on exhibition. The 57th crest in the centre was beautifully embroidered. The hostesses were Mrs. George Burnham and Miss Florrie Burnham, Mrs. Duncan Walker was in charge of the tea table and the assistants were Miss Gladman, Miss Marion Rush, Miss Worth, Miss F. Collins, Miss F. Rubidge, Miss Isabella Hay, Miss Lillian Rogers, Miss Lea Rodgers, Mrs. Gemmel and Mrs. Nicholls.

Rev. W. Higgs and Miss Higgs of Millbrook were in the city last evening.

Mrs. B. Dawson of Campbellford was in the city today.

Miss Gertrude Hill of Hastings, graduate of the Peterborough Business College, has taken a position in the Trent Valley Canal offices.

Mrs. Hairstone and Mrs. Mowat will be the hostesses and Mrs. Bookhout and Mrs. T. F. Matthews will pour tea at the St. Patrick's afternoon tea at the recruiting rooms on Simcoe St. tomorrow afternoon.

Pte. Gordon Cummings of the 204th Beavers Battalion, Toronto, is expected in the city shortly on his last leave.

Mr. John A. Sabine, distributing agent for the Columbia Graphophone Co., is in the city.

Mr. D. Drape of Hastings has come to Peterborough to reside.

Mrs. C. Graham is a guest of Mrs. H. A. Sculthorp, Walton Street, Port Hope. Mrs. Graham was the guest of honor at a bridge party yesterday afternoon.

INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION

The organization of the Peterborough Industrial Association will be put in motion at the City Clerk's office this evening.

The special committee appointed to complete the organization work is composed of Mayor Duffus, Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Denham, R. Denne, R. Turner, J. J. Hartley and Joseph Begley.

MISS HORSFIELD'S DISPLAY

Miss J. Horsfield has a very attractive display of hats in her show room at 435 George St. All the latest styles and models from the leading fashion shops of New York and Toronto are to be found on view. A few special designs are favorably criticized by the ladies who delight in elegant creations.

DANGER IN THE BOTTLE

Samuel G. Dixon, Pennsylvania State Commissioner of Health, says that the glass milk bottle "will have to give way to the destructible bottle, that will never be used a second time." Dr. Dixon sees danger of infection in promiscuous distribution and gathering of bottles.

MAP DRAWING CONTEST IS CLOSED; JUDGES AT WORK

Name of Prize Winner Will be Announced in The Review of March 24---Excellent Work of Pupils.

The Map of Canada drawing contest, which was started by The Review some time ago, closed on Saturday, March 10, at 6 p.m., but competitors will be allowed until March 17th to get in their entries. A large number of drawings have been submitted, and all of these are far above the average. The school children of the city and county took a lively interest in the contest, the competition was keen, and the high standard of the work sent in is creditable to the pupils and teachers alike.

The advantages of such a contest are as numerous as they are apparent. It has developed a deeper sense of love for and loyalty to Canada by encouarging the study, and so making the children familiar with the vast extent and great resources of this country as well as with the degree of development already attained. Map drawing as a training for the young has been recommended by al the ablest educationists in the country. The competition just closed has had the result of inducing the school children to far surpass all previous efforts, however great, made in this line in the past.

The interest in the competition has not been confined to those eligible to take parti n the contest. The teachers co-operated by entering the majority, and, in some cases, all of the pupils, under their charge. Parents, too, have been generous and kind in their expressions of appreciations of what this paper has done in the interest of the little ones.

The prize winners will be difficult to determine owing to the high excellency of the work submitted, but the judges are now at work, and The Review hopes to be able to announce the names of the successful competitors in the issue of Saturday, March 24th.

North Monaghan Council

The council of North Monaghan met in the County Council chamber on Monday, March 12, all the members of the council being present and Reeve Rye in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mrs. M. E. Parker, re discount on taxes, etc.

Ontario Department of Agriculture township representatives.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Bell that Mr. H. G. Webber and Mr. W. Robson, the representatives for 1916, be re-appointed for 1917.

Mr. Bert Sanderson, the assessor, asked for lots on which back taxes had been returned to the county on Plan 37 be transferred to Plan 49. Moved by Messrs. Williams and Bell that the request be granted.

W. H. Bradburn, township treasurer, asked for an increase in salary. Moved by Messrs. Williams and Dobbin that the council refer back to deputations and that Mr. W. C. Fallis be heard.

Mr. Fallis stated his reasons regarding back taxes caused by a wrong assessment in 1913.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Henry that his arrears of taxes on his 1916 tax bill for $5.37 for 1913 be refunded.

Moved by Messrs. Henry and Dobbin, that Mr. Fallis be refunded five per cent. on the total of the bill which he ordered the tax collector on or before Dec. 23.

No action was taken on Mrs. Parker's communication.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Dobbin that the communications not specially dealt with be received and filed.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Williams that the township treasurer's salary be $160 for the year 1917.

The auditors' statement was read. Moved by Messrs. Bell and Henry that the statement be accepted and published.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Henry that he meeting adjourn until Saturday, April 7th, at 2 p.m., in the Court House, Peterborough.

FICTION MADE TO ORDER.

Weird Stories With Small Beginnings Rounded Out by Gossips.

Most people in London are hearing, in one form or another, the legend of Lord Kitchener being alive and a prisoner in Germany, says the Manchester Guardian. It is now as popular, and of course as baseless, as the legend of the Russian soldiers in England was in 1914, and takes quite as many forms. I have taken the trouble to follow out the course of these fables, but each time its origin eludes discovery. What impresses one most is the extraordinary ingenuity of the stories, the wealth of circumstances surrounding them, and how they always begin with a lie. The most extraordinary form is the charwoman's story.

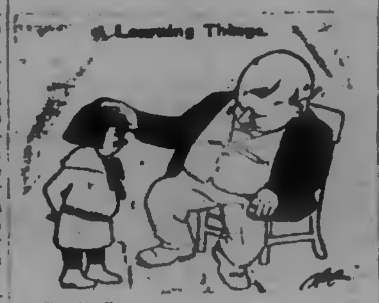
This charwoman told her employer that at another house where she worked the lady was always in mourning for a son who went down in the Hampshire. One day the charwoman found the lady dressed in white, and the lady told her that she had just received a letter from her son to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, having been saved from the wreck, and "you would be very much surprised to hear who is with me here."

Inquiries were made, and the charwoman admitted that there was no such lady, but that the story came from some third party who could not be traced. She had added some of the circumstances herself. Another form is this:

"A business man was told by the manageress of a factory connected with his business that one of the girls of the factory had had a letter from her brother, who had been on the Hampshire, to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, and Lord Kitchener was with him. The girl, she said, had taken the letter to the War Office. Again, it was found that the origin was that one girl had heard some such story from the untraceable relative of a married sister.

The explanation of these personal legends is probably the same—the ancient human belief that a great hero cannot be overcome even by death, and the human desire to attain importance among strangers by claiming a personal connection with a great event.

Learning Things.



"Bobby."

"Yes, pa."

"I don't see that you are learning much at school."

"Don't you think so?"

"Can't say I do."

"Why, pa, I learned to make more mistakes this month than I did [illegible]"

Extremely Severe

Dyspepsia

Halifax (N.S.) Sergeant in the C.E.F. Cured Completely by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

Sgt. MacNeil.

SERGEANT DUNCAN MACNEIL, of the CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, writing from Europe (his home address is 116, PLEASANT STREET, HALIFAX, N.S.) says:—

"For six years I suffered from frequent attacks of Dyspepsia, each attack being more acute than the last. During one of these attacks life would become almost unbearable, and I would have to regulate my diet to liquid foods only, often being in bed for days at a time. I was under the care of a Physician, and tried all the remedies on the market, spending a small fortune, but obtained little or no relief. I became utterly discouraged, and had almost given up all hope of Cure.

"When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned, and I had to go to hospital. While in hospital a friend told me of Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I decided to try them. The first box brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected.

"Since taking Dr. Cassell's Tablets I have been through hardships almost beyond human endurance, but not once has my old trouble returned to bother me."

The above is the frank, clear testimony of a Canadian soldier. He has been cured of extremely severe dyspepsia, which even the healthful life of the training ground could not overcome, and he wishes to tell others that he owes that cure to Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION

The activity of certain gentlemen who are advocating national prohibition indicates their view that it would injure the Federal government if they passed such legislation. They probably have in mind the reverses sustained by the Conservatives in several provinces because of their espousal of prohibition and they think similar results can be obtained against the Government at Ottawa if it can be induced to pass a federal law. We venture no opinion as to this, but we desire to point out that legislation was passed last year by the Federal Government which, if accepted, will give probably all the prohibition the people will stand. Under this statute any province which legislates against the possession and use of intoxicating liquors within the province bring automatically into effect this federal law which penalizes anyone who sends liquor into such province. This will stop the importation of liquor into the province, but no province has yet availed itself of these provisions. A convention is now gathering to ask the Federal Government for further legislation. Let them make use of the law already at hand before reaching for more. Why ask that the whole Dominion be covered by a prohibitive law which the most advanced province—speaking from a temperance standpoint—has not got.

Save Your Waste for the Play Grounds

PETERBORO' COULD RAISE $6000 FROM WASTE PAPER ALONE.

What becomes of the waste paper? Dr. Jas. L. Hughes of Toronto has computed that if all the daily papers published in that city were turned in after being read $700 daily would be realized; that if each home were to turn in 10c worth of waste paper, rags, rubber, and old metal, per month, over $100,000 would be secured.

Apply this to our own city. There are at least 5,000 homes; 10c of waste per month from each home would amount to $6,000, enough to equip and supervise four playgrounds, give $3,000 for Red Cross purposes and have $1,000 left for some other benevolent project, such as assisting the city council in keeping down the tax rate to 28 mills.

Two pairs of old rubbers are worth 10c; 20 lbs. of paper the same; and a good bag of rags 90c. Of course the thrifty housewife will find that these prices do not prevail with the visiting junkman; he is the middleman and must have his profits.

Save your waste for the supervised playgrounds: the committee intend making a collection next month.

Annie E. Mowat, Convener.

FICTION MADE TO ORDER.

Weird Stories With Small Beginnings Rounded Out by Gossips.

Most people in London are bearing, in one form or another, the legend of Lord Kitchener being alive and a prisoner in Germany, says the Manchester Guardian. It is now as popular, and of course as baseless, as the legend of the Russian soldiers in England was in 1914, and takes quite as many forms. I have taken the trouble to follow out the course of these fables, but each time its origin eludes discovery. What impresses one most is the extraordinary ingenuity of the stories, the wealth of circumstances surrounding them, and how they always begin with a lie. The most extraordinary form is the charwoman's story.

This charwoman told her employer that at another house where she worked the lady was always in mourning for a son who went down in the Hampshire. One day the charwoman found the lady dressed in white, and the lady told her that she had just received a letter from her son to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, having been saved from the wreck, and "you would be very much surprised to hear who is with me here."

Inquiries were made, and the charwoman admitted that there was no such lady, but that the story came from some third party who could not be traced. She had added some of the circumstances herself. Another form is this:

"A business man was told by the manageress of a factory connected with his business the one of the girls of the factory had had a letter from her brother, who had been on the Hampshire, to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, and Lord Kitchener was with him. The girl, she said, had taken the letter to the War Office. Again, it was found that the origin was that one girl had heard some such story from the untraceable relative of a married sister.

The explanation of these personal legends is probably the same—the ancient human belief that a great hero cannot be overcome even by death, and the human desire to attain importance among strangers by claiming a personal connection with a great event.

Extremely Severe

Dyspepsia

Halifax (N.S.) Sergeant in the C.E.F. Cured Completely by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

SERGEANT DUNCAN MacNEIL, of the CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, [illegible] 110, PLEASANT STREET, HALIFAX, N.S.) says:—"For six years I suffered from frequent attacks of Dyspepsia, each attack being more acute than the last. During one of these attacks life would become a most unbearable, and I would have to regulate my diet to liquid foods only, often being in bed for days at a time. I was under the care of a Physician and tried all the remedies on the market, spending a small fortune, but obtained little or no relief. I became utterly discouraged, and had almost given up all hope of Cure.

"When the war broke out I joined the Expeditionary Force and came to England. I had not been long there, however, when my old trouble returned, and I had to go into hospital. While in hospital a friend told me of Dr. Cassell's Tablets and I decided to try them. The first box brought such pronounced relief that I continued the treatment. To make a long story short, a complete cure was effected.

"Since taking Dr. Cassell's Tablets I have been through hardships almost beyond human endurance, but not once has my old trouble returned to bother me."

The above is the frank, clear testimony of a Canadian soldier. He has been cured of extremely severe dyspepsia, which even the healthful life of the training ground could not overcome, and he wishes to tell others that he owes that cure to Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

The activity of certain gentlemen who are advocating national prohibition indicates their view that it would injure the Federal government if they passed such legislation. They probably have in mind the reverses sustained by the Conservatives in several provinces because of their espousal of prohibition and they think similar results can be obtained against the government at Ottawa if it can be induced to pass a federal law. We venture no opinion as to this, but we desire to point out that legislation was passed last year by the Federal Government which, if accepted, will give probably all the prohibition the people will stand. Under this statute any province which legislates against the possession and use of intoxicating liquors within the province bring automatically into effect this federal law which penalizes anyone who sends liquor into such province. This will stop the importation of liquor into the province, but no province has yet availed itself of these provisions. A convention is now gathering to ask the Federal Government for further legislation. Let them make use of the law already at hand before reaching for more. Why ask that the whole Dominion be covered by a prohibitive law which the most advanced province—speaking from a temperance standpoint—has not got

Save Your Waste for the Play Grounds

PETERBORO' COULD RAISE $6000 FROM WASTE PAPER ALONE.

What becomes of the waste paper? Dr. Jas. L. Hughes of Toronto has computed that if all the daily papers published in that city were turned in after being read $700 daily would be realized; that if each home were to turn in 10c worth of waste paper, rags, rubber, and old metal, per month, over $100,000 would be secured.

Apply this to our own city. There are at least 5,000 homes; 10c of waste per month from each home would amount to $6,000, enough to equip and supervise four playgrounds, give $3,000 for Red Cross purposes and have $1,000 left for some other benevolent project, such as assisting the city council in keeping down the tax rate to 28 mills.

Two pairs of old rubbers are worth 10c; 20 lbs. of paper the same; and a good bag of rags 20c. Of course the thrifty housewife will find that these prices do not prevail with the visiting junkman; he is the middleman and must have his profits.

Save your waste for the supervised playgrounds: the committee intend making a collection next month.

THE FLYING SQUIRRELS.

How They Are Able to Sail Through the Air Like a Parachute.

Of all the tenants of the woods the flying squirrel is perhaps the most seldom seen, yet this is not due to any scarcity of the little animal, which, in fact, is among the most numerous of the squirrel family, but to its habit of moving almost entirely at night. Should you doubt this last statement, enter some patch of forest convenient to your home and strike solidly upon the trunks of such trees as appear to be dead and have one or more holes in the trunk; in about one time out of five your efforts will be rewarded by the appearance in the evening, as if by magic, of the bright eyes and upstanding ears of a flying squirrel.

These squirrels do not, of course, fly, but their legs are connected at the "wrists" with a light membrane which serves as a sort of parachute, although it has some of the possibilities of an aeroplane. Before making a flight the squirrel will run rapidly up the trunk of a tree and, when he has attained a sufficient height, spring boldly off into space.

With legs spread wide apart, so as to present the greatest possible surface to the air, and his extraordinarily wide and fluffy tail serving as a rudder, the squirrel sails swiftly through the air, often for 100 feet or even more, until he reaches the trunk of another tree, up which he runs in order to attain height for a new flight.

By this method flying squirrels are able rapidly to cover long distances with little exertion, for often, when nearing the end of a long sail, they will point themselves upward and by means of their "rudders" and the impetus given will rise almost to the height at which they started—just as a boy riding down hill may be carried over a lesser upgrade at the foot.—A. E. Swoyer in St. Nicholas.

Editorial Troubles.

The printer's foreman entered the editorial sanctum and was surprised to find the editor's face badly bruised.

"Had a fall downstairs?" asked the foreman.

"No. It's our account of the Jones-Smith wedding, which ought to read: 'Miss Smith's dimpled, shining face formed a pleasant contrast with Mr. Jones' strong, bold physiognomy.'

"And this is how it reads: 'Miss Smith's pimpled, skinny face formed a pleasant contrast with Mr. Jones' stony, bald physiognomy.'

"Send that proofreader to me at once," he continued, throwing one blood stained handkerchief in the wastebasket and searching for a clean one. "There's fight left in me yet."

"Say, why do you always look so glum?"

"Me?"

"Yes. Why don't you look on the bright side?"

"You don't know what you are talking about."

"Oh, don't I?"

"No. Every other member of my family belongs to the Look Up and Smile club, to the Don't Worry club and to the Sweetness and Light association, and I assure you that they are consistent members, so I find that it is necessary for some one to work about the place and keep things in order and stand the strain generally."

HELPED TO DEVELOP THE COAST PROVINCE

Lieut.-Governor Barnard of British Columbia Long a Big Figure in Public Affairs

Hon. Frank S. Barnard of Victoria who was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia in succession to Hon. Thomas W. Paterson, was only four years of age when he went to the West, in 1860, twelve years before the coast province entered Confederation, and his career therefore covers almost the whole period of British Columbia history. It was in 1860 that the first session of the Second Parliament of British Columbia was held, and when the idea of a truly popular government began to be entertained by the people.

The future Lieutenant-Governor was born at Toronto, May 16, 1856, the eldest son of Francis Jones and Ellen (Stillman) Barnard, and is a brother of Mr. G. H. Barnard, K.C., M.P.

Mr. Barnard went with his mother to British Columbia in 1860 to join the husband and father, who had preceded them in 1859. He attended the Victoria Collegiate School, and later entered Hellmuth College at London, Ont. His first business experience came as a clerk in the offices of the British Columbia Express Company, and his rise to positions of greater and greater responsibility followed rapidly as a recognition of his developing powers and wisely directed talents.

HON. F. S. BARNARD

In 1881 he was appointed general manager of the British Columbia Express Company, an enterprise founded by his father in 1862, known as Barnard's Express, which operated lines of stages from the coast into the Cariboo country and generally throughout the interior, as well as doing a banking, freighting and fast express business, with its head office in Victoria, to all points in the province.

In 1898 Mr. Barnard resigned the [illegible], upon his election to the House of Commons; but his interests and activities were constantly broadening. He has been prominently identified with the growth of Vancouver, having been a director from 1885 to 1889 of the Hastings Sawmilling Company and the Vancouver Improvement Company. He was manager of the Consolidated Railway & Light Company of that city in 1894-95. Associated with a London, England, firm, he promoted the British Columbia Electric Railway in 1896; was managing director until 1898, when he became chairman of the local advisory board.

With the Kootenay country Mr. Barnard was intimately connected in the early days. He was one of the founders of the Columbia & Kootenay Steam Navigation Company, the Nakusp & Slocan Railway Company, and the Nelson & Fort Sheppard Railway Company, all of which enterprises have been absorbed by the larger transportation companies.

In Victoria Mr. Barnard is connected with various big mercantile and shipping companies. In the Okanagan country Mr. Barnard was at one time owner of the famous B.X. ranch, and Barnard Avenue, the principal street in Vernon, was so called in his honor, as was Barnard Street, Vancouver.

He served as alderman of the City of Victoria in 1886 and 1887, and was elected to the House of Commons as Conservative member for Yale-Cariboo in 1888. He was again chosen at the general election of 1891 and sat until 1896, but did not stand at the general election of that year. In 1902 he unsuccessfully contested Victoria City.

His broad business experience and his public spirit combined to make him a most useful and valuable factor in shaping affairs of general interest.

A TRIBUTE TO THE COW

Of all the animal creation the best friend to man is the homely cow. As a food producer she is our mainstay and dependence. From the new-born babe to the aged invalid we are all more or less dependent on her for our existence. Her produce commands the highest price in all the best markets of the world. Without her we would be deprived of many of the luxuries of life and not a few of its bare necessities. Without her the infant would cry in vain for sustenance, while the nations of the earth, deprived of her life-sustaining products, would become impoverished and disappear.

In prosperity and in adversity the cow is ever man's best friend. She can be depended upon to do her share in lifting the mortgage from the old homestead. She piles the tables of the rich with rare and costly viands. She paves the way for many a poor farm boy to enter the High school and the agricultural college. She tides the farmer over the hard times and helps boost him into prosperity. When he has fallen into a rut and "a friend in need is a friend indeed," she can be relied upon to come to the rescue and with her produce set him on his feet again. Indeed, it may be truly said that of all the animals that contribute to the support of mankind none rewards us so promptly and so liberally for kindness and food and care as the homely cow.—Our Dumb Animals.

OXYGEN FOR INSANITY

Remarkable Treatment Discovered Used Successfully by French Doctor

A new and extraordinary use for oxygen has been found by Dr. Toulouse, chief physician of the Villejuif Insane Asylum. He finds it a most valuable aid in the treatment of madness.

Dr. Toulouse makes certain that the oxygen in the steel cylinders in which he receives it is pure and free from nitrogen; then he fills small glass flasks with it. A rubber bulb enables him to regulate the pressure in the flasks, and a rubber tube connects these with a fine hypodermic needle. Through this 250 cubic centimetres of oxygen are injected under the skin.

A physician who watched the operation and its effects upon patients says the results are remarkable among patients in a condition of acute mental confusion, who are always greatly improved and often cured entirely by a few injections. The excited and victims of insomnia become calm and lucid.

In cases of acute mania, dementia, epileptic fits, and certain cases of melancholia good results have been obtained. The oxygen treatment is now being tried upon other forms of insanity.

A Shire Mare's Fetlocks

Symbiotic mange is produced by the action of parasites. The treatment must be directed to the destruction of the parasites and their eggs. Three dressing at intervals are necessary; but the bedding should be burned, and the floor should be scrubbed with boiling water, caustic soda, and 5 per cent. of carbolic acid. Woodwork, stable brooms, and all utensils used should also be treated similarly. The following dressing well rubbed in legs with a spoke brush, and repeated two or three times at intervals of seven days, will generally effect a cure: One pound of soft soap; simmer over fire in a gallon of water, constantly stirring till dissolved; remove from fire, and add three-quarters of a pint of paraffin oil; stir well till it looks creamy, when it is fit for use.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas.—"After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. Lowery, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

MORE ECONOMY!

War Thrift of European Housewives Applied to Us.

ARE WE TOO WASTEFUL?

Sample Menus Tell How Leftovers May Be Turned Into Tasty Meals—A Plea For Plainer Furnishings That Require Less Care.

Carelessness with the food supply is regarded as the greatest source of waste in British homes. "It is the waste, not that which is legitimately consumed in our homes, which adds to the burden of the present high cost of living."

Here are some samples of the "war economy" hints to the manager of the kitchen:

Nine women out of every ten throw away the water in which potatoes have been cooked. The tenth cuts a slice of bacon into small pieces, fries it and in the fat cooks a tablespoonful of minced onion, mixes a tablespoonful of flour with a little water, seasons to taste, adds it all to the potato stock—and she has a savory soup.

A tempting little hot dish for supper may be made from several kinds of vegetables if they are chopped, mixed with egg, formed into croquettes, dipped into egg and breadcrumbs, fried and served with brown sauce. Cold boiled potatoes may be remodeled au gratin, creamed or used for salad, and the saucerful of baked beans (not enough to serve again) may be advantageously disposed of in the making of soup.

The cupful of cereal which is left over may be used for cream soup, with either half stock and half milk or all stock.

By a cultivation of simplicity in the home the expense would be cut down and the household work reduced. Rooms with buff colored background and a few pieces of furniture of modest design and one or two pictures or rare pieces are the right sort of thing, say these preachers of frugality. And, for all the plainness of such surroundings, they may be made very charming by a little planning or originality on the part of the housewife.

Labor saving devices in the home are recommended as one step toward thrift. By their use the number of hands employed about the house is reduced.

And even in the use of coal and gas the housewife is advised how to save a penny here or there. For instance, here is a valuable pointer in one of the "war economy" hints:

"Utensils used on a coal fire should not be used on a gas cooker, as a coating of soot acts as a nonconductor and wastes heat." Here is another:

"Always get the oven thoroughly hot before beginning to cook and then reduce the gas. Cook as much as possible in the oven when it is once heated."

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

FOOD QUERIES

Q.—As a result of reading your articles on the dangers of excessive meat eating, I gave up flesh food entirely and am now on a strict vegetable diet. It is a full month since I have tasted meat. I did not realize on beginning my new diet that I would miss meat as much as I do. Do you think if I am persistent enough I will lose my craving for meat? R. S. L.

Perhaps you have made the change more suddenly than you should, although there is no danger in the step you have taken.

It is not uncommon for those who change from an excessive meat to a vegetable diet to imagine themselves suffering from all manner of ailments. Their troubles, however, are merely psychological and of no importance so far as good physical health is concerned.

Unless your former meat diet has left you with impaired constitution, you should soon realize the benefit of your new diet.

Autointoxication, acidosis and intestinal putrefaction usualy vanish when excessive meat eating is abandoned in connection with a whole grain and generous vegetable diet Therefore, keep up the good work and do not permit your imaginary ills to frighten you. Those who eat meat sparingly usually find the sacrifice worth while.

MILK.

Q.—What is there in milk which makes it a good food for young children? MOTHER.

Milk is primarily a body builder. It is rich in those substances which are concerned with the development of young animals.

Lime, which together with phosphorus, is necessary for building up the bone structures and teeth, is found in larger proportions in milk than in any other food. The proteins in milk are especially conducive to the growth of tender tissue and are the kind that promote the storage of tissue for future needs.

As a carrier of iron, milk is by no means negligible, although its small amount is often deplored. Iron as it is present in milk is in such a form as to be well adapted to carry on its work of enriching the blood.

The mineral salts essential to the formation of the various body fluids are not wanting in milk. In fact, there is not an organ, gland or structure in the human body for the development of which there is not some constituent in milk.

It should be borne in mind, however, that all the benefits of milk are nullified if it is not free from infection or pollution.

Milk to b egood must be clean and clean milk must be safe. Safe milk means pasteurized milk.

POACH 'EM.

Q.—If a person needs more iron in his system of mineral salts in general, in what form should he consume the yolks of eggs? L. S.

The best way is "poached."

"A Million Dollars" would not buy good digestive organs, but nutritious foods bought at our store will keep your digestive organs perfect.

THE RETAILER'S TROUBLES

Grocers, marketmen and other retailers of household supplies of common consumption find themselves enmeshed in difficulties as a result of improvements in service which they have helped to establish. It costs an enterprising retail tradesman a good deal of money to maintain a package delivery system, for example, especially in neighborhoods where housekeepers make demands on that system without regard to the convenience of the dealer. The woman who buys a single loaf of bread or someo ther article after the main order of the day has been delivered expects the grocer to place that order speedily in her hands, even though the cost of its delivery is more than the price of the article.

Charge accounts are a source of considerable expense to the dealer, not only because of the bookkeeping and the mailing of bills which are involved, but also because of occasional losses. The practice of having articles of food put up in specially prepared parcels, though sanitary and desirable for other reasons as well, is an element of additional expense. Further, it is expensive to make sales of goods in very small quantities.

As a result of the scale of prices built up in part by these various practices which are intended to attract customers, and recently increased because of the conditions growing out of the war, neighborhood retailers find their customers making special efforts to reduce living expenses. In this situation the chain stores, which do not deliver goods and do not carry charge accounts and which encourage the purchase of articles in bulk, cause the neighborhood retailers to feel the pressure of severe competition.

Some of the neighborhood retailers in other cities, in an effort to make their customers realize all that the latter are given for their money, have separated service charges from the prices of goods sold. One such firm, for example, announces reductions in prices to customers, an extra charge of five cents fore very order delivered and a small percentage added to the total of each credit account carried. Under this system cash purchases and the family market basket make a substantial saving in household expenses, whereas those who do not choose to devote time and labor to the family marketing can pay the delivery charge directly instead of paying it as part of the purchase price of the goods.

Insofar as the present high prices shall operate to bring about better methods of carrying on retail business the effect should prove permanently beneficial.

PRUNE PUDDING

This is a very delicate pudding, especially liked by the gentlemen. Boil one pound of French prunes in a little water until perfectly tender. Remove the stones and cut fine. Beat three egg whites to a very stiff froth, adding amount of sugar needed to the egg whites (if added to prunes it will be spoiled). Mix all together lightly, put into a buttered dish and bake in a slow oven. Try with a straw; when it does not adhere it is done. It is a pretty flesh color when done.

DINING IN GERMANY

If you were to take dinner at one of the best hotels in Stuttgart, Germany, just now, this is what you would be likely to get, if you paid the equivalent of a dollar for it: Soup (ingredients not stated), fish with sauce, spinach, salad with radishes, cooked apple. There would be no butter or sugar, and you could get one piece of bread if you had a bread card. After such a meal one would truly live up to the old health admonition — to rise hungry from the table.

WE MAKE OUR OWN

CLEANING COAT COLLARS

The white line that sometimes shows when a coat collar has come into contact with the neck, can be removed by the use of a little ammonia in which enough salt has been mixed to make a mushy mixture. This is a poisonous combination and so must be carefully put out of people's way.

TO BEAT EGGS

If you rinse a plate with cold water before breaking eggs on it, add to them a pinch of salt and then stand where there is a current of air, you will have no difficulty in beating them to froth.

LENT SAVORIES

The following suggestions cannot be called master recipes for they do not contain hard and fast rules; they are just savory dainties made with fish and pleasant seasonings. We are so accustomed to meat three times a day, that it is difficult to do without it. Fish is meat and in this case, is a pacifier, for appetites that cannot be made to understand that fasting is good for the body as well as the soul.

Timbale of salmon: Any cold fish well seasoned may be used for this though nothing has the distinct flavor of the salmon. Remove the bones from the fish, drain the liquor into a cup and set it aside, press the fish through a sieve and add two well beaten eggs, four teaspoons of cream, seasoning to taste and beat the whole to a smooth paste adding the liquid you drained off. Butter molds, or custard cups, and fill them with the mixture. Place in a baking pan with water around them. Bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. When done turn out on a hot platter and garnish with parsley. Pour cream sauce around the timbales and serve at once.

When fish is served, in the place of meat, the addition of cream and eggs is necessary to keep the food value up to the usual standard. These ingredients can in no wise be considered extravagant when so used.

Deviled sardines on toast: Crush the sardines to a paste with a fork and remove the tiny bones that refuse to crush. Rub two hard boiled eggs through a sieve, season well and add enough lemon to taste and minced parsley to give a bright look. Mix in the sardines and sprinkle paprika over all. Heat this in a double boiler and make the toast, spread the paste on nicely and serve as a savory.

BATH BAGS

Here is a nice mixture for bath bags: Four pounds of fine oatmeal, two quarts of clean bran, one and a half pounds of powdered orris root, one and a half pounds of almond meal, one pound white castile soap powdered and dried, and three ounces of primrose sachet.

Make six inch bags of cheesecloth and fill two-thirds full. Throw one of these bags into the bath water 10 minutes before taking a bath, and rub the body with the bag. Such a bath is very refreshing and costs very little.

HERMITS

One and a half cups brown sugar, 2-3 cup butter, 3 tablespoons milk, 1 cup curents or chopped raisins, 1 egg, teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoons cloves, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, and flour. Beat butter and sugar together until creamy, add raisins, egg well beaten and milk with soda dissolved in it. Mix and sift currants and spices and add to the first mixture. Roll out with flour, cut in rounds, and bake in a moderate oven. Do not let these hermits become too crisp before taking them out of the oven.

FOOD PRICES COMPARED.

Figures issued by the United States bureau of labor statistics show that in 1916 the average price per pound of round steak was $.124. To-day the price of round steak averages $.237.

Pork chops in 1896 were about 10½ cents a pound. Today they average 21½ cents. Smoked bacon 20 years ago was 12½ cents a pound on the average. Today it is over 30 cents a pound. Smoked ham in 1896 sold for 15 cents a pound on the average; today it is a little over 30 cents. Poultry was selling near 13 cents a pound on the average in 1896; today at a little over 24 cents.

Sirloin steak in 1907, according to the United States figures, was at $.181 per pound on the average; to-day it is $.268. Round steak was 15 cents a pound; now it is over 22 cents; rib roast then was 15 cents; now it is 21 cents. And so on down the list. And what is true of meats is true of all other principal items of food.

Meat constitutes 31.25 per cent. of the whole food outlay — practically one-third. It is the big item in food costs. And food constitutes 42.54 per cent. of the total budget of the average wrkingman's family. These figures are based n the government inquiry in 2,567 typical workingmen's homes.

DEPARTMENTS OF OISE AND AISNE LIBERATED FROM RULE OF GERMANS; ANGLO-FRENCH ADVANCE CONTINUES

French Reoccupy Guiscard and Reach Railroad From Ham to Nesle---Troops Pushed Toward St. Quentin---Second Position East of Nesle is Carried---One Hundred Towns and Villages in Three Days.

GERMANS ATTACK ON VERDUN FRONT

London Newspapers Insist Retirement Has Been Forced But Make no Claim That Germans Are on the Run and Staff Officer Deprecates Idea That Retreat Has Become Helpless Flight.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 19.— The French, closely following the retiring Germans, reoccupied Guiscard last night, and at several points reached the railroad from Mam to Nesle, the war office announces.

Troops were pushed along the national road to St. Quentin.

To the east of Nesle a second German position was carried.

The statement says one hundred towns and villages have been reoccupied in three days. Many of them have been devastated, and thousands of persons whom the Germans were unable to send to the rear came forward to greet the French.

On the Verdun front the Germans made a heavy attack between Avocourt and Dead Man's Hill, after artillery preparation. They penetrated French lines on a front of 250 yards, but were ejected from a part of this position after violent hand-to-hand fighting.

TAKE SOBER VIEW OF GERMAN RETREAT.

LONDON, March 19. — Newspapers generally take a sober view of the German retreat, and, while insisting that the retirement has been forced, make no claim that the Germans are on the run. A distinguished staff officer at the front is quoted as deprecating the idea that the retreat has become a helpless flight.

PARIS, March 19. — The total territory regained for France by the German retirement is roughly estimated at 620 sqaure miles. Reports indicate that in a day or two, two entire departments, those of the Oise and the Aisne, will have been liberated from the German invader.

BERLIN STATEMENT.

BERLIN, March 19.—The German war office statement today says: "During the last few days a strip of land between the district of Arras and the Aisne has been systematically evacuated by us. The movement, prepared long ago, was carried out without being disturbed by the enemy, who followed in only a hesitating manner.

"In the Verdun region," the statement says, "French trenches were stormed and nearly 500 prisoners were taken."

RAMSGATE SCENE OF NAVAL RAID

620 COMMUNICANTS AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

Corporate communion in St. Paul's Church Sunday morning had the largest attendance in the history of the congregation, the number partaking of the Sacrament being 620. Eighty new members were received.

The preparatory service last Friday night was the largest since forty years ago, that occasion being a visit here of Rev. Mr. Hammond, a noted evangelist.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell delivered the address on Friday night.

FINDING BY U.S. SUPREME COURT ON 8 HOUR DAY

STANDARD ASKED FOR BY RAILWAYMEN FOUND CONSTITUTIONAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 19— An eight-hour standard for railroad wages, provided for in the Adamson Law is pronounced constitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

NEW YORK, March 19— It is universally conceded that the crisis resulting from the sinking of the three American merchant ships was the prime factor in averting the railroad strike. The decision is regarded as a complete surrender to the brotherhoods, whose demand of the basis of an eight-hour day is granted, involving salary increases to over three hundred thousand employes totalling approximately sixty millon dollars a year.

This morning the telegraph wires are carrying messages from brotherhood chiefs rescinding orders for a strike at seven o'clock tonight.

COPENHAGEN March 19—Newspaper despatches from Germany say a munitions plant at Cologne blew up last Tuesday and several hundred workmen perished.

DIED AT AGE OF 93.

The funeral of Thomas Robson, of Fenelon Falls, was held at Fenelon Falls yesterday. Death was due to old age, deceased having reached his 93rd year. During all of his life he never had occasion to call a physician.

TURKS RETIRING ACROSS THE BORDER BEFORE RUSSIANS

Enemy Dislogded From Positions, South of Banch Give Way---Harvnabad, 20 Miles From Kermanshah is Occupied.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 19. — Further progress by the Russians in Persia, who have now reached the vicinity of the Turkish border, is reported today by the war office. The statement is as follows:

"Caucasian rFont—In the region south of the town of Baneh we dislodged Turks from a number of positions. The Turks are retiring in the direction of Pendshevin (probably Panjwin, across the border in Turney).

"In the direction of Kermanshah we are pursuing the enemy. We have occupied Harvnabad, 20 miles southwest of Kermanshah.

"Western Front—Scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing are proceeding.

"Roumanian Front—Patrol encounters and rifle firing occurred."

BRITISH TO RETALIATE

IF GERMANS EMPLOY PRISONERS NEAR THE FIRING LINE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Maren 19—Announcement was made on behalf of the Government in the House of Commons today that if the Germans should carry out their threat of employing British prisoners near the firing line, the Government would decide upon appropriate action, although reluctant to take retaliatory measures.

ROSS RIFLE FACTORY WAS CLOSED AT NOON.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

QUEBEC, March 19— The Ross Rifle factory closed at noon today.

MAIL BAGS ARE RIFLED

MAIL FOR WASHINGTON AND BRITISH EMBASSY AT CAPITAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 19—The Associated Press says: Twenty-six mail bags addressed to Washington and the British Embassy at Washington were found to have been rifled aboard the Cunard liner Saxonia on her arrival here today.

Central School Board

An agitation has been commenced at Brantford to have legislation amended so that all school affairs in townships will be governed by a central board of trustees, as is now the case with cities, in place of by a trustee board for every school section. It is contended that this will work to greater economy and efficiency.

GREAT SALIENT OF GERMANS PRACTICALLY LOST TO THEM

British Are Hustling the Huns to a Degree Not Anticipated---Pursuing Patrols Cross Arras Bapaume Road and Railway.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 19. — "Throughout the night," telegraphs Reuter's correspondent at headquarters in France, "our troops continued to press hard upon the heels of the retreating enemy. A considerable force of cavalry had been employed as reconnoitering patrols, and the enemy also had a screen of Uhlans covering his rearguards. There is much brisk fighting, but the main German forces continue to decline action with our columns. Whatever the enemy's tactical scheme may be, it now appears pretty certain that we forestalled him and are hustling him to a degree which he had not anticipated. This is borne out by the promptitude with which he evacuates strong positions every time our advance gets into contact with him in strength. This morning was cloudy, with strong winds, but still very dry, and therefore all was in favor of open fighting. Every movement of the enemy was being watched with cat-like vigilance, and all along the line we prepared to pounce on the scenes of distant fires which again lighted the darkness last night. Our patrols have crossed the Arras-Bapaume road and railway at many points between the two places, and although we cannot yet claim to dominate these important routes, the Germans are certainly cut off from them. In other words, the great salient has practically disappeared."

"Caucasian rFont—In the region south of the town of Baneh we dislodged Turks from a number of positions. The Turks are retiring in the direction of Pendshevin (probably Panjwin, across the border in Turney).

"In the direction of Kermanshah we are pursuing the enemy. We have occupied Harvnabad, 20 miles southwest of Kermanshah.

"Western Front—Scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing are proceeding.

"Roumanian Front—Patrol encounters and rifle firing occurred."

Central School Board

An agitation has been commenced at Brantford to have legislation amended so that all school affairs in townships will be governed by a central board of trustees, as is now the case with cities, in place of by a trustee board for every school section. It is contended that this will work to greater economy and efficiency.

British Are Hustling the Huns to a Degree Not Anticipated---Pursuing Patrols Cross Arras Bapaume Road and Railway.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 19. — "Throughout the night," telegraphs Reuter's correspondent at headquarters in France, "our troops continued to press hard upon the heels of the retreating enemy. A considerable force of cavalry had been employed as reconnoitering patrols, and the enemy also had a screen of Uhlans covering his rearguards. There is much brisk fighting, but the main German forces continue to decline action with our columns. Whatever the enemy's tactical scheme may be, it now appears pretty certain that we forestalled him and are hustling him to a degree which he had not anticipated. This is borne out by the promptitude with which he evacuates strong positions every time our advance gets into contact with him in strength. This morning was cloudy, with strong winds, but still very dry, and therefore all was in favor of open fighting. Every movement of the enemy was being watched with cat-like vigilance, and all along the line we prepared to pounce on the scenes of distant fires which again lighted the darkness last night. Our patrols have crossed the Arras-Bapaume road and railway at many points between the two places, and although we cannot yet claim to dominate these important routes, the Germans are certainly cut off from them. In other words, the great salient has practically disappeared."

A PENNY BANK CATECHISM.

Q.—WHAT IS MEANT by penny banks in schools?

A.—The penny bank is an educational fad devised about twenty years ago to rake in the loose pennies that circulate among the pupils. There are some wise acres, some ascetics, who were probably never children themselves, but who were born fully developed grouches, and who now ask us to believe that the boy who spends a penny for candy or a nickel for lemonade is an embryo traitor, wasting the resources of his country.

Q.—Who started the agitation for penny banks in the Peterborough schools?

A.—Mr. G. N. Gordon and The Examiner entered into a compact. They revived an agitation that burst out and, after a brief meteoric career across the local educational firmament, shot again into darkness a matter of seventeen years ago. While Mr. Gordon is ambitious to achieve fame, The Examiner is dictatorial. With different backing he would probably have done better. The Examiner made its usual mistake of attempting to dragoon the School Board, a bunch of hard-headed business men who are peculiarly unsusceptible to outside interference, and a Board that can turn back the record of its proceedings for the past two decades or more and peruse every page with pardonable pride, finding each without a stain.

Q.—Who is Mr. Gordon?

A.—An ambitious and rising citizen, burdened with the cares of two municipal offices and yet with his heart set on still higher preferment. If he ever succeeds in accomplishing half of the tasks he assumes he will die with the world in his debt.

Q.—What steps did The Examiner and Mr. Gordon take to secure penny banks for Peterborough?

A. While the paper fumed at the School Board for not taking its advice and opening the banks at once, Mr. Gordon cautiously felt his way and groped for information. Both conspired to bring to this city a penny bank expert from Toronto, where they have a school board so given to impractical fads that the people rose up in arms and prevailed upon the Legislature to clip the wings of the members. This lecturing visitor was to explain the workings of the system to the people of Peterborough, and the devoted promoters of the scheme flattered themselves that there was a popular demand for their hobby.

Q.—Was the meeting a success

A.—By no stretch of the imagination can it be so regarded. The audience was painfully small, consisting of twelve in the auditors' seats, three newspapermen, the speaker of the evening, and the chairman, seventeen in all by actual count. The caretaker did not venture far enough into the focus to be caught in the picture. Chairman Eastwood tactfully refrained from asking any in the audience to take seats on the platform, otherwise the speaker would have been in the embarrassing position of finding his hearers behind him.

Q.—How are Mr. Gordon and his journalistic ally likely to feel over the result?

A.—Individually and collectively like an unclaimed balance of thirty cents in one of their dream banks?

Q.—Who was responsible for the fiasco?

A.—First of all, the people have no use for penny banks. They regard them as a useless burden on the school curriculum. Mr. Gordon, cautious politician as he is, never fully committed himself to the proposition, reserving final endorsation until he assured himself in which direction the feline was about to spring. Then The Examiner is no longer—if indeed it ever was—regarded as an authority on educational matters. For years it has attempted to dictate the policy of the Board, and appears to have gathered no wisdom as a result of the many rebuffs it has received. When the King Edward and the King George Schools were built the paper went into hysterics over what it regarded as an insane waste of the taxpayers' money. It laid down a program of its own which the members of the School Board properly ignored. In the light of subsequent events, they have approximately sixty thousand reasons, every reason worth one dollar in lawful money, to be thankful that they carried out their own ideas.

Q.—But has a newspaper no right to express an opinion?

A.—Just as much right as an individual, no more and no less. In the better grades of modern society it is not the custom for one man to try to coerce or force his opinions upon another or to insinuate that he is a dunderhead or a being who never uses his mental appurtenances because he disagrees with him. Newspapers should adopt the usual ethics of humanity.

Q.—Has The Examiner any other educational fad?

A.—It has. One of these takes the form of a demand upon the School Board that it be declared a misdemeanor for any school boy to climb a shade tree. The active and enterprising little fellows who during school age show an inclination to climb trees and telegraph poles, in after life generally possess the same propensity to struggle for the summit. It is the virile heroes in the front of the fighting line today who did the tree-climbing in their youth, not the mollycoddles who are skulking at home. It cannot be demonstrated by any arboreal enthusiasts that it hurts the tree. Of course, it goes rather hard with the boy if he falls from an altitude of twenty-five feet or so, but such boys usually have the grit to stick

WHEN HEALERS FALL OUT.

WHEN DR. M. McCLELLAND in a recent address in this city made the statement that the cornerstone of Christian Science was Mrs. Eddy, Mr. R. J. Todd, who was among his hearers, took exception to this assertion and maintained that the cult was built on one foundation, the Nazarene. Mr. Lowe, of Ottawa, whose letter on this subject was published in The Review on Saturday, takes the same ground.

Is it not barely possible that Messrs. Lowe and Todd are claiming too much and that they are making the mistake so common among the followers of a particular sect in holding that what is really to a large extent a man-made creed is altogether of Divine inspiration and therefore infallible? It is no more out of the way to say that Mrs. Eddy is the cornerstone of Christian Science than it is to say the same of Knox or Calvin with relation to Presbyterianism or to link the name of John Wesley in the same connection as regards Methodism.

Dr. McClelland quoted Sturge's opinion of Christian Science, which was not at all favorable. That was one man's view and not necessarily conclusive or infallible. Every man is entitled to voice his sentiments on every subject under the sun, provided he has made a study of the matter under dispute. He errs, however, when he insists that his verdict should be accepted as the last word on the topic by the rest of the world. It is this regrettable spirit of bigotry, only too common, that is responsible for the variety of creeds and the religious bickerings of the day. There are thousands of people in this world who have studied Christian Science just as carefully as Sturge has, who have reached an entirely different conclusion and whose findings are entitled to just as much consideration.

Dr. McClelland in his address quoted that grouchy philosopher, Thomas Carlyle, a man who never appears so happy as when engaged in some work of demolition, who passes an adverse judgment upon the Koran, the creed book of the Mohammedans. Carlyle condemns the work without reservation. On the other hand, Gibbon, the historian, takes the opposite position, and approves of it highly. "It contains," writes Gibbon, "such charms of style and poetic beauties that it remains inimitable. Its moral precepts are pure. A man who would observe them strictly would lead a virtuous life. It inculcates obedience to God, charity, mildness, abstinence from spirituous liquors, and ascribes particular merit to death in the cause of religion. From the Atlantic to the Ganges the Koran is acknowledged as the fundamental code not only of theology, but of civil and criminal jurisprudence; the laws which regulate the actions and the property of mankind are guarded by the infallible and inscrutable sanction of the will of God."

It is hardly necessary to say that the best of the Koran has been taken from the Bible. It is that fact alone which entitles it to the favorable commentary pronounced upon it by one of the greatest historians the world has ever seen. In this respect the Moslem faith resembles that of the majority of modern creeds. The erorrs, if errors there be, are not to be laid at the door of the original source of inspiration. Man-made interpretations alone are responsible for the differences of opinion which they arouse. Mr. Lowe is sincere in his faith and we have not the slightest doubt of his ability to hold his own in a controversy with Sturge or any other authority who challenges his belief.

BATHING BEACHES ASSURED.

THE FRIENDS of municipal bathing places, carefully supervised, need not despair. The chances are all in favor of a reversal of the vote in the Council last week, when the proposition was defeated by a narrow majority. The matter will be taken up again at tonight's meeting of the aldermen, when Mrs. W. R. Morris and Dr. F. C. Neal will appear as a delegation from the association that has worked so hard for this improvement. The aldermen who voted in the negative will not likely be able to stand the pressure that has been brought to bear upon them during the past week, and enough of them are almost sure to change their vote so as to make municipal bath houses a certainty for next summer. There are aldermen who voted with the majority, not because they are opposed to the principle of the innovation, but for the reason that their anxiety to economize in the handling of the public's money induced them to cut out everything that bore even a faint resemblance to a luxury.

THE QUESTION OF THE MARKETS.

THERE IS HARDLY A DOUBT that if a vote were taken on the question, it would be made clear that at least three-fourths of the residents of the city are in favor of a free market. The merchants and their customers are agreed on this point, and organized labor through its delegates to the Trades and Labor Council has officially declared for it. It is hardly necessary to express the opinion that the farmers would welcome the removal of all restrictions, whether as regards the fees or the hours of sale to merchants and consumers.

Council will have no hesitation as to how best to act in this matter. All the task that lies before them is to arrange details, settle the matter of the right of merchants to make purchases at any time, and in some way to arrange for the loss of revenue which will follow the abolition of the fee system.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WILL THAT HEAD rest easier now that the crown has been removed?

• • • •

CONSIDERING their many rehearsals, no one need wonder at the success of the Russian revolutionists.

• • • •

WILL THE anti-bathing beach aldermen struggle out of deep water at the Council meeting tonight and heroically pull for the shore?

• • • •

AND WHEN THE REVIEW ventured to question the advisability of establishing penny banks The Examiner called it unthinking journalism.

• • • •

THE CZAR may never have been able to detect poison in his daily fare, but the people have found means of doing for him just as effectively.

• • • •

WE ALL KNOW how to pronounce it now that the Toronto paragraphers are beginning to write couplets making "Bapaume" rhyme with "home."

• • • •

IT HAS NOT YET occurred to our contemporary to plead that it was German machinations that caused the dismal collapse of the penny banks campaign.

• • • •

ANY ALDERMAN who imagines himself a bigger proposition than the common people should consider what happened to the Czar who labored under a similar delusion.

THE NEW WAR LOAN AND HOW IT WILL EFFECT HIGH COST OF LIVING

It is possible that there are few people in Canada who realize that the new War Loan has a far-reaching effect upon the question of the high cost of living. If, for example, it were possible for the war to be financed merely by our great financial institutions and financial magnates, in other words, by the very large subscriptions, the result would be disastrous. It would mean a mere enlargement of credit and a rise in the cost of living all round, while these causes would, in their turn, be aggravated by the fact that the individual, having contributed nothing in the way of subscriptions or economy, would be contributing by his or her expenditure to the further rise in these prices and to a greater expansion in credit.

If, on the other hand, when the subscription lists to the present loan close some days hence, it is found that the great majority of Canadians have taken an active part in lending to the Government, not only shall we have raised a total, the moral effect of which will be great at this important crisis in our history, but we shall have achieved something else. In the first place, we shall have taken a step in the direction of personal economy which will benefit both the country and the individual, while just as the common fellowship of self-sacrifice has knit together those who are actually fighting for the Empire on land or on sea, so those of us who are at home will also be drawn more closely together by the common bond of united effort and—to the extent that we really economize—by a mutual bond of self-sacrifice.

As to the merits of the loan itself as an investment, they are sufficient to speak for themselves. The people of Canada have long since come to the conclusion that the stupendous conflict in which we are engaged is of such a character that for us all there is now only one really profitable investment in the whole world, namely, the future welfare of the British Empire. And the welfare of that Empire depends first, upon the brave men who are fighting for it; and, in the second place, upon the men and women at home who are working for it, and who are now responding to the call of duty in lending to the nation what is required in the way of funds to secure a conclusive victory and a lasting peace.

The call now gone forth is one which no loyal Canadian and true British subject dare refuse to bear and answer.

TO LICENSE THE BARBERS

If a bill now pending in the Legislature becomes law, as it probably will, none but the best followers of the craft will be allowed to continue in business, as the inferior workmen will be weeded out by a rigid examination. Patrons of barber shops can then rely on getting the very best of service. The leading barbers are unanimously in favor of the proposed law, and are backed by the International Union. They are satisfied that stricter regulations will improve the standing of their trade. Five or six years ago they attempted to have sufficient legislation adopted, but were unuscessful.

The bill provides for the appointment of an examining board of three members, and any man wishing to follow the business must apply to this board for a license. The fee is $10, and the points to be settled to the satisfaction of the examiners are that the applicant is above the age of 18 years, of good moral character, is free from contagious and infectious disease, has either studied the occupation for a period of three years as apprentice under a qualified and practising barber, or studied the occupation in a properly appointed and conducted barber school under the instruction of a competent barber for a period of at least three years, or practised the occupation in another province for a period of at least three years, and is possessed of requisite skill in said occupation to properly perform all the duties thereof, including his or her knowledge and ability in the antiseptic preparation of the tools, shaving, hair cutting and all the duties and services incident hereto, and is possessed of sufficient knowledge concerning the common diseases of the face and skin to avoid the aggravation and spreading thereof in the practise of said occupation, the board may direct that the name of the apprentice shall be entered in the register hereinafter provided for and a certificate of registration shall be issued to him authorizing him to practise such operation in this province.

Every man who wishes to act as an apprentice must register with and secure permission from the examining board.

Any certificate to carry on the business of barbering may be revoked for conviction of crime, habitual drunkenness, having or imparting any contagious or infectious disease, for gross incompetency or for doing work in an unsanitary or filthy manner.

Some Regulations.

No person practising the occupation of a barber in any barber shop, barber school or college in this province shall serve a person afflicted with erysipelas, eczema, impetigo, sycosis, tuberculosis or any other contagious or infectious disease.

No person so afflicted shall apply to be served or be served in any barber shop, barber school or college in this province.

A contravention of any of these provisions shall be an offence, and shall be punishable by a penalty not exceeding $25.

WHAT BOY SCOUTS ARE DOING

"Do your best" is the motto of the Wolf Cubs. It is not only the motto but the aim of every member of this junior organization. Day in and day out Wolf Cubs are endeavoring to "do their best." That is why the movement has spelled success from the very beginning. A Wolf Cub is a boy between the ages of nine and twelve, who has promised on his honor to do his best, to do his duty to God and King, and to do a good turn to somebody every day.

Earns Rhodes Scholarship

When Cecil Rhodes died and left his money for scholarship purposes, his will directed that to win a scholarship a man must develop notable literary and scholastic ability, love of the out-of-doors; strong, verile personal character and an unselfish desire to serve others. A New York State Boy Scout, Ernest S. Griffith, of Utica, N.Y., has filled the above requirements, which means that he will have three years and $4,500 to spend at the Oxford University, England. Griffith's training as a Scout laid the foundations for his success.

Forestry Scholarships

The New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University is offering one scholarship annually to a boy scout who is resident in New York State and who fills certain requirements. The conditions include his being a first class Scout and having at least ten out of the following fourteen merit badges: Forestry, camping, bird study, cooking, business, pioneering and stalking, first aid, personal health, civics, photography, marksmanship, horsemanship pathfinding and taxidermy.

The candidate must satisfy the entrance requirements of the college by having fourteen out of the following fifteen units for college entrance: English (four years), 3 units; history, 1 unit; elementary algebra, 1 unit; plane geometry, 1 unit; solid geometry, 1-2 unit; French or German, 2 units; physics, 1 unit; science, 2 units; freehand or mechanical drawing, 1 unit, elective, 2 1-2 units.

The terms stipulate that there must be at least three applications in any one year from which the College of Forestry may select the one who satisfies the conditions most effectively. The free scholarship covers the amount of the annual incidental laboratory and infirmary fees and the Scouts who secure the scholarship will be able to take four years of work for the cost of books, clothing, room and board.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: I understand that our returned heroes had planned to hold a tag day on the 21st of April, also a church parade on the 22nd of April, in memory of their dear comrades who fell in action in the second battle of Ypres. I would like to say a few words to the public of Peterborough about these heroes of ours.

Most all other cities and town in this fair country of ours have responded nobly to their call for assistance. These men are now trying to bind themselves together to raise sufficient funds to place them in a position to be able to look after their comrades who are returning home almost every day and assist them if they should need any assistance, and also to look after the wives and orphans of those who have fallen, if they should need any help. These men's object, I am sure, in looking after their comrades and dependents, is worth all the consideration and interest that the citizens of Peterborough can give. I ask as a citizen, will you help them or are you going to allow them to drift away from our midst?

I understand the Kitchener League intends to hold a tag day on that same day and have asked these brave heroes to stand aside and let them have that day. Can you imagine a patriotic society asking these men such a question as that?—the men who gained the glory of that day and made the name of Canada ring throughout the whole world, and closed the road which led to Calais and stopped the brutal Huns and saved our liberty and freedom. These men are entitled to that day above all other days.

Instead of any patriotic society asking them to step aside, they should be sent out on that day with all other patriotic societies, helping to make it a great success. I say as a citizen, let that be our returned soldiers' tag day if there is going to be any tag day and let everyone of us get out on that day and work for them.

Now these heroes have not yet made any public appeal, but I understand Mr. Thomas Barrie has given them two rooms which they are delighted with, and the Daughters of the Empire have furnished them for their use. Those of whom I have been speaking speak well of the interest the Daughters of the Empire have taken in them.

It is up to every patriotic society and citizen to go to the aid of these heroes instead of asking them to stand to one side. These heroes did not stand aside when the call of duty came to our country. Why should they take a back seat now? Remember one of our electric signs on George Street says the returned soldiers is always given the preference. Let it be so in this case; if not, I am sure some of the public will be very badly disappointed and the response to the tag day which takes its place will not be very liberal.

"DON'T SEE THEM STUCK."

A QUESTION OF JUSTICE

Editor Review: St. Patrick's Day was a great day for the Allies, but is it not unfortunate that the British Government is more anxious to please a few landlords and distillers than the five thousand soldiers of Irish descent who are risking their lives in defence of the Empire?

Salvation Army Leader in Canada a Recruit of General Booth

Commissioner William J. Richards, the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, is full to overflowing with vital energy and personal enthusiasm. This has been the case during the whole of his thirty-four years' career as an officer in the Army. The commissioner is one of the officers of the Salvation Army who was personally called by the founder of the organization, the late General William Booth, and is, therefore, one of the pioneers of the movement. The story goes that the General visited the town in which the then Mr. Richards resided to conduct revival services and heard the young man speak. The General was so favorably impressed that he was asked if he could not enter the training home, and he did so. This was thirty-four years ago, and Commissioner Richards has rendered so many years of unbroken service.

COMMISSIONER RICHARDS

Commissioner Richards was closely associated with the late General's "Darkest England" scheme, having done much to establish what is now known as the men's social work of the Salvation Army.

His usefulness was not confined to this branch of Army service but having earned for himself the reputation of a clever and capable administrator and a brilliant platform speaker he had full command of the operations in Denmark, South Africa and New Zealand. The latter appointment was his charge when appointed by General Bramwell Booth to succeed the late Commissioner Rees in the Canadian territory.

It is interesting to know that four sons of Commissioner and Mrs. Richards have followed in their parents' footsteps, and are now officers in the Salvation Army, holding important positions in Java, South America, the continent of Europe and London, England.

One on Hon. James Duff

The story is told of an incident which occurred during a meeting of the Ontario Legislature some time ago. Just outside the assembly room is a telephone for the convenience of the members. One day a page called Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, to the telephone. In using the instrument he adopts a high-pitched voice and presently the loud sounds were heard in the hall. It disturbed the late Premier, Sir James Whitney, considerably. He stood it as long as he could, and then turned towards the page benches.

"What noise is that?" he thundered.

One of the Ministers sitting near informed him that it was Mr. Duff talking to Glen Grove.

"Well, why on earth doesn't he use the telephone?" was the caustic question in reply.

Why Snow is White

Water being transparent, rays of light pass through it without being reflected by the water itself. When drops of water are partially frozen into snowflakes they are transformed into a crystal substance with a great many reflecting surfaces, from which the rays of light are sent back, just as a mirror reflects a great deal of the light or color thrown against it.

A mass of snow is whiter than a single flake, because of the countless number of crystals that are compactly grouped, thereby greatly increasing the reflective power. Like a mirror snow will reflect the color of any light thrown upon it.

Pruning Young Trees

Severe pruning is needed when fruit trees are planted, but during the next few years it is not the best system to prune heavily. During this time the object is to encourage growth, to shape the tree and prepare for fruiting.

It is a common idea among orchardists that the more a tree is pruned the more it will grow, but this is only true within very narrow limits. If the roots have grown freely and spread extensively as in a healthy tree they are sure to do, then the heavy pruning of the branches will upset the balance. The tree will endeavor to restore the balance by forming new wood to support the place of that cut away.

In this case the severe pruning would entail extra work upon the tree without a corresponding increase in growth.

Many orchardists have come to recognize this fact and prune no more than necessary to shape the growth, prevent limbs crossing or coming out where not wanted. One must take into account the natural habit of each variety, but there are very few sorts that need much thinning out or heading back before they come into bearing.

An Indigestion Tip

Try exercise instead of medicine for indigestion. When digestion is poor build up the stomach muscles.

When one builds up his general muscular tone, he builds up his heart muscle tone and his stomach muscle tone.

Exercise in the open air, well planned and persistently carried out, is better for dyspepsia than pepsin, or soda, or tablets, or several of these combined.

DAZZLING WONDER OF SOLAR SYSTEM

Distances Which Are Almost Impossible to Grasp—Something About the Relation of Stellar Bodies

In the course of an address to the "Christian Brotherhood," Mr. W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., Toronto, gave the following interesting facts:

"Scientists inform us that the mean distance of the earth from the sun is 93 millions miles, consequently the diameter of the pathway traversed each year by the earth in order to travel round this immense orbit in one year is about 186 million miles, which means that the earth is continuously whirling through space at the amazing rate of 18 miles in each second of our time. Our measurements of time, we know, are derived from the planetary rotations; that is to say, our day is the equivalent in time of the complete rotation of the earth on its axis; our month is the equivalent in time of each revolution of the moon around the earth, and our year of 365¼ days is the equivalent in time of each revolution of the earth around the sun.

The Solar System

"As we proceed with the subject we are informed that what is called 'the solar system' comprises the sun and planets and other celestial bodies over which the sun holds sway, and comprehends in all an area but little under 6,000 million miles in diameter, and that in this system the earth is merely one of eight planets, of which four are larger and three slightly smaller. Enormous as is this solar system it is yet, we are told, only a very small fragment of what is now the known Universe. For instance, all the bodies known to us as stars are far and away outside and beyond the solar system. The star called 'Alpha Centauri' is the nearest to our earth and is yet 25 billion miles distant from it, and the next nearest called '61 Cygni' is more than double that distance, being 57 billion miles away.

W. D. McPHERSON, K.C., M.P.P.

Dazzling Distances

"A general idea of the relation of the solar system to the Universe may be gained by reflecting that the average distance between any two neighboring stars is several thousand times the extent of the solar system. The star Rigel in the constellation Orion is computed to be 27 thousand times larger than our sun, and another star called Arcturus is said to be ten times larger than Rigel. Between the orbit of Neptune and the nearest star known there is an immense void in which no celestial bodies are yet yet known to exist except comets, and though these sometimes wander to a distance considerably beyond the orbit of Neptune, astronomers say it is possible that the extent of the void which separates our solar system from the nearest star, is hundreds of times the distance of the furthest point to which a comet ever recedes. In the constellation Andromeda is one of the most famous bodies in the heavens, the great nebula in Andromeda. Attempts have been made to ascertain its distance and size but they have proved unavailing. It is so very far away that to the present time no method has been discovered whereby it can be measured. It must therefore be of enormous extent, and it has been calculated that if on a drawing of the nebula there was to be laid down a map of the entire solar system, that is to say, almost 6 thousand million miles in diameter drawn to scale, that map would be a mere speck on the face of the nebula."

CANADA'S COAL MINES

Loss of Workmen in European War May Start Export From Here

Will the great war be the means of bringing Canada to the front as a producer and exporter of coal? The coal resources of Canada are estimated at something over 1,200 billion tons of easily workable coal, with an additional 17 billion tons at depths greater than 4,000 feet, which could be used as a last reserve. The warring nations of Europe before the war produced annually some 765 million tons of coal of which Great Britain is credited with 322 million tons.

This is one of the few industries in which women cannot take the place of men; and devastated Europe must soon turn somewhere to replenish her diminishing coal supply. With her enormous coal reserves, Canada has been importing nearly one-half of the total coal consumed within her borders. This is partly due to the lack of coal in the middle provinces of Ontario and Quebec, which are at present the largest coal consumers, and which are much closer to the huge coal fields of Pennsylvania than to the eastern or western coal mines of Canada.

The total production of coal in Canada last year was 15,012,178 tons, and the number of men employed to mine this coal was about 28,000, of which 13,786 in the eastern provinces mined 7,980,000 tons. If Canada could export an appreciable amount of coal to Europe it would have to come from the Maritime Provinces, which are estimated to have a total reserve of 10,000,000,000 tons.

By far the largest coal fields in Canada are in Alberta, where the estimated reserve is over 1,000,000,000,000 tons, but the long haulage would make the article very expensive for the European consumer, although last year the output of the Alberta mines increased by nearly 24 per cent. over the previous year. Last year the mines of Alberta produced 3,300,000 tons, valued at $8,000,000, and employed 6,650 men.

If Canada can develop her coal industry extensively this looks like her great opportunity. The coal resources of the Dominion are second to those of no country in the world, but the distribution of population has up to the present prevented full advantage being taken of them. If Canada wants the business it is knocking at her door, for the United States, at present the world's largest producer of coal, needs every ton for home consumption.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Not Confined to Cattle and is Very Contagious—Some of the Causes

The foot and mouth disease in cattle is highly contagious and infectious, due to a specific virus and characterized by vesicular eruptions in the mouth, between the clouts, around the coronets and often in other regions, says a writer in The Farmer's Advocate. In some cases the mouth only is affected, while in others the eruptions appear only in the feet. In milch cows the udder and teats are often involved. In such cases the milk is unfit for use. While cattle are more susceptible than other classes of stock, others are not immune, as sheep, pigs, dogs, poultry and even horses are sometimes attacked, and even the human being is not exempt.

Like all other contagious diseases it can be caused only by the introduction of the virus or contagion into the system of healthy animals. In diseased animals the virus exists in great numbers in the saliva, the discharge from the eyes and nostrils and as the intestinal mucous is highly charged the excretions are a source of great danger. Thus food or litter of any kind, as hay, grain, roots, grass or straw which has been contaminated with the saliva of diseased animals, becomes a carrier of the virus, and requires only to be ingested by other animals in order to propogate the disease. It is also readily conveyed from diseased to healthy animals by the hands or clothing of attendants, by rugs, blankets, pails or other stable utensils. It is claimed that the disease can, and has been spread by diseased cattle wading through and defecating in streams, which subsequently coursed through healthy districts. There is no doubt that the disease often follows the course of a stream.

The total area of the British Empire is nearly 11,400,000 square miles or more than one-fifth of the earth's surface.

Incubators For Big Flocks

To make money in poultry-raising the incubator is absolutely necessary, and, what is more to the point, it is profitable to raise your own chicks that you may know the breeding of them. It is demonstrated that a chicken-raiser is able to increase the egg production of his own flock by breeding and selection.

Smoke Can be Abolished

Extensive investigation of smoke prevention has led to the conclusion that it is mechanically possible.

Curved shears for cutting corrugated iron have been patented.

BAD DREAMS ARE SYMPTOMS

Ill Health the Cause—Many Alarming Symptoms of Women's Ailments—How Cured.

Paterson, N.J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me feel happy and healthy. Sometime ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the aforesaid ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles." — Mrs. Elsie J. Vander Sande, 7 Godwin Street, Paterson, N. J.

Nothing Doing!

I wouldn't want to be a dog
Out at a kennel show
And have some dame embrace me while
They photograph me. No!
I wouldn't want to have her tie
A ribbon round my neck;
I'd rather be a yellow dog
And live on bones, by heck!

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

The Minister of Finance offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

VAST THRONG LISTENS TO REV. T. H. MITCHELL'S LAST SERMON AT ST. ANDREW'S

Church Crowded to Doors at Evening Service —No Sad Note of Farewell in Discourse Which Closes Successful Pastorate.

St. Andrew's Church held such a throng as it has seldom been called upon to accommodate when Rev. T. H. Mitchell last night preached the sermon which marked the close of his service as minister-in-charge during the absence of Rev. (Capt.) James Rollins, now with Canada's fighting forces in Europe. Every pew was filled before the opening hour and to seat the throng that stood around the walls the ushers placed chairs in the aisles until almost every available inch of space was taken. Every congregation in the city was represented, a circumstance that testifies to the general esteem in which Mr. Mitchell is held by members of all denominations.

No Sadness of Farewell

It was chareteristic of Mr. Mitchell that his final discourse contained not a single note of the sadness of farewell, in keeping with the healthy and optimistic brand of Christianity that he has preached and exemplified in his daily life ever since coming to Peterborough. He has been over twenty years in the ministry and in that time has held three charges. The first was in a New England town and lasted for nine years. He left there one week before his congregation expected his departure in order to avoid the pangs of parting. After a ten-year pastorate in London, Ont., he slipped quietly out of town with the same purpose in view.

Good Wishes for His Successor

The only reference to the severance of his present relations was his statement that the best he can hope for his successor, whoever he may be, is that he will receive the same hearty co-operation not only from the congregation of St. Andrew's, but from the citizens generally as has been extended to himself. If this is done there will be another happy and contented preacher in this city. Mr. Mitchell will remain in this city until next Saturday and in the meantime will be at the service of the congregation. He will take a vacation of two weeks before his induction into his new charge in Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, and will return to this city in May to preach the anniversary sermons in the pulpit he has just vacated.

The Value of Effort

Of all the many fine discourses Mr. Mitchell has preached in Peterborough, there has been none to surpass his sermon of last night, based on Paul's appeal to the Corinthians for unity of effort. The value of labor was emphasized. If all the world quit work there would be a famine in less than three weeks and the people would starve to death. Labor is not only essential to assure a living but without occupation health and happiness are impossible. Co-operation is necessary. By working together wonders can be accomplished where isolated effort would achieve little. If the congregation would co-oporeate with his successor as they have done with him the success of the church work will be assured.

Christian love was dwelt on as one of the highest virtues that will clear the world of discontent, anxiety and unhappiness. Instinctive love of all our fellowmen is impossible and was never commanded. What is meant in the precept to love our enemies is a spirit of good will.

The closing thought in the sermon was that all human effort must fail unless there is "co-operation with Him." Mr. Mitchell left one parting request with his people. That was that they read every day Paul's beautiful poem on love (or charity), which he sets high above all the Christian graces, and promised to do the same himself every day until his return to visit the city.

The Musical Program

The large choir was out in force and Choirmaster Treneer had prepared a special program of music The anthems were Nunc Dimittis (Marks) and Andante from Stradelle (Von Flotow). Miss Helen McLaren, the soloist, sang "The Crown of Life" with force and expression.

The Morning Sermon

All the regular sittings in the church were filled at the morning service and a large number of visitors were among the worshippers. Mr. Mitchell preached on home mission work, urging renewed activity in this department. To Christianise the nations is the only hope to avert war such as is devastating the world today. Speaking of the prospects for peace, he said there could be no lasting peace unless the Allies when victorious were fair in the conditions which they impose on the vanquished. The war lords of Germany must be driven from power but the Germans are a lovely people who have been misled by those in authority over them and this fact must be taken into consideration by their conquerors.

Mr. Mitchell referred to the unity that has been developed among the different portions of the British Empire since the war broke out. He said that he was an Irishman himself but that he would refrain from an expression of opinion on the Irish question.

That Mr. Mitchell elected to remain silent on this question was the misfortune of his audience. His discussion of the present situation in that section of the Empire would certainly have been worth hearing and those who know him can surmise the nature of his sentiments.

Popularity as Preacher and Pastor

It is little short of marvellous how Mr Mitchell has worked himself into the esteem of the people of Peterborough during the year he has been a resident of this city. He has been popular both as a preacher and a visitor among the members of the congregation, with every class in the community, with the members of the secret societies to which he belongs, with young and old alike. He has been liberal in his views on all matters whether civil or religious and has done a special work among the men of St. Andrew's by encouraging the unbiased study and discussion of public questions. The congregation and the citizens generally part from him with genuine regret. Had conditions been different he would not have left for another field as he was perfectly satisfied with his environments and was encouraged by the success which attended his labors.

Rev. A. T. Walker, one of the most successful ministers in the Presbyterian Church, and who for the past year has been filling the pulpit of a large chunrch in Owen Sound, will reach the city this week in time to conduct the prayer meeting Wednesday evening, and will preach in St. Andrew's next Sunday morning and evening. He comes highly recommended.

PALESTINE TO BE AGAIN PEOPLED BY JEWISH RACE

Rev. Canon Cornish Shows How Divine Prophecy is Being Fulfilled---One Good Likely to Come of War.

"God would never have permitted this war unless some good is to come out of it," was the opening note in the address of Rev. Canon Cornish on the Biblical prophecies regarding the war in the second of the series of Saturday afternoon lectures held at the Public Library Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D.E. Principal Clarke of the King Edward School, presided, and there was present a large audience who followed with interest the thoughtful and scholarly address of the speaker. The return of the Jews to Palestine was the theme dwelt upon.

Canon Cornish dealt with the prophecy contained in the 37th chapter of Ezekial, when the prophet was taken into a valley filled with dry bones. As he marvelled at the ruin a miracle was wrought. The bones came together and formed perfect human skeletons. Then came the Divine word, saying that the scattered members of the House of Israel would be gathered together and restored to the homes from which they were driven in A.D. 70.

The speaker showed how events are shaping today to bring about that end. Palestine, now under the domination of the Turks, is likely to fall into the hands of the British and the Empire of which Canada forms a part will be instrumental in fulfilling the Divine prophecy regarding the restoration of the Jews. The Zionward movement is growing daily. The people who are aliens in every land have never abandoned the hope of again occupying the country in which the race was cradled after the long years of wandering in the wilderness. Preparations for their return have long been quietly in progress

Only a few years ago there were less than five thousand Jews in Palestine. When the war broke out there were one hundred thousand. Forty agricultural colleges have been established throughout the country and millions of fruit trees have been imported and planted to provide for the influx of population that is expected. Palestine may yet again become a land literally flowing with milk and honey.

No people can exist in a land unless the soil is productive and the climate favorable. The hand of Providence seems to be at work preparing for the restoration. The former and the latter rains so long lacking in Palestine have again become a part of the climatic conditions so that the fruits of the earth are assured in abundance.

The ambition of the Jews is to rebuild in all its magnificence the tempule of Solomon upon the site of which a Moslem house of worship now stands. This work has already been begun, not in Jerusalem, but in different parts of the world, just as the various parts were prepared in the days of Solomon and carried to Jerusalem to be put together. Nothing but the former site will suffice the Jews. That mosque must be removed before their own temple is erected.

Canon Cornish believes that the Turks will be reduced to a tenth rate power, and that Palestine will fall to the lot of the British, to be repeopled by the race that formerly owned it, the new country to be a part of the Empire, just as Canada or Australia is. One significant fact in connection with the Zionward movement is that such astute business men as the Rothschilds are investing heavily in land in Palestine.

The speaker regards recent events in Russia as one of the most hopeful incidents in connection with the war. If Germany failed to hold the autocracy of the Czar's domains, then their cause is lost indeed.

On the motion of Mrs. John Allen, seconded by Mrs. E. L. Goodwill, a vote of thanks was tendered the speaker. Rev. J. P. Wilson will deliver the third lecture in the series next Saturday afternoon. Any person who fails to attend the course is missing a rare intellectual treat

LOTS QUICKLY SNAPPED UP TO BE CULTIVATED

Just as we said. Those Wolstenholm lots have been snapped up Worthy citizens have pre-empted the section. So to speak, they have driven stakes and will stand off all comers. Truly some people can see a good thing when it is propelled before them.

The lots are 39ft. front and 80 ft. deep and were secured by J. Ingram and H. Cruickshanks The ground is choice and easily worked, which a discerning man should see. The secretary of this movement expects a mess of early onions or juvenile beets as a sample. Don't forget.

The Mayor has donated the use of eight lots in the south. The Mayor has excellent taste in most things and the ground should be good for the purpose. You know where to find the Mayor. He is in his office for a few minutes each day. The rest of the time about on city business. His daily beat is from the garage to the clerk's office, same as a policeman. When not at one or the other he is in between.

It is in the mind of the secretary to take a walk about the city so soon as the flood subsides and see what might be available in the way of lots, convenient for use. There are a number of pieces, very good, and which owners may not take the trouble to list. The movement will accomplish very little unless it be pushed, quietly and persistently. If possible the women should get interested and poke their husbands up to not be beaten out by the other fellow who is earnestly going to see what we shall see. Next October will bring a lot of satisfaction into houses if a supply of vegetables, even the humble and now lucrative potato, can be garnered in. Then the men of the house will go down cellar and view the results and take as much pride in what has been accomplished as the wife does in conning over the gem jars filled with sweets, pickles and other feminine concoctions. All good to take and displaying culinary skill. Remember the brands and varieties of home-made pickles and relishes that are lugged out and placed on the tables at an efficient Methodist tea meeting. All gifts and samples.

Then the man who appears at the back gate and waves a small collection of incipient onions over the fence, and says "fifteen cents," can be told to take his green-grocer enterprise next door. It's great to be able to stand someone off and feel that in so doing one does not deprive oneself of what is needed.

ST. PAUL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The young people of St. Paul's Church have arranged for an Irish concert in the S. S. hall this evening at 8 o'clock. Col. Miller will give an illustrated lecture on Ireland, and a number of solos and instrumental selections, all Irish, will be erndered.

The monthly lecture on Prophetic subjects as they relate to the times in which we live will be given on Friday evening by the Rev. Mr. Turnbull, pastor of Beverley Street Church, Toronto. The public are cordially invited to this lecture.

There will be no mid-week service this week as the Friday evening meeting will take its place.

LAID TO REST

Rev. Canon Cornish conducted the funeral services over the remains of the late Richard Heard at the late residence and at the grave this afternoon. Members of Young's Point Lodge of Foresters were pall bearers. Among the floral tributes of respect and sympathy was a beautiful gates ajar from the employes of the Metal Products Co. where Mr. Heard had been employed and where he was very popular with the department heads and the men

$5,000,000 MARRIAGE TO SICK MAN, MYSTERY

Romance of Philippa Hartley May Not be Hoax.

CHICAGO, March 17—Will "John Colfax" try to live?

The question was foremost today in conjecture over the next turn in the strang romance of "Mrs. John Colfax," formerly Miss Philippa Hartley of New York, who wedded a young derelict invalid—according to a story—to fulfill the provisions of a will allowing her the bulk of a $5,000,000 estate should she marry soon.

According to Dr. Gilbert H Willis, who says he comes from Bombay, India, and is a trustee of the estate of Carlton Hannon, uncle of Miss Hartley, an invalid whose lease on life was limiteid to a few months or weeks was desired as a husband—he was to mary the heiress, bid her good-bye and never see her again. "John Colfax," "somewhere in a north side lodging house" filled the bill. He had an incurable lesion of the heart; decline and death in a few months was the medicinal diagnosis.

Dr. Willis says "Colfax" was paid royally for his "trouble"; he didn't need to worry about the bride; the bride had escaped forfeiture of her claim, etc.

Bride Hurries Back East

"Mrs. Colfax," heavily veiled—at least she was when she left Chicago—boarded a fast train for New York. Her address, if her statement to the marriage license clerk was correct, is the Knickerbocker Hotel. In the application which she made out—marriage license No. 756679— she described herself as a woman of 25, her contemplated husband as 23. She applied for the license in company with Dr. Willis. Her figure was clothed in black. The clerk saw all this. He saw also three magnificent diamond rings on long, slender fingers, whose nails glistened with the polish of the manicure. Had the clerk been romantic and impressed by this obvious mystery—but clerks are not romantic. It not being necessary, he did not inquire "Colfax's" avocation or residence.

The clerk believes "Colfax" to be a fictitious name.

"Why didn't she tell me about it?" he lamented today. "I'm single, I'm poor. I need the money. she could forget all about me and I'd never have any touch of conscience."

Three Questions Arise

Three questions rose concerning "Colfax"

If the circumstances are at all true—Dr. Willis told the whole story himself to a reporter for the City News Bureau—will Colfax try to live? Will he seek out some specialist to stem the fissure through which his life is dribbling away? Is there really a "Colfax"—was there a marriage—is there something else behind it—is it a hoax—a press agent yarn?

The mystery that envelopes the whole situation became deeper as investigators hunted for details and cinfirmations. Dr. Willis had been stopping at the Blackstone Hotel. The clerk at the hotel said that Willis had not returned during the night; his bed had not been slept in, a worn and battered suitcase with the initals G. W. stands in a corner.

"His bill hasn't ben settled yet," supplemented the clerk.

Says Willis Wasn't Frank

W. C. Danuenberg, former city morals inspector, who now runs a private investigating agency, said he had seen Willis the matter had been broached to him. Willis hadn't been frank—there the matter rested No, he didn't know "Colfax."

"Can this be some kind of a publicity yarn?" he was asked.

"Search me," he replied

A number of clergymen, telephoned to, denied that they had performed a marriage ceremony for any Miss Hartley and asserted that were the circumstances known to any minister before the ceremony it is doubtful if he would have permitted the union.

Wish to Retain Pastor

The congregation of Bond Street Church, Toronto, has offered Rev. Byron Stauffer $1,000 more per annum to remain as their pastor. This would mean a stipend of $4,000. A church in Chicago has offered him $5,000.

Shakespeare Said, "Apparel oft Proclaims a Man"

This applies with double force to a woman. And this was never more true than at the present time. Whether or no the Canadian public is to be commended for this state of affairs, it is nevertheless true that a well-dressed woman is given the preference in most every walk of life. To be well and correctly attired is an overwhelming advantage in social as well as business affairs.

The women's apparel at this store is selected with the purpose in mind of providing women with correct apparel and yet bring this apparel within reasonable cost.

SPRING IS COMING AND WITH IT THE NEED OF A LIGHTWEIGHT COAT

As a matter of fact, Spring is only around the corner. It is true we might have some cooler than usual days once in a while, but the need of a light weight Spring Coat is becoming more apparent every day, and women are recognizing this by early purchasing. The newer of the new models are ready. Among them are the new Sport Coats, hundreds to choose from. Every shade you will think of, beginning at $6.98.

And other favored materials. The new styles show the very newest ideas in sleeves and belted effects, as well as pockets. Prices from $6.98 gradually on up to $20.00.

ELLIOT'S

JOSEPH GAVE VENT TO HIS FEELINGS AND PAID $15.85 INTO COURT

It cost Joseph Brown $10 and $5.85 costs at the police court this morning for a too liberal use of his tongue and also for using language which would not be found in the latest dictionary on proper names.

Brown imagined that he had a grievance against a fellow boarder at the Temperance House and used a chair and a stove poker, with threatening remarks.

No damage was done except that the air was discolored for a time.

THE VILLAGE DOCTOR

Reserve Tuesday, March 20, for an evening, when Mark St. Ladies' Aid will present The Village Doctor in Victoria Hall (Old Opera House).

Wrote a Few Letters.

The kirk in a certain Scottish village was in urgent need of repair, and Sandy McNab, a very popular member, had been invited to collect subscriptions for the purpose. One day the minister met Sandy walking irresolutely along the road. He at once guessed the cause. "Man, Sandy," he said earnestly, "I'm sorry to see ye in this state." "Ah, weel, it's for the good o' the cause," replied the delinquent happily. "Ye see, meenister, it's a' through these subscreeptions. I've been down the glen collectin' fun's, an' at every hoose they made me hae a wee drappie." "Every house! But—but—but surely, Sandy, there are some of the kirk members who are teetotalers?" "Aye, there are; but I wrote tae those!"

AN OUTSIDER ON MILK PRODUCTS

LONDON PAPER BOOSTS INDUSTRY OF CONDENSED MILK.

Lambeth, a thriving village six miles from London, is to have a Milk Products factory similar to the one to be established in this city. The London Advertiser hails the new concern as a prosperity breeder for the farmers and the stockholders alike, and adds editorially:

Condensed milk is rapidly taking a prominent place among the staple products of the age. In the United States the industry has made rapid strides, and is growing at the rate of forty million pounds a year.

Condensed milk is a purified state which retains all the good qualities of the milk.

The location of the new factory at Lambeth cannot be improved. It is surrounded by one of the best agricultural and dairy districts in Canada. There are four thousand cows now in the district, and this number can easily be doubled. The result will be profitable to those who can supply the milk and to those who are stockholders in the new company.

Lambeth has all the requirements. Water, light, power, natural gas, hydro power, railway facilities and good roads in every direction. It is a very desirable place in which to live.

Arrangements have been made for the best experienced, competent management. Lambeth is to be congratulated upon its selection as the best point at which to establish this industry. It is one capable of indefinite expansion and growth. The near future may see Lambeth considerably increased in size, and every acre of land in the district increased in value.

The conditions that prevail at Lambeth fit the situation in Peterborough. The new industry is sure to be a success.

$10 FOR DRUNKENNESS.

John McDonald met a friend on Saturday night and partook of some of the "spirits that cheers." It appeared from his remarks to the police magistrate this morning that his friend was a bad drink mixer, and John got drunk. He was fined ten dollars.

NO MORE ROSS RIFLES TO BE MANUFACTURED HERE

Company Was Not Able to Furnish Weapons Fast Enough so Contract Was Canceled---Plant May Close.

OTTAWA, Mrach 19. It is officially announced by the Government that the contract for 100,000 Ross rifles entered into between the Government and the Ross Rifle Company in February, 1916, has been cancelled. It is not stated how many rifles have been delivered on the contract or how much money has been paid on it to date to the contractors.

The cancellation of the contract is not due to the quality of the Ross rifle; on the contrary, the official statement issued makes it clear that the Government's break with the company is due to the fact that the Government has not been supplied with the rifles fast enough by the company.

"The Militia Department," says the statement, "reported the company behind in deliveries and the Government cancelled the order forthwith."

The official statement discloses that the Government contracted for 100,000 Ross rifles in February, 1916, and that the company had undertaken to make deliveries "beyond a shadow of a doubt" at the rate of 17,500 per month, commencing after its completion of its outstanding order. On these conditions the contract was awarded, and according to the statement, provision for cancellation in case of default was placed in the agreeemnt. The statement declares that the Government "waited for default, and default being made, cancellation promptly followed."

The factory may have to close down at least long enough to permit of the remodelling of the plant to manufacture the Lee-Enfield rifle.

NEARLY THOUSAND SQUARE MILES OF TERRITORY GIVEN UP BY RETREATING HUNS

Cavalry of Allies Taking Part in Pursuit of the Enemy Who Are Being Closely Pressed by British and French.

LONDON, March 18. — The German forces have been compelled to surrender nearly 1,000 square miles of conquered French territory during the past forty-eight hours. The British forces continued their rapid advance on the heels of the enemy along a front of forty-five miles, entering the German positions to a depth of ten miles in places. The important towns of Peronne, Bapaume, Chaulnes and Nesle were captured, in addition to sixty villages.

The German retreat has been continuous, and the area covered by it has spread very widely.

Favored by fine weather and drying ground, British columns everywhere are pressing the retiring enemy. The spirit of the British troops is one of demonstrative enthusiasm.

PARIS, March 18. French troops are pursuing the retreating Germans between the Avre and the Aisne on a front of thirty-seven miles. On Saturday the French defeated the enemy rearguards and occupied the entire front between Andechy and the Oise, comprising powerfully fortified lines which the Germans had held for more than two years. On Sunday French cavalry entered the town of Nesle. In the direction of Ham, on the Somme River, the French forward movement reached a depth of about twelve and one-half miles.

North of Soissons the French have occupied Crouy, and in the same district have taken the villages of Carlepont, Morsam, and Nouvron Vingre. French cavalry have entered Noyon.

The British have put the Turks to rout, it is officially announced. On Friday the Turks were in full flight towards Sama, 75 miles north-west of Bagdad.

The American steamer Illinois, 5200 tons, was sunk at eight o'clock Sunday morning. The crew landed safely. The American steamer City of Memphis was sunk by gun fire. The second officer and the crew were landed. A patrol boat is in search of the rest of the crew. The American steamship Vigil Ancia, 4,000 tons, has been sunk without warning.

Russians are still pursuing the Turks in Persia, the War Office announces. The Russians have captured Banch, ten miles from the Turkish border.

The War Office announced on Sunday that the Germans have abandoned Perrone, Noyon, Bapaume, Roye and several other towns and are making a systematic retirement.

Frankfort-on-Main has been bombarded by the French. Air squadrons also bombarded the enemy's organizations in the region of Arnaville and factories and blast furnaces at Wolkingen, where a great fire broke out. All the airplanes returned safely.

All public buildings and private houses have been pillaged by the Germans in Bapaume and everything of value carried off.

An encounter between a patrol of eight British airplanes and sixteen enemy machines took place. In twenty minutes the hostile formation was broken up and two German machines were destroyed; two others were driven down damaged. All the British machines returned safely.

The French Cabinet, headed by Premier Briand, has resigned.

Weigh and Tag Fowl

The Chatham Council recently passed a by-law providing that all fowl sold on the market must be weighed, and a tag attached bearing the weight and the name of the seller. Women who go to the market say that they will not observe the new regulation, and will ship their fowl away. It is believed the differences can be smoothed over and that the women will see that they have been losing money on some of their stuff.

A Good Sleeper.

The tortoise is a great sleeper. London Spectator has a story of one which was a domestic pet in an English house. As his time for hibernating drew nigh, he selected a quiet corner in the dimly lit coal-cellar, and composed himself to sleep. A new cook knew not tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department, the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awe-struck wonder, as she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

The New Sweaters.

Angora wool knitted sweaters, whether coat shape or middy blouse contour, are very ample in the skirt part. They often, too, are held into the figure, at the waist, by apron string straps of the same materials, which are wound about several times. Two colors are used in the same sweater, the border on hem, collar and cuffs contrasting with the sweater color, as a garnet sweater with a three inch yellow border.

The silk sweaters follow the same lines, especially as to flaring skirt portions, and, if middy blouse shapes, have string straps to tie about the neck under the collar.

Plough Up Grass Lands.

The Scottish Department Committee on Food Supplies report that there are about 1,500,000 acres of permanent pasture in Scotland, and 1,500,000 acres in temporary pasture. Much of the permanent pasture is only suited for grazing stock and certain areas also of grazing land are unsuitable to break up, but, it is added, in the hands of both farmers and occupying owners there are many acres which, in present circumstances, should be brought under the plough. The report considers that steps should be taken to find out what land now in grass is suitable for growing grain and other crops, and to secure that it be cultivated. Also that steps should be taken to cultivate lands now let as grass parks and home policies, where the ordinary organization of a farm does not exist, it also recommends that when deemed advisable, the Board of Agriculture for Scotland, by themselves or their nominees, should enter, occupy, and cultivate such lands.

The "back to the land" idea has no lure for the city man who when a lad got up at 5 on a cold winter's morning and did chores at the barn an hour before breakfast.

The under dog gets our sympathy, but we would rather place our money on the winner.

Hope for the best, but don't refuse to play the game if you don't get it.

Puzzle.

"Are you going fishing, John?"
"Yes, I am going fishing."
"What for?"

But neither will a fat man
Unless he's pursued by a bull.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

CURLING

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held at the rink this evening, when the prizes won in the different competitions will be presented, as well as several prizes.

The election of officers and committees will also be held.

A lively discussion will take place on a proposed amendment to the rules, which will prevent the use of felt soled shoes on the ice.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Very Lively Little Fisherman.

HE WEARS A HANDSOME COAT

Small but Fierce Creature That Is Much Admired by Indians of British Columbia—Sometimes Steals the Farmers' Chickens.

Well, said Uncle Ben, as this is the season when furs are in fashion, I am going to tell you about A FUR BEARER.

The mink is a little animal that is found most anywhere in the northern part of our country.

The creature is about fifteen or eighteen inches long, a relation to the weasel and the skunk and shaped something like they are.

It lives along brooks and rivers in a burrow or hole in the bank. Its food is fish when it can get fish and frogs or small animals when fish is not to be had.

The mink will take birds, and sometimes it will go for the farmer's poultry.

So when a country boy sees a mink near the farm he is apt to try very hard to catch it.

The mink is a cruel little animal itself and can fight bravely if cornered.

The mink is a very fine fisherman. His way of getting the fish is to trot along the bank of the stream until he sees one; then he will dive after it.

He can swim under water as well as the fish, and if it tries to hide under a log or in a grotto under the water the mink swims right after it and, grabbing it in his strong jaws, soon makes short work of it.

The Indians of British America, way up in the far north, admire the mink very much. Indian mothers have a lullaby which they sing to their little ones, and it goes something like this:

See the merry mink there diving
In the water clear and cool,
For the speckled salmon seeking
In the lily crested pool

Although the fur of the northern mink is much finer than that of the animals found in milder regions, mink can live in almost any of our northern states.

In winter Mother Nature gives the mink a thick and handsome coat, and it is then that trappers set traps to catch him.

No matter how cruel the mink may be, these traps are more cruel still, for the poor beast is held a living captive, sometimes for several days, till the trapper makes his rounds and puts him out of his misery

Too Bad.

"That man would do anything for a dollar."

"He would?"

"Yes."

"What can he do?"

"Nothing."

Freeze Him.

"I shall cut that man's acquaintance."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, I shall."

"What will you cut it with?"

"Ice."

Quite Common Gift.

"Do you believe in second sight?"

"Sure! I have got it."

"Indeed!"

"Yes; spectacles."

Being Careful.

"Every man ought to have a wife."

"Yes, but he should be careful to always get his own."

The Hen.

The hen is such a funny bird.
She only says a single word,
And that sounds just like "Walk, walk walk!"
Why is it that she cannot talk?

I like to give her lots of grain
At morning and at night again
She walks in such a dainty way
I often watch her when at play.

And every day she hunts a nest
And tries and tries her very best
To lay a lovely egg for me
That I may have it poached for tea.
—Philadelphia Record.

The Scrap Book.

"Does your husband keep a scrap book?"

"Not exactly. He keeps a check book and we have a scrap every time it is used for my benefit."—Boston Transcript.

Delayed Appreciation.

"Do you enjoy opera?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I enjoy an opera first rate after the tunes in it have become sufficiently popular to be played by the brass bands."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE BABY'S CLOTHING—(Continued.)

IF THE DIAPER is fastened to the band or skirt do not pull it up too tight. It is useful to use a small cloth inside the diaper to protect the latter against soiling from the bowel movements. These cloths should be burned. Soft, clean, old cotton may be used for this purpose. The diapers should be washed when they become wet. It is not sufficient that they be dried and re-used. Wash them every time. Do not use rubber diapers or protectors. They keep in all the moisture, which is bad for the baby's skin.

The Short Clothes.

The baby often goes into short clothes so early in life that the same shirts, bands, and nightgowns can be used. In this case petticoats and white dresses are the only new garments needed.

Flannel Petticoat

The flannel petticoat may be the gertrude cut short or a flannel skirt made on a thin muslin waist. Be careful that buttons and pins do not hurt the baby.

Creeping and Walking Clothes.

These comprise—

Bands	Garters
Shirts	Drawers
Underdrawers	Rompers
Waists	Dresses

Flannels.

If new flannels have been provided for the short clothes set, they may last through the next period. Knitted underdrawers may be worn, especially in winter. Rompers are useful. One pattern with buttons at the bottom as well as at the waist line, allows of changing the diaper without removing the rompers.

Shoes.

A[illegible] as the baby begins to walk he should wear a soft leather shoe or moccasin which allows plenty of room for his toes. Don't have them with stiff, slippery soles, and take shoes of any kind off when the baby sleeps.

Stockings.

The baby in long clothes does not need stockings except when he lies on the bed to play. The first stockings should be of cotton and wool. Too thick stockings cause the feet to perspire. They should be kept warm.

Underwaists.

In choosing underwaists care should be taken that there is no pull on the top of the shoulders forcing them forward. The weight of the waist, etc., should come at the back and close to the neck so as to help keep the body upright

Bonnets.

The baby does not need a bonnet for sleeping outdoors except in cold weather. Don't have it so thick as to make the head perspire and avoid elaborate silk trimmed bonnets unless when you wheel him out to show off his fine clothes.

HABITS AND TRAINING.

Regularity.

Train the baby in regular habits and he will soon become easy to manage.

Going Out.

In warm weather a normal healthy baby will be better out of doors after he is a few days old. No baby should be put out of doors when the temperature is below 20 degrees above zero, or if the weather is not clear when the temperature is below freezing. On windy dusty days he is better indoors.

Sleeping Out.

For sleeping out, the same rules should be followed. A baby should not sleep out of doors in the winter. When sleeping out of doors there should be a hood to the basket or carriage to protect him against wind and strong sun.

Wheeling and Rocking.

The baby does not need to be wheeled or rocked. He is just as well left to sleep quietly in his bed out of doors. Wheeling and rocking make him demand attention. When he gets a bit older he may be taken out in his carriage by nurse or mother and shown off to an admiring public.

Sleeping Bags.

A good sleeping bag can easily be made by the mother out of a clean old woolen blanket.

(To be continued.)

If the price of living should fall would the shock injure it much?

It is sometimes disconcerting after you have told just how a thing should be done to have the doing of it suddenly thrust upon you.

No man knows what he is coming to, and he is smart if he can recall where he started for.

There is no accounting for tastes. Some people like apple butter spread all over fried chicken.

The small boy who whistles to keep up his courage grows into the man who talks the loudest just before he runs.

"The teacher was questioning the boy about Napoleon's disastrous invasion of Russia and the subsequent retreat from Moscow.

"What did the French do then?" she asked.

"They ran away," replied the boy.

"Yes, that is what they did," said the teacher, "but 'ran away' is hardly the correct phrase to use. What should you have said?"

The boy's face lighted up with understanding.

"They beat it!" he exclaimed quite innocently.

When you think that you are going to learn to love a girl remember that a little learning of that sort is a particularly dangerous thing.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

W. D. Ketcheson, official bailiff for Belleville, is in the city today visiting his son, Mr. M. E. Ketcheson.

All the Owen Sound papers speak in the highest terms of praise of the singing of Miss Dorothy Allan at the annual concert in Knox Church in that town and in which the entire program was furnished by Miss Allan, Miss Jessie Alexander and Mr. Ruthven McDonald of Toronto. The Times says: Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano, found a great many favorites among the large audience and received generous applause. The singing of Where My Caravan Has Rested, by Lohr, and Male's pretty ballad, Sonny, by Miss Allan appealed to the audience and resulted in a persistent recall. Her singing of La Marseillaise and Rule Britannia was met with a loyal response by the audience rising to its feet.

The Sun says: "Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano, was making her debut to an Owen Sound audience and created a very favorable impression. Her notes were clear and distinct and the comment of those present was decidedly complimentary."

Mr. and Mrs. S. Anderson of Akron, Ohio, reached the city Saturday afternoon, being called here by the death of Mrs. Anderson's father, the late Richard Heard.

Rev. Dougald Brown was in Lindsay on Sunday and took the services at the Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Routley are visiting friends in Kingston for a few days.

Mrs. A. W. Perkins of North Brook is spending a few days in the city.

The many friends of Mr. Harry Webber of North Monaghan will regret to learn that he has suffered a relapse after his recent operation.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay is seriously ill at his residence, 192 McDonnel St.

On Saturday evening little Miss Gwen Peters entertained twenty-five of her friends at a St. Patrick's party on her birthday. The table decorations were green in honor of the day. The cake was decorated with shamrock leaves and green flags. The time was pleasantly spent in music, games and guessing contests, prizes being given for the last. All the guests wished her many happy returns of the day.

LAID TO REST.

MILLBROOK, Mar. 19. - The funeral of the late J. C. Kells, which was held Saturday afternoon, was very largely attended. St. Thomas' Church, where the service was held, was filled to capacity. The service was conducted by Rev. Canon Allen, assisted by Rev. Mr. Westmacott. The pallbearers, life long friends of the deceased, were: Messrs. W. T. Hood, Charles Needler, Robt. Fair (Peterborough), G. E. Burnham, Charles McNeil, George Fowler and Thomas Campbell.

Flags in the village hung at half-mass, while the blinds in stores were lowered in recognition of the respect in which deceased was held.

Interment took place in St. John's Church cemetery, Ida. The inclement weather prevented a large number of friends from attending the funeral.

THEATRICAL

As bright and clean as a new coin, and with tuneful songs, a smartly-dressed chorus, comedy parts of a high order, a performance that never lagged—these were all found in The Million Dollar Doll, which graced the Grand Opera House Saturday afternoon and night and tickled the fancy of two large audiences. The presentation was refreshing as a shower in midsummer, and the principals and the company in general made a host of friends with Peterborough theatre goers.

It is announced that the company will return to Peterborough for Easter Monday.

Outstanding in the presentation were the two Orrs, father and son, who supplied a liberal quantity of comedy that was wholesome at all times. Harold Orr, in the role of Jasper Jackson, a colored gent, is one of the smoothest comedians seen here in many years. His father, Harvey D. Orr, in the character of Melvin Meekman, gave him great support, and the team was frequently encored. In fact, encores were the order of the performances. The illuminated runway was a popular feature.

ROASTS DAILY NEWSPAPERS

"Had there been a religious daily newspaper in every city, [illegible] Christ would have run it, and along the lines laid down by Charles M. Sheldon, this war would never have taken place—could never have happened," said Rev. R. D. Hamilton, speaking to his Welland avenue Methodist congregation in St. Catharines on "Literature's Place in Making a Life."

"Of course we couldn't do without the daily newspapers," said Mr. Hamilton, "but I must say that the daily newspapers in itself is not what we should bring up a family on. We have got to have other reading sandwiched in somewhere. Well, I had better say it would be better to sandwich in the daily newspaper. We need the daily paper and can hardly wait till we see it to get the war news, but some things it prints as news is not what Christian people should read. Charles M. Sheldon contended that there were many things which the public had no right to know about, and he proved this when he ran the Topeka, Kansas, paper for six days." Mr. Hamilton did not undertake to say just what he considered objectionable in the daily news and what he considered news fit to read, but left that to the judgment of his congregation.

Allied Art at Ottawa.

When the new Parliament Buildings are completed at Ottawa one of the many unique features which are proposed is a series of pictures to be contributed by allied governments in the present war. It is suggested that the leading artists of the world, a representing these nations, should put on canvas their conception of the war, and that the collection should be symbolical of the conflict and what it represents. They would not necessarily depict battlefield scenes. French, Russian, Italian, Serbian, and Roumanian, as well as British artists, will, if their governments agree, collaborate in this work, producing in respect to theme and color a uniform collection, which should be one of the art treasures of the world. The paintings will be placed [illegible] in the Senate.

Riches of British Columbia.

Official figures of last year's output of British Columbia's mines show a tremendous increase over all previous years. The returns from all sources are valued at $42,970,555.

This is 45 per cent. better than the showing for the year 1915, and 32 per cent. greater return than for 1912, which was the banner year previously.

In gold output there is a slight falling off, but the demand for copper and other metals used in the manufacture of munitions is reflected in the fact that there is an advance of nearly twelve millions in values of silver, lead, copper, and zinc in the aggregate. The output of coal and coke just about held its own. Following is a summary of the output of chief metals and coal products: Gold, $5,383,229; silver $2,099,834; lead, $3,186,773; copper, $18,429,924; zinc, $3,648,589; coal, $7,097,352; coke, $1,622,850; building material, $1,500,000.

17,000 French Enlisted.

The French-Canadian recruiting figures, which disappeared from the Record Office, Ottawa, have been retabulated. Dr. Edwards, of Frontenac, quoted the figures in the House recently. They showed that in all of Canada only 17,400 French-Canadians had been recruited, although the French formed 30 per cent. of the population. Dr. Edwards said that if Quebec had done its share Canada would have already raised the 500,000 promised by Sir Robert Borden. Ontario's contribution had amounted, up to Dec. 31st last, to 63 men per thousand of the population; Quebec's to 20 per thousand; the Maritime Provinces 38 per thousand; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 81 per thousand, Alberta 92 per thousand, and British Columbia 104 per thousand.

Did Well.

"Were you ever in love?" asked the gay and care free young woman of the confirmed old grouch.

"Sure I was."

"When was that?"

"Before I was old enough to know any better."

"Was she pretty?"

"Oh, she would pass in a crowd."

"How did you act?"

"Well, I managed to keep out of the [illegible]."

AN APPEAL BY THE RED CROSS

WORKERS WANTED FOR TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Red Cross Society, through the Canadian War Contingent Association is making repeated earnest appeals for socks to be sent to the men in the trenches. It will be only through continued and unceasing work on the part of the knitters that the demand can be met and the local society accordingly urges all its workers to make an extra effort to add to the sock supply. During the past week the knitting machines in the Red Cross work rooms have been kept busy, with the result that there are now a large number of socks to be toed off. The society asks that all ladies who are good darners will meet Tuesday, March 20, at 2.30 p.m., in the Red Cross rooms to do this work.

CONSERVATORY RECITAL.

Another delightful program was given on Saturday afternoon at the Conservatory of Music by pupils of Miss Killmaster, Miss Elcome, Miss Scott, Miss Logan, Mr. McLean and Mr. Gliddon. The following took part: Piano—Helen Lamb, Jean Eastwood, Jean Elliott, Lizzie Webber, Dorothy Stuart. Violin—Gretchen Gladman, Sam Swartz. Vocal—Florence Scott, Walter Evans. Accompanists, Margaret Neill and Florence Scott.

Girls of Roumania.

The girls of Roumanian country districts take great pride in a clear, healthy complexion, and just as the girls in our own rural districts a generation ago would get up before breakfast and steal down unobserved on the first day of May to wash their freckles away in the dew of the morning, so the girls of Roumania take red and white threads, twist them into cords, from which they suspend coins around their necks. These talismans they wear from the dead of winter until they see the first blossom of spring, feeling sure that thereby they will guarantee themselves a milk-white complexion, rosy cheeks, and ruby lips.

Drought in Argentina.

Drought and the ravages of locusts, says Commercial Agent Frank H. von Motz, Buenos Aires, have so reduced pasturage and the available supplies of fodder in Argentina that the attention of planters and stock raisers has been focused on the feeding stuff question and the advantages of silos discussed with vigor. "I am told that many silos of reinforced concrete are being erected by local contractors. The machinery for preparing ensilage and for filling the silos will have to be imported and several American factories already have made arrangements for the sale of this class of machinery."

200 Observatories.

More than 200 public astronomical observatories are in the northern hemisphere and less than twenty in the southern.

Precaution.

"How are you feeling, Brown?"

"Pretty comfortable, thank you."

"You do?"

"Yes."

"For heaven's sake, don't let the landlady find it out!"

"Why?"

"She will raise the price of board if you do."

Simple Solution.

Eve thought she wanted a new dress. Adam thought she didn't need one. Harmony had flown from the garden. Finally a bright thought struck Adam. "I have a solution, dear."

"What is it?" asked Eve doubtfully.

"New Year's day will soon be here. Then you can turn over a new leaf."

Food For Thought.

"What have they given him in the play?"

"Only a thinking part."

"That isn't hard, is it?"

"Well, it isn't any snap. Most of his thinking is as to whether he will get his salary or not."

OBITUARY

WILLIAM ASHLEY.

William Ashley died on Sunday morning at his home, 390 Mark street, at the age of 83 years. He leaves to mourn his demise his wife, one daughter, Mrs. George Stevens, Ashburnham; one son, Wm. F. Ashley, of Belleville, and one brother, Simeon Ashley, of West Huntington, and four sisters, Mrs. Annie Horton, and Mrs. Margaret Poucher, both of Corbyville; Mrs. Sabra Clinstopher, of Actinolite, and Mrs. Ruth Huffman, of Belleville. His first wife was Deborah Haight, who died forty-five years ago, leaving him with five small children. He was married to his present wife, Henrietta McMillen, of Marmora, nineteen years ago.

The funeral service will be held at the family residence, 390 Mark street, on Tuesday, March 20th, at 2 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. R. A. Whattam, and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for Interment.

Margaret Armstrong, wife of Mr. John Miller, 22 Wolsely Street, died at the family residence last night after a short illness. She was born in Otonabee nearly 66 years ago and was a daughter of the late Isaac Armstrong. Besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Stark of Otonabee and Miss Margaret of Peterborough, and two sons, Wilbert and James, of Otonabee, survive her.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 to the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral service at 2 o'clock by Rev. R. Pogue.

ABSOLAM PETERS

Absolam Peters, a well-known grocer of the south ward, died at the family residence, 120 Aylmer St. yesterday afternoon after an illness lasting over a year. He was born in Ernest township, Addington, about 73 years ago and came to Peterborough 32 years ago, where he has resided ever since. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Foster, and Miss Cora of Peterborough, and two sons, Maxwell who lives at home and Burton of Galt.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery at 3.30. Funeral service by Rev. A. Whattam at 3 o'clock.

MRS. FINLAY FORSYTHE.

Lena Clydesdale, wife of Mr. Finlay Forsythe, 376½ Water street, died yesterday after a very short illness. She was a daughter of Mr. William Clydesdale of Dummer. Her husband survives her.

The funeral will take place tomorrow at 11 o'clock to the C. P. R. station, and the remains will be taken for burial in Norwood cemetery.

Gladys's beau took her younger sister Mabel aside and confided in her as follows:

"Now, I am going to tell you something, Mabel. Do you know that last night at your party your sister promised to marry me? I hope you'll forgive me for taking her away."

"Forgive you, Mr. Sparks," said Mabel. "Of course I will. Why, that's what the party was for!"

FRENCH SUCCESS NORTH OF MONASTIR BRITISH MAKE CONSIDERABLE GAIN

RECEIVING RETURNED SOLDIERS

Not Always Known When Men Will Reach Here.

Occasionally enquiry is made as to why men returning from service abroad and from the lines, and who have been brought home to Canada, are not met at the station by one or more of those connected with the civic bodies are patriotic organizations. That some are met and others neglected. This enquiry is quite in line and the explanation is here made. It is all a matter of information. Certainly not of reluctance or indifference on the part of citizens.

All men relegated home are carried from Halifax to the Dominion discharge depot at Quebec, there examined, certified as to arrears of pay, given a part of it, and transportation to destination.

But this often intervenes. After examination at Quebec it is found that the men are required to report at the divisional point, which for this district is at Kingston. Men generally are forwarded by the afternoon train from Quebec, leaving at about one o'clock, reaching Montreal at eleven o'clock, and make Peterborough at 5.54 a.m. Should departure be delayed from Montreal until the day following arrival in Montreal, then the man will reach Peterborough with 3.45 afternoon train.

Diverted to Kingston

Now as to being diverted to Kingston. Many, nearly all, are so required and to undergo medical inspection. The military authorities are reluctant to have a man discharged or pass out of service before all steps to see that he is in all ways fully fit for civil life and civil work. If on inspection any ailment is found, or even uncertainty, then the man is required to stay, or to return to Kingston, where he is placed in the military home for treatment for a more or less period.

On leaving Quebec a telegram is forwarded to Peterborough, often to the secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, at the Patriotic Fund office, stating that the man, or men, have left for the West, giving names and addresses in this city of those who here belong, but it never states whether or no that the men are to be diverted to Kingston. That is left as a matter of conjecture. They may come on straight home or go to the hospital for inspection.

It takes some hours, even at the best, to carry out the inspection, and the man it generally held until the following day, leaving Kingston Junction (G.T.R.) at one o'clock or thereabouts. He may make Port Hope in time to catch the train leaving Port Hope at 4.15 p.m. for Peterborough, reaching here at 5.35 p.m., or he may do, what is ofteg the case, reach Belleville, get off and take what we term the Grand Junction train for home, reaching Peterborough at 9 p.m.

If Kingston would wire exactly the man's movements on his leaving that point then there would be no uncertainty in the duty of meeting the men coming in. If the man would advise, himself, then the train could be met. But between the two stools, as a manner of putting it, the scheme of meeting the man is more often a failure than a success. Members of the reception committee of the council, and others, have gone to the morning C.P.R. train to meet men and found that they had not arrived. Also to the afternoon G.T.R. train and to the evening G.T.R. train from Belleville, without result. In cases where the man wires to his friends, who advise the Patriotic Fund office, then the matter is at once arranged and the man met, as he should be met.

Kingston depot has been appealed to and asked to wire on the man's leaving there, the route he will take and possible time of arrival in Peterborough. If this is done the men can nearly always be met by one or other of the civic reception committees or members.

FRENCH CAPTURES NORTH OF MONASTIR

More Than 1200 Prisoners Taken With Two Towns and Hill, Where Enemy Offered Stubborn Resistance.

PARIS, March 20. — French troops in Macedonia, the war office announces, have captured a hill and two towns about three miles north of Monastir after stubborn resistance. They also took more than 1,200 prisoners.

Military activity of the British forces to the east of Lante Doiran resulted in bringing in of prisoners.

MAINTAINING CONTACT WITH RETREATING FOE; ADVANCE IS DIFFICULT

French Troops Move Forward Under Handicap.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 20—The War Office announces French troops are still maintaining contact with the Germans along the section of the front over which the retirement is taking place, but that the advance has become more difficult by reason of the destruction of all means of communication and owing to the bad weather.

German attacks at Avercourt Wood and Hill 304 on the Verdun front were repulsed. Serious loss was inflicted on the Germans.

The French troops have occupied about twenty additional villages and small towns in their advance on the retreating Germans. They have gone beyond Ham, on the Somme River, and Chauny on the Oise which brings them appreciably nearer to the St. Quentin-Laon line. A convoy retiring in the direction of St. Quentin was captured, the advance at this point reaching a depth of 22 miles.

The enemy before his retirement devastated the country.

An earlier British report says The pursuit of the enemy continued today, our cavalry and advanced guards driving back the enemy's rearguards.

The ground gained extends for a depth of from two to eight miles and 40 more villages have fallen into our hnds.

MOBILIZATION ORDER AWAITED

RECRUIT 57TH BATTALION FOR HOME DEFENCE.

While the mobilization of the 57th Regiment for home defence has been authorized at Ottawa, orders have not reached the city, but are expected shortly, when the preliminary details of the mobilization here will be undertaken.

It has been stated that the services of Candian officers returned from service in France and England will be utilized in the reformation of units for home defence and it is possible that Majors Watt and Lech who are officers of the 57th Regt., will be appointed for the work here.

LIEUT. R. P. A. CRISP.

Word was received here this morning that Lieut. Crisp, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, but now in the Royal Air Service, was seriously ill at a military hospital at York, England. No particulars of the nature of the illness were given in the cablegram.

WATERTOWN, N.Y., March 20 Arthur Free, of Seeley's Bay, Ont., who has been sought since the murder of Mrs. Hattie Hill two weeks ago at Seeley's Bay, has been caught at Cape Vincent. He declares he is innocent. Free has been taken back to Canada.

GERMAN LOSSES

LONDON, March 20 — According to official lists, the total casualties of the Germans reported for the month of February in killed aggregated 60,471, making the total German casualties since the beginning of the war, exclusive of those in the navy or the colonies, 4,148,163.

PROOF OF SOLDIER'S DEATH

OTTAWA, March 20—Life insurance companies doing business in Canada are called upon to recognize as satisfactory evidence of death the official certificates of death or presumption of death issued by the Militia Department regarding Canadian soldiers at the front.

ARRANGING FOR CHANGE IN THE LAW

One Outcome of Test Case in Claims for Damages.

Judgment in the case of Hopwood vs. the King, which was reserved at Peterborough, was delivered at Ottawa March 10. In his reasons for judgment, the Judge says: "To bring this case within the provisions of sub-section C of section 20 (of the Exchequer Court Act) the injury to property must be (1) on a public work; (2) there must be some negligence by an officer or servant of the Crown acting within the scope of his duties or employment; (3) the injury must be the result of such negligence. The supplicant's property is situate 20 or 25 miles south of Buckhorn dam, a dam which is part of the Trent Canal system, which undoubtedly, under section 108 of the B.N.A. Act and of the third schedule thereof, is the property of Canada. The canal route, however, runs through the northwestern part of Buckhorn Lake and does not go through Chemong Lake at all. Buckhorn Lake on the east connects with Chemong Lake through a passage, and the supplicant's property is at the southeast shore of the latter lake, as the whole appears upon a general plan exhibited at trial. Under the circumstances and under the decisions in Macdonald vs. the King (1), Hamburg-American Packing Co. vs. the King (2), Paul vs. the King (3), and Homested vs. the King (4), it is impossible to find that the suppliant's land in question in this case so situate 20 to 25 miles from Buckhorn dam and entirely out of the Canal route, was on a public work. . . In the result it must be found, following the decisions (of the above cases) that the injury complained of did not happen on a public work, and, moreover, that it did not result from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope or duties of his employment. Therefore both under the facts as controlled by deed of August, 1910, and under the law, the suppliant fails."

Make Change in Law.

On being asked if anything further could be done about this case, Mr. Burnham, M.P., said that it will be remembered by those who were present at the trial that the Judge said that his hands were tied by the case of Homested vs. the Kngi, in which the Supreme Court had reversed his decision and found that the injury must be inflicted actually on a public work. Mr. Burnham said, however, that it was understood that the Government was making arrangements to have the law altered, since it is well known that it was never intended that a Government should be liable only actually on a public work where they might inflict injury by that public work at a long distance from it. Mr. Burnham had hopes that the Government would do the fair thing in this matter and not feel it necessary to defend the public treasury by means of an absurd law. Of course the Government was wise in refusing to hand out money simply at haphazard and in demanding that these cases should be settled by the courts, but nevertheless Mr. Burnham said the absurdity of the law underlying this case was such that he had great hopes that real justice would be done, not withstanding that the case was greatly complicated by the fact that the floods that spring were higher and more sudden than at any time since 1870.

Mr. Hatton appeared for the Crown.

PTE. TOBIN HOME

Pte. Patrick Tobin, 468 Reid St., of the 93rd Batt., invalided home, reached the city last evening. The mayor and reception committee met him.

ALDERMEN ON THEIR DIGNITY RESENT OFFICER'S STATEMENT

Then Pass Grant of $1000 for 247th Battalion.

The 247th Battalion was voted a grant of $1,000 for recruiting purposes by the City Council last night.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League, the manufacturers and merchants, asked that the grant to the 247th Batt. be more favorably considered and in this plea he was assisted by Mr. Joseph Wearing.

Ald. Dobbin asked Mr. Wearing which he would favor for a grant—the bathing beaches or the battalion—and found that Mr. Wearing would give preference to the battalion.

Col. Ackerman gave the council some figures showing how the $1,000 given by the Government had been expended and also showing an overdraft of $366.64. There was no immediate possibility of the government giving any further assistance and he would be compelled to call in his men and keep plugging along. Peterborough should do everything in order to be satisfied that her part had been filled in relieving the situation.

Takes Exception

Ald. Dobbin took exception to the remarks made by Capt. Dancy at a recent recruiting meeting in which the city council was referred to as "a disgrace to the city." He wondered that Col. Ackerman, who was on the platform, did not remonstrate with the speaker. He would like Col. Ackerman to express regret over the remarks. The remarks coming from an outsider were objectionable.

Col. Ackerman had nothing whatever to do with the meeting farther than be at it as an officer. He had felt strongly as a citizen of Peterborough on the Council refusing the grant and as a citizen still thought that the Council's action was not a creditable one to Peterborough.

Ald. Smith thought Col. Ackerman's remarks to the council uncalled for. He would not make a grant to the battalion until the remarks were retracted. Other remarks had ben made along the same line.

"Sore" at Everybody

Ald. Stratton wanted to know if it was a matter of money in order to get recruits. He was afraid that Col. Ackerman was "sore" at himself, "sore" at the Government, "sore" at the Council, and "sore" at everybody.

Oil on Troubled Waters

Mr. Joseph Wearing poured oil on the troubled water by asking the council not to take the blunt remarks of soldiers too seriously. He felt sure that if the council was in Col. Ackerman's place and realized the indifference with which some people treated recruiting efforts they would also feel strongly. He asked a favorable consideration of the grant.

Mr. Joseph Worth stated that Capt. Dancy's remarks were no more pointed than the statements of Hon. George P. Graham had been.

Make Allowance

Ald. McIntyre, while he felt sore and indignant at the remarks of Capt. Dancy, did not blame Col. Ackerman. Every allowance should be made.

Ald. Dobbin was of the opinion that Col. Ackerman had picked up a load that he should never have incurred. He would not find fault with Col. Ackerman for addressing re-

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE INAUGURATED

COLONIAL STATESMEN SIT WITH GOV'T MEMBERS IN COUNCIL.

LONDON, March 20. — The Imperial Conference was inaugurated today. For the first time colonial statesmen sat with members of the British Government around the table in the council room at Premier Lloyd George's official residence.

MINISTERS OF ALLIES RETURN TOTHECAPITAL

AGAIN TAKE UP RESIDENCE IN ATHENS—BLOCKADE IS LIFTED.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 20. — Entente ministers to Greece have again taken up residence in Athens. The discharge of a cargo of wheat begins today at Piraeus, indicating the lifting of the blockade.

RETREAT OF ENEMY HAS SLOWED DOWN

Considerable Progress Reported for British Troops, in Face of Tempetuous Weather ---Cavalry Active.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 20. — Telegraphing from British headquarters in France, the Reuter correspondent says: The pace of the German retreat seems to have slowed down considerably during the past 24 hours, a fact for which the very wild weather may well be responsible. A violent equinoctial gale has been raging over northern France, and is still very heavy, although it has veered more to the north, with frequent fleeting glimpses of sunshine. Many rain squalls have swept over the battlefield, but these have not sufficied to render the ground bad, and there is a keen drying edge in the wind. Notwithstanding the tempestuous weather, however, our troops have made considerable progress. Following roughly from the south of Arras, our front now runs through, or on fringes, the following places: Beauvrains, Merc-atel, Boiry, Becquerelle, Boyelles, St. Leger, Mory, Vaulx Vraucourt, Beugny Halpincourt, Barastre bsu Lechelle, Etricorut, Moislain, Peronne, Doingt, St. Christ, Voyennes, and Caniza, to the neighborhood of Ham, on the eastward bank of the Somme. Our cavalry and infantry patrols are everywhere active to the east of this line. We hold the line of the Somme in strength from Peronne southward to Canizy. Our reconnaissance patrols are active as far east as Mons en Chausiee.

In several sectors between Bapaume and Arras our cavalry maintained their touch with the enemy all day yesterday. There was a good deal of skirmishing, but no heavy fighting.

LONDON, March 20. — Newspapers in Berlin published yesterday for the first time news of the big retreat on the Western front. The movement is explained as part of a strategical plan of the general staff for a decision on the Western front.

Newspapers profess complete confidence in Von Hindenburg, who, they presume, is repeating the strategy which proved so successful on the Russian front.

BERLIN, March 20. — There were several engagements of infantry and cavalry detachments yesterday between British and German forces on both sides of the Somme in the territory abandoned by the Germans, says army headquarters.

SEND THANKS FOR THE SOCKS

LETTERS RECEIVED FROM PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS.

Lance-Corp. Norman Saxby, 21st Batt., in a letter to the Kitchener League, writes as follows:—

In acknowledging receipt of parcels, I wish to thank you most heartily for your kindnes in remembering me. The socks, eats, etc., were a God-send. In one box I found forty-two pairs of socks, which I distributed among the Peterborough boys in the company, so nothing was wasted.

No doubt the young ladies who placed their addresses in the socks will be surprised to receive cards

FRENCH SUCCESS NORTH OF MONASTIR BRITISH MAKE CONSIDERABLE GAIN

RECEIVING RETURNED SOLDIERS

Not Always Known When Men Will Reach Here.

Occasionally enquiry is made as to why men returning from service abroad and from the lines, and who have been brought home to Canada, are not met at the station by one or more of those connected with the civic bodies are patriotic organizations. That some are met and others neglected. This enquiry is quite in line and the explanation is here made. It is all a matter of information. Certainly not of reluctance or indifference on the part of citizens.

All men relegated home are carried from Halifax to the Dominion discharge depot at Quebec, there examined, certified as to arrears of pay, given a part of it, and transportation to destination.

But this often intervenes. After examination at Quebec it is found that the men are required to report at the divisional point, which for this district is at Kingston. Men generally are forwarded by the afternoon train from Quebec, leaving at about one o'clock, reaching Montreal at eleven o'clock, and make Peterborough at 5.54 a.m. Should departure be delayed from Montreal until the day following arrival in Montreal, then the man will reach Peterborough with 3.45 afternoon train.

Diverted to Kingston

Now as to being diverted to Kingston. Many, nearly all, are so required and to undergo medical inspection. The military authorities are reluctant to have a man discharged or pass out of service before all steps to see that he is in all ways fully fit for civil life and civil work. If on inspection any ailment is found, or even uncertainty, then the man is required to stay, or to return to Kingston, where he is placed in the military home for treatment for a more or less period.

On leaving Quebec a telegram is forwarded to Peterborough, often to the secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission at the Patriotic Fund office, stating that the man, or men, have left for the West, giving names and addresses in this city of those who here belong, but it never states whether or no that the men are to be diverted to Kingston. That is left as a matter of conjecture. They may come on straight home or go to the hospital for inspection.

It takes some hours, even at the best, to carry out the inspection, and the man it generally held until the following day, leaving Kingston Junction (G.T.R.) at one o'clock or thereabouts. He may make Port Hope in time to catch the train leaving Port Hope at 4.15 p.m. for Peterborough, reaching here at 5.35 pm., or he may do, what is often the case, reach Belleville, get off and take what we term the Grand Junction train for home, reaching Peterborough at 9 p.m.

If Kingston would wire exactly the man's movements on his leaving that point then there would be no uncertainty in the duty of meeting the men coming in. If the man would advise, himself, then the train would be met. But between the two stools, as a manner of putting it, the scheme of meeting the man is more often a failure than a success. Members of the reception committee of the council, and others, have gone to the morning C.P.R. train to meet men and found that they had not arrived. Also to the afternoon G.T.R. train and to the evening G.T.R. train from Belleville, without result. In cases where the man wires to his friends, who advise the Patriotic Fund office, then the matter is at once arranged and the man met, as he should be met.

Kingston depot has been appealed to and asked to wire on the man's leaving there, the route he will take and possible time of arrival in Peterborough. If this is done the men can nearly always be met by one or other of the civic reception committees or members.

FRENCH CAPTURES NORTH OF MONASTIR

More Than 1200 Prisoners Taken With Two Towns and Hill, Where Enemy Offered Stubborn Resistance.

PARIS, March 20. — French troops in Macedonia, the war office announces, have captured a hill and two towns about three miles north of Monastir after stubborn resistance. They also took more than 1,200 prisoners.

Military activity of the British forces to the east of Lante Doiran resulted in bringing in of prisoners.

MAINTAINING CONTACT WITH RETREATING FOE; ADVANCE IS DIFFICULT

French Troops Move Forward Under Handicap.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 20—The War Office announces French troops are still maintaining contact with the Germans along the section of the front over which the retirement is taking place, but that the advance has become more difficult by reason of the destruction of all means of communication and owing to the bad weather.

German attacks at Avercourt Wood and Hill 304 on the Verdun front were repulsed. Serious loss was inflicted on the Germans.

The French troops have occupied about twenty additional villages and small towns in their advance on the retreating Germans. They have gone beyond Ham on the Somme River, and Chauny on the Oise which brings them appreciably nearer to the St. Quentin-Laon line. A convoy retiring in the direction of St. Quentin was captured, the advance at this point reaching a depth of 22 miles.

The enemy before his retirement devastated the country.

An earlier British report says The pursuit of the enemy continued today, our cavalry and advanced guards driving back the enemy's rearguards.

The ground gained extends for a depth of from two to eight miles and 40 more villages have fallen into our hnds.

MOBILIZATION ORDER AWAITED

RECRUIT 57TH BATTALION FOR HOME DEFENCE.

While the mobilization of the 57th Regiment for home defence has been authorized at Ottawa, orders have not reached the city, but are expected shortly, when the preliminary details of the mobilization here will be undertaken.

It has been stated that the services of Candian officers returned from service in France and England will be utilized in the reformation of units for home defence and it is possible that Majors Watt and Lech who are officers of the 57th Regt., will be appointed for the work here.

LIEUT. R. P. A. CRISP.

Word was received here this morning that Lieut. Crisp, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, but now in the Royal Air Service, was seriously ill at a military hospital at York, England. No particulars of the nature of the illness were given in the cablegram.

$200,000 FIRE

BLAZE IN BUILDING ON ST. PAUL STREET, MONTREAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, March 20 — Two hundred thousand dollars' loss was caused by fire this morning which started in the basement of the building on St. Paul St., occupied by the Ingersoll Packing Co.

FREE UNDER ARREST

WATERTOWN, N.Y., March 20. — Arthur Free, of Seeley's Bay, Ont., who has been sought since the murder of Mrs. Hattie Hill two weeks ago at Seeley's Bay, has been caught at Cape Vincent. He declares he is innocent. Free has been taken back to Canada.

GERMAN LOSSES

LONDON, March 20 — According to official lists, the total casualties of the Germans reported for the month of February in killed aggregated 60,471, making the total German casualties since the beginning of the war, exclusive of those in the navy or the colonies, 4,148,163.

PROOF OF SOLDIER'S DEATH

OTTAWA, March 20.—Life insurance companies doing business in Canada are called upon to recognize as satisfactory evidence of death the official certificates of death or presumption of death issued by the Militia Department regarding Canadian soldiers at the front.

ARRANGING FOR CHANGE IN THE LAW

One Outcome of Test Case in Claims for Damages.

Judgment in the case of Hopwood vs. the King, which was reserved at Peterborough, was delivered at Ottawa March 10. In his reasons for judgment, the Judge says: "To bring this case within the provisions of sub-section C of section 20 (of the Exchequer Court Act) the injury to property must be (1) on a public work; (2) there must be some negligence by an officer or servant of the Crown acting within the scope of his duties or employment; (3) the injury must be the result of such negligence. The suppliant's property is situate 20 or 25 miles south of Buckhorn dam, a dam which is part of the Trent Canal system, which undoubtedly, under section 108 of the B.N.A. Act and of the third schedule thereof, is the property of Canada. The canal route, however, runs through the northwestern part of Buckhorn Lake and does not go through Chemong Lake at all. Buckhorn Lake on the east connects with Chemong Lake through a passage, and the suppliant's property is at the southeast shore of the latter lake, as the whole appears upon a general plan exhibited at trial. Under the circumstances and under the decisions in Macdonald vs. the King (1), Hamburg-American Packing Co. vs. the King (2), Paul vs. the King (3), and Homested vs. the King (4), it is impossible to find that the suppliant's land in question in this case so situate 20 to 25 miles from Buckhorn dam and entirely out of the Canal route, was on a public work. . . In the result it must be found, following the decisions (of the above cases) that the injury complained of did not happen on a public work, and, moreover, that it did not result from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope or duties of his employment. Therefore both under the facts as controlled by deed of August, 1910, and under the law, the suppliant fails."

Make Change in Law.

On being asked if anything further could be done about this case, Mr. Burnham, M.P., said that it will be remembered by those who were present at the trial that the Judge said that his hands were tied by the case of Homested vs. the Kngl, in which the Supreme Court had reversed his decision and found that the injury must be inflicted actually on a public work. Mr. Burnham said, however, that it was understood that the Government was making arrangements to have the law altered, since it is well known that it was never intended that a Government should be liable only actually on a public work where they might inflict injury by that public work at a long distance from it. Mr. Burnham had hopes that the Government would do the fair thing in this matter and not feel it necessary to defend the public treasury by means of an absurd law. Of course the Government was wise in refusing to hand out money simply at haphazard and in demanding that these cases should be settled by the courts, but nevertheless Mr. Burnham said the absurdity of the law underlying this case was such that he had great hopes that real justice would be done, not withstanding that the case was greatly complicated by the fact that the floods that spring were higher and more sudden than at any time since 1870.

Mr. Hatton appeared for the Crown.

PTE. TOBIN HOME

Pte. Patrick Tobin, 468 Reid St., of the 93rd Batt., invalided home, reached the city last evening. The mayor and reception committee met him.

ALDERMEN ON THEIR DIGNITY RESENT OFFICER'S STATEMENT

Then Pass Grant of $1000 for 247th Battalion.

The 247th Battalion was voted a grant of $1,000 for recruiting purposes by the City Council last night.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, representing the Speakers' Patriotic League, the manufacturers and merchants, asked that the grant to the 247th Batt. be more favorably considered and in this plea he was assisted by Mr. Joseph Wearing.

Ald. Dobbin asked Mr. Wearing which he would favor for a grant—the bathing beaches or the battalion—and found that Mr. Wearing would give preference to the battalion.

Col. Ackerman gave the council some figures showing how the $1,000 given by the Government had been expended and also showing an overdraft of $266.64. There was no immediate possibility of the government giving any further assistance and he would be compelled to call in his men and keep plugging along. Peterborough should do everything in order to be satisfied that her part had been filled in relieving the situation.

Takes Exception

Ald. Dobbin took exception to the remarks made by Capt. Dancy at a recent recruiting meeting in which the city council was referred to as "a disgrace to the city." He wondered that Col. Ackerman, who was on the platform, did not remonstrate with the speaker. He would like Col. Ackerman to express regret over the remarks. The remarks coming from an outsider were objectionable.

Col. Ackerman had nothing whatever to do with the meeting farther than be at it as an officer. He had felt strongly as a citizen of Peterborough on the Council refusing the grant and as a citizen still thought that the Council's action was not a creditable one to Peterborough.

Ald. Smith thought Col. Ackerman's remarks to the council uncalled for. He would not make a grant to the battalion until the remarks were retracted. Other remarks had ben made along the same line.

"Sore" at Everybody

Ald. Stratton wanted to know if it was a matter of money in order to get recruits. He was afraid that Col. Ackerman was "sore" at himself, "sore" at the Government, "sore" at the Council, and "sore" at everybody.

Oil on Troubled Waters

Mr. Joseph Wearing poured oil on the troubled water by asking the council not to take the blunt remarks of soldiers too seriously. He felt sure that if the council was in Col. Ackerman's place and realised the indifference with which some people treated recruiting efforts they would also feel strongly. He asked a favorable consideration of the grant.

Mr. Joseph Worth stated that Capt. Dancy's remarks were no more pointed than the statements of Hon. George P. Graham had been.

Make Allowance

Ald. McIntyre, while he felt sore and indignant at the remarks of Capt. Dancy, did not blame Col. Ackerman. Every allowance should be made.

Ald. Dobbin was of the opinion that Col. Ackerman had picked up a load that he should never have incurred. He would not find fault with Col. Acherman for addressing re-

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE INAUGURATED

COLONIAL STATESMEN SIT WITH GOV'T MEMBERS IN COUNCIL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 20. — The Imperial Conference was inaugurated today. For the first time colonial statesmen sat with members of the British Goverument around the table in the council room at Premier Lloyd George's official residence.

MINISTERS OF ALLIES RETURN TOTHECAPITAL

AGAIN TAKE UP RESIDENCE IN ATHENS—BLOCKADE IS LIFTED.

LONDON, March 20. — Entente ministers to Greece have again taken up residence in Athens. The discharge of a cargo of wheat begins today at Piraeus, indicating the lifting of the blockade.

RETREAT OF ENEMY HAS SLOWED DOWN

Considerable Progress Reported for British Troops, in Face of Tempetuous Weather ---Cavalry Active.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 20. — Telegraphing from British headquarters in France, the Reuter correspondent says: The pace of the German retreat seems to have slowed down considerably during the past 24 hours, a fact for which the very wild weather may well be responsible. A violent equinoctial gale has been raging over northern France, and is still very heavy, although it has veered more to the north, with frequent fleeting glimpses of sunshine. Many rain squalls have swept over the battlefield, but these have not sufficied to render the ground bad, and there is a keen drying edge in the wind. Notwithstanding the tempestuous weather, however, our troops have made considerable progress. Following roughly from the south of Arras, our front now runs through, or on fringes, the following places: Beauvrains, Merc-atel, Boiry, Becquerelle, Boyelles, St. Leger, Mory, Vaulx Vraucourt, Beugny Halpincourt, Barastre bsu Lechelle, Etricorut, Moislain, Peronne, Doingt, St. Christ, Voyennes, and Caniza, to the neighborhood of Ham, on the eastward bank of the Somme. Our cavalry and infantry patrols are everywhere active to the east of this line. We hold the line of the Somme in strength from Peronne southward to Canizy. Our reconnaissance patrols are active as far east as Mons en Chausiee.

In several sectors between Bapaume and Arras our cavalry maintained their touch with the enemy all day yesterday. There was a good deal of skirmishing, but no heavy fighting.

LONDON, March 20. — Newspapers in Berlin published yesterday for the first time news of the big retreat on the Western front. The movement is explained as part of a strategical plan of the general staff for a decision on the Western front.

Newspapers profess complete confidence in Von Hindenburg, who, they presume, is repeating the strategy which proved so successful on the Russian front.

BERLIN, March 20. — There were several engagements of infantry and cavalry detachments yesterday between British and German forces on both sides of the Somme in the territory abandoned by the Germans, says army headquarters.

SEND THANKS FOR THE SOCKS

LETTERS RECEIVED FROM PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS.

Lance-Corp. Norman Saxby, 21st Batt., in a letter to the Kitchener League, writes as follows:—

In acknowledging receipt of parcels, I wish to thank you most heartily for your kindnes in remembering me. The socks, eats, etc., were a God-send. In one box I found forty-two pairs of socks, which I distributed among the Peterborough boys in the company, so nothing was wasted.

No doubt the young ladies who placed their addresses in the socks will be surprised to receive cards

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 20, 1917

THE NEW SANITARY INSPECTOR.

THE ALDERMEN would beyond a doubt have appointed a returned soldier to the important office of sanitary inspector if it had been possible to find such a man qualified for a position that calls for varied and peculiar attainments. Such a man was not available, and the members of Council had no recourse but to select the most highly qualified applicant who presented himself.

The appointment of Mr. Charles Stapleton will meet with general approval. He is a trained business man and a native of the city. He has in the management of his own private household affairs always been an example to the rest of the residents, and if all comply with the regulations as the inspector himself has done and will do, the new official will encounter little difficulty in the discharge of his duties.

There is no more important position in the civic administration than that to which Mr. Stapleton has just been appointed. The aldermen certainly moved in this matter with due caution in order to find a suitable official. The sanitary inspector has the health of the city in his hands. The milk supply and other articles of diet are likely to be pure or a menace accordingly as he exerts himself in their oversight. The inspector must see to it that the milk supplied the residents is produced and handled under sanitary conditions and that the meat is free from disease and butchered in compliance with the provisions of the Health Act. The restaurants and the laundries in the city come under his jurisdiction, and the enforcement of the garbage bylaw will not be the least of his troubles.

Mr. Stapleton has assumed onerous duties, but his friends and the aldermen who favored his appointment are confident that he will discharge them impartially, intelligently and faithfully.

STILL OBDURATE.

MRS. W. R. MORRIS and Messrs. Dr. Neal, Wearing and Worth appeared as a delegation from the citizens at the special meeting of Council last night to make another plea for municipal bathing beaches, but the six aldermen who voted against the proposition at a previous meeting stood by their guns and could not be dislodged from their position. Aldermen Stratton, Smith and McIntyre are the only active supporters of the much-needed improvement. Alderman Worth, who is out of the city, telegraphed his approval, but even if he were in his place in the Council semi-circle, his vote would not suffice to overcome the majority. The matter was further delayed by referring it again to the Committee of the Whole, where in due course it will be threshed out again.

Every argument in favor of public bath houses has been exhausted. The six opposing aldermen themselves are not opposed to the principle at stake. With them it is all a question of another fraction of a mill on the tax rate. If they are not convinced by this time, after all they have heard directly from the public, that the taxpayers would by a large majority sanction the proposed outlay, then their case is hopeless and the city will remain for another year at least without an improvement for which there appears to be an all but universal demand.

DISPOSING OF THE DEAD.

THE CREMATION of the remains of the late Duchess of Connaught will revive the interest in this modern method of disposing of the dead and will have a tendency to bring it into more popular favor. Those who hold that cremation is a pagan right have been given their answer. It has been endorsed by the leading family in the most highly civilized and advanced nation in the world.

On sanitary grounds alone cremation has everything to recommend it, and sentimental arguments can be used in its support. Better reduce to ashes the remains of departed friends than consign them to the slow and repulsive processes of corruption. Better far to preserve the physical well-being of the living than to cling stubbornly to long-established customs.

THE REAL LAWMAKERS.

THE SUPREME COURT has long been regarded as the real lawmaking power in the United States, and no House of Lords in a monarchy, no council in an autocracy, has more unlimited powers. The members of the court are appointed for life, and, once appointed, are supremely independent of the people. Congress can pass bills, but it rests with the members of the Supreme Court to say whether or not these laws shall ever be given effect.

The mighty tribunal have frequently handed down decisions that have shocked with surprise all legal authorities and have made ruins of precedents long and firmly established. One of these surprises came yesterday, when the Supreme Court decided that the Adamson law, making eight hours a legal day's work on all the railroads of the country, is perfectly constitutional. The various states have always been jealous of the right to enact their own labor laws. This right has been taken away from them by the decision of yesterday. It is, of course, impossible to tell upon what the Supreme Court decision is based until the text of the judgment is handed down. If, however, the court has the right to set the hours and the wages for the employes of the railroads, it has the right to do the same in any privately-owned concern in the country. This is a power possessed by no other body of men in the civilised world, and the wonder of it is that such a situation should arise in the leading democracy of the present day.

The owners of the railroads have always maintained that the Adamson law really amounts to confiscation and that they will be unable to operate under its provisions unless the government grants them something by way of compensation, such as authority to raise the rates to meet what is really a twenty-five per cent. increase in the scale of wages. Whatever the outcome, one thing is certain—the extra cost involved will eventually be borne by the patrons of the railroads.

The strike has been averted independently of the decision. It is difficult to see how the finding of the Supreme Court would have helped the issue between the members of the Brotherhoods and the railroads. If the court had held that he Adamson law was unconstitutional, the men would be in the same position as they were when the trouble started, and a strike would have been as probable as ever.

That a tieup of the American railroads has been avoided is a matter of satisfaction to Canada. A strike across the border would have paralyzed industry in this country even if the employes of the Canadian roads were not directly involved in the trouble. In the meantime, it will interest every student of economics to watch events in the United States and the effects that the revolutionary decision of the Supreme Court, from which the people have no appeal, will have upon the commercial life of that nation.

THE POTATO SHORTAGE.

OVER IN ENGLAND, whre he shortage in potatoes is as acute as anywhere in the world, the people accept the situation in a philosophical spirit, and when they are unable to get one article of diet, set about trying to find something that is just as good. One leading publicist says: "The almost unprecedented scarcity of of potatoes throughout the world compels the Government to ask the wealthier citizens to find substitutes. That is advice not easy to follow. Bread, that is the substitute that first crosses the mind, is already limited in amount. Rice is an import which requires the use of shipping that can ill be spared; and beans and peas are dear, scarce, and not easily digested by many people. However, we have the situation plainly exposed, and we have to make the best we can of it, and consume what other vegetables are available. The scarcity we have to face makes it the more urgent that there shall be no wase of seed potatoes upon which we depend for this year'st crop. We hope that every effort will be made to utilise the good potato-growing land that we have already under cultivation rather than venture on uncertain experiments on newly-broken plots in towns and elsewhere. When the farmers are supplied with all the seed they can profitably utilize will be time for experiments which have in them a grave element of uncertainty."

In England it is apparent the people have at least the grace to refrain from making political capital out of the shortage and do not seem disposed to hold the Government responsible for what is clearly an act of Providence, a condition that man-power is utterly unable to control.

GERMANY NEXT.

"WOE TO THE STATESMAN who cannot read the signs of the times," said the German Chancellor in the Reichstag in one of the most significant addresses ever delivered to that body. When the Chancellor spoke he had in mind the recent upheaval in Russia, when a dynasty was driven from power.

The German war party, who have deceived the German people, the autocrats who stake everything on a final throw of the dice, now that the game has gone against them, are sane enough to read the penalty that awaits them. A revolution in Germany is only a question of time, and that time grows shorter and shorter as the army falls back everywhere upon the Western Front.

Or is it that the autocrats now propose to play another card, to take the people into their confidence and awake new interest in the war by entrusting the members of the Reichstag to a greater extent with its management?

Sir William Hearst is not ready to give women seats in the Legislature. To force the privilege upon them before asking for it, or before they become used to the vote, which they have yet to experiment with for the first time, would be travelling very fast indeed. In extending the franchise to women, the Hearst Government has probably gone further than the conscious desire of the majority of women in Ontario demanded. The mothers, wives and daughters of this Province are certainly not suffering from any overwhelming anxiety to sit in the Legislative Chamber with their hats over their eyes.

Mother-in-Law.

(Portland Oregonian.)

The mother-in-law has been formally vindicated. She is an indispensable institution—an ornament and a necessity in many American families and an outcast from precious few of them; yet she has from time immemorial been made the unhappy butt of cheap jokes by witless jokers; and as a class she has suffered in the general esteem. But as an individual the mother-in-law of one family is the mother of another family. Who has ever dared say a word against a mother? Who that might have dared has ever said it?

"Save and Lend."

(The Times of India.)

To save and lend is a trifle when compared with what hundreds of thousands of soldiers of the Empire are doing every day; that, however, at least we can do. If there cannot, in Mr. Lloyd George's fine sentence, be equality of sacrifice, there can be equality of service. Here is the opportunity. If we shrink from our responsibility, we fail the Empire in its supreme moment.

THE WAR LOAN

(Monetary Times.)

Mr. T. B. Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, gave the following interview in Montreal:—

Our Canadian people responded so enthusiastically to the appeal of our country when the previous Dominion loans were issued, that we can be perfectly sure they will patriotically and unitedly support this loan also. It is quite unnecessary for me to urge Canadians to do their duty for they need no urging. I would, however, draw attention to the attractiveness of this loan from the strictly investment standpoint.

Five years ago no one would have believed that it would ever have been possible to obtain 20-year 5 per cent. bonds of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, at such a low price as 96, taking into acount the fact that a full half year's coupon is paid at the end of six months, although the purchase price is payable by four monthly instalments. The rate of interest is precisely 5.40 per cent. for the whole twenty years. Who would not rather have such an investment than even a gilt-edged mortgage?

I believe this loan will be heavily over-subscribed as every previous loan has been. This means that the bonds should rise to a substantial premium over the issue price as soon as the subscription lists are closed. Moreover, it is so nearly certain as anything financial can be, that, in say five years from now, when this war will be history, these same bonds will be worth considerably more than par. Even if they reach par, the holders will be able to sell at a profit of nearly 5 per cent., besides getting a high interest in the meantime. The fact that these bonds run for twenty years, and that they are payable in either Canada or New York, thus assuring them a very broad market, makes them more attractive as an investment than any previous issue.

Viewing the question from a strictly financial standpoint, I have no hesitation in saying this issue is so wonderfully attractive, that people will act wisely if they strain themselves to take all they can when both patriotism and financial wisdom urge us all to subscribe. The success of the loan is not open to doubt. I believe that the amount of subscription will be much in excess of the total for any previous loan offered by the Government. Our own company is subscribing for ten million dollars.

A DAILY NOVELETTE

The wife of the famous lawyer was worried.

"Darling," she said, "we simply cannot keep a cook. We've had three this week and a new one is coming tonight."

"Ah" said the famous lawyer, you are lax in your methors. Each cook should sign a contract, and once signed—ahem! They cannot leave! Now, I'll write out a contract and have the new cook sign it. And there you are."

On the stroke of 6.30 Marie Antoinette McCarthy, the new cook, weighing 238 1-2 pounds, arrived The famous lawyer approached her carefully and cautiously.

"I have a contract for you to sign before you go to work. I'll read it:

"'The party of the first part, Marie A. McCarthy, does hereby agree to cook, wash, iron, mend clothes, do dishes, sweeping and dusting for the party of the second part for one year from date. And the party of the first part agrees in part with the party of the second part to take part in any extra dinners planned by the party of the second party. And whereas the party of the first part thusly——"

Here the lawyer was struck on the head by a milk bottle, and thrown down the cellar stairs, the contract following.

The wife of the famous lawyer came rushing into the kitchen.

"What's s'matter? Where's my husband?" she asked.

"You will find his first part on the cellar stairs, mum, and I think his second part is in the cellar!" replied Marie Antoinette.

And she victoriously sauntered out of the front door.

WILL YOU FORGET?

The following poem was clipped out of an English newspaper by a member of the 93rd Batt. in the trenches and sent with a request for publication in The Review:—

One who has been through the hell of war and pain often asks himself the questions, as he sees the gay ladies and flappers swishing past in an enviable oblivion of laughter—"Have they forgotten war?" and "Will they forget?"

Will you forget?
When all the fight is done
And victory is won;
Will you forget?
The soldiers in their pride,
Who freely fought and died,
Will you forget?

Will you forget?
When War gives us his lease
To gentle-spoken Peace—
Will you forget?
The heroes in their graves
That you might not be slaves.
Will you forget?

Will you forget?
The widow and her brood?
Oh heavens, if you should!
Will you forget?
The blinded and the lamed.
The broken and the maimed.
Will you forget?

Will you forget?
Like those in other wars.
The soldier and the scars,
Will you forget?
When times are safe and soft—
My God! I wonder oft
Will you forget?

DE KOVEN OPERA

ROBIN HOOD AND HIS MERRIE MEN AT GRAND NEXT WEEK.

"Robin Hood" and his merrie men will hold forth at The Grand next Tuesday, March 27, when the Walker-Stevens Opera Company will present the all-star revival of de Koven's most famous work, "Robin Hood." The present elaborate presentation of this little masterpiece is the most ambitious effort yet made of a series of revivals that are calculated to foster a taste for a form of art that is in the languishing state.

Originally produced twenty-five years ago, "Robin Hood" has enjoyde a career of remarkable prosperity. It has been performed more than seven thousand times, and the melody of its score and the wit of its book will live to give delight to generations yet unborn. The present production will doubtless serve as a sharp reminder of the marked deterioration of the standard of light opera, and it may serve as a good purpose in eliminating the vacuous exhibitions of nonsensical vulgarity that has taken the place and usurped the name and field of this kind of work. "Robin Hood" has been given a worthy setting and the production is an artistic as well as an elaborate one. The market place of old Nottingham and the green shades of Sherwood Forest have been reproduced with fidedity and an attempt has been made to preserve the atmosphere of old England in the days when Richard I. was king. The costumes have been designed with care and are of the period. To properly cast "Robin Hood" Reginald de Koven drew on the resources of the grand opera houses of this country and Europe. Ivy Scott, a famous prima donna, with a rare lyric voice, was secured from the Metropolitan Opera New York.

In the cast are Ralph Brainard, James Stevens, Phil Branson, Cora Tracy, Ed. Andrews, Tillie Salinger, Herbert Waterous, Jeanette Studley, David Andrada and a superb chorus.

EXPLORER'S CIGAR NOT SO VALUABLE

A Conspiracy That Failed---Famous Discoverer Cherishes Poor Substitute for Good Smoke

[illegible]

Sir Ernest Shackleton was once a very junior officer on a passenger boat, and it happened that on one voyage Lord Rothschild was a passenger. He became quite friendly with the young "fourth," and one evening gave him a magnificent cigar. He wrapped it up in silver paper and kept it as a cherished memento of his friendship with the great man.

SIR ERNEST SHACKLETON

On subsequent voyages he developed a habit of exhibiting his treasure to favored lady passengers, recounting at the same time how he and Lord Rothschild had been "quite chummy." The chief engineer, a dour old Scotsman, thought he would teach him a lesson, so he conspired with the doctor to steal the cigar and replace it with one of a much inferior kind—in fact, with a weed that had cost him twopence at the last port. They wrapped the imposter carefully in the silver paper and in the silk handkerchief, and they bore the real Rothschild smoke to the chief's cabin.

With a five-shilling cigar in their possession for the first time in their lives, they found it difficult to decide who should have the smoking of it, and so they tossed a coin. The doctor won, and bore his prize off in malicious triumph to his own room, there to enjoy it in solitary state. His triumph was, however, somewhat short-lived, for in five minutes he was back again with the chief, very woefully countenanced and swearing volubly. The Rothschild was a somewhat inferior smoke to that which they had left in its place. Somebody had been before them!

The joke was never divulged aboard that ship and Shackleton left the line soon afterwards, so that it is remotely possible that the intrepid Antarctic explorer still treasures in some secret cabinet, a cigar which he believes to have been given him by Rothschild, but which actually was, in its prime, poor value for two pence.

Poultry Cleanliness

Cleanliness is one of the most important factors for poultry-keeping. Dirt means disease, and when disease appears the death-rate is usually high. Houses should be kept clean by sweeping down the walls, by removal of all rubbish, by renewal of the material in nest boxes, and by occasional lime-washing. Disinfectants are most valuable, but do not remove the cause. The air in houses must be purified by constant circulation, and plenty of sunlight should reach every part of the house. The soil must be kept sweet by cultivation, or, in the case of small plots, by removal and renewal. All appliances of whatever kind must be kept clean. Parasites cannot live unless the conditions are favorable. Food troughs and waste vessels should be regularly washed in hot water. The body-feathers of fowls must be kept clear of parasites by nature's own method, a dust-bath. The food should be carefully prepared, the birds should be fed regularly and they should receive just as much as they will clear up rapidly.

Better Rubber Foot-gear

An Ohio concern is making rubber boots and shoes by compressing the materials together, claiming that it will prevent cracks and leaks.

WHY JOFFRE REFUSED A MARSHAL'S BATON

A typical story is being told of General Joffre. When Poincare came to Alsace after the first French advance, he brought with him in his trunk more than one marshal's baton. And when he offered the honor to Joffre the Generalissimo asked the President if he had one for Castelnau. Castelnau is the young genius who has sprung from a fairly humble position to the highest command. But he is also a Royalist, and there was no marshal's baton for him. "Very well," said Joffre, "neither I, nor any of my colleagues will accept from the Republic the honor it refuses to a better man than any of us."

PREPARING SALT FOR DOMESTIC USE

Most of the Product Is Taken From Underground—In Both Rock and Brine Form

There are three principal sources from which salt is obtained, that is, salt lakes, the sea, and salt mines. The great Salt Lake in Utah provides a very good quality of salt, but it has to be purified before it is suitable for the table. The world depends for its chief supply on the beds of salt rock underground. The biggest salt mines are in Poland and Austria-Hungary, some of which have been worked for hundreds of years, and contain dining rooms, ball rooms, and chapels hewn out of the solid rock salt.

Within the last generation a new method has been found of mining salt. Instead of, as formerly, making shafts down which the men are swung, and up which the salt is raised after being hewn or blasted, the following method is adopted. Holes are bored in the ground, sometimes from 500 feet to 1,200 feet in depth, until the salt beds are reached. Tubes are then inserted from 9 inches to 12 inches in diameter, and water is sent down to the bottom, where it dissolves the salt rock, forming strong brine. This eventually rises up the tube, whence it is pumped to the surface. If quite saturated it then contains 26 per cent. of salt, the remainder being water generally colored with clay or other impurity. The brine is then run into salt pans for evaporation.

For 200 years at least, until quite recently, only one method was employed for this evaporation. The iron salt pans are from 60 feet to 80 feet long, 30 feet broad, and 2½ feet deep. Huge fires are lighted at one end of the pans, and flues brought underneath. The brine is boiled, and the water evaporated until the salt falls down to the bottom of the pan. It is then raked out and laid in heaps to drain, and is then, for many purposes, ready for the market.

The temperature at which the brine is evaporated determines the quality of the salt crystals. When fine table salt is wanted the boiling is conducted more rapidly, and this makes a finer crystal.

A second type of evaporation pan is what is known as the vacuum pan. The brine, instead of being poured into pans, is run through pipes into large closed boxes, from which the air is, in a great measure, removed by pumps. By this means the water is removed much more cheaply.

ALCOHOL AND INSURANCE

Total Abstainers Have More Favorable Expectations of Life

The value of abstinence from alcohol as a life-preserver was exemplified in one aspect of an address which Dr. Eugene L. Fisk of New York, delivered to the members of the Insurance Institute of Toronto. Quoting the experience of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution, he stated that the general class in that company showed a very low mortality, but the abstaining class, about equal numbers and homogeneous to the general class in all respects, except for the non-use of liquor showed a mortality of 27 per cent. below that of the general class over a period of 44 years.

Applying the mortality rate of the abstainers to a company where the average age is 35, the distribution of policy forms normal, and the mortality 9 points below the British experience, a reduction in the net premium required of $3.03 would result.

The Horse on the Farm

Every farm should have at least one trusty horse that the women can harness and drive whenever they wish.

Every farm team should be matched with care as to temperament and size. Good work can never be done where one horse is quick and nervous, and the other slow and lagging.

A horse which is worked hard every day should be fed with a view to producing muscle rather than fat. When idle, a horse's ration should be reduced considerably.

A Useless Climb

Peter Thompson went to visit his son in Montreal. It was his first visit to the city and the young man showed him all the sights, concluding with an ascent of Mount Royal. In a burst of enthusiasm young Thompson said "See, father, isn't it wonderful down there!"

"Well," said his father, "if it's so wonderful down there, what did you drag me up here for?"—Everybody's Magazine.

BEARS' TERRIBLE COMBAT

Fought to the Death in Cage in Edinburgh Park

As the result of an unequal fight waged in the bear-pit at the Scottish Zoological Park, Edinburgh, the smallest of the brown bears, a favorite among the juvenile visitors to the park, was killed.

Seven bears in all—five brown and two black—were accommodated in the pit, and the fight originated through the small brown bear grabbing a biscuit which a larger bear considered was intended for it. This beast attacked the smaller one with deadly fury.

Some laborers hurled stones at the attacker, but the stones had little effect, and an attendant, who was hastily summoned, gamely went into the pit to the assistance of the overborne animal. He got hold of one of the large bear's hind-legs, but was unable to pull the bear off its victim.

With a heavy club the keeper drove off the attacker, but only for a moment or two. The keeper also used a heavy whip until it broke.

In deadly grips, the two bears rolled into the water, but the fight continued for some time, until the big bear was eventually beaten off. Badly mauled, the victim got into a cage, and its wounds were dressed and restoratives applied, but without avail, for the animal died later in the evening.

An examination of the carcass showed the terrible power in Bruin's claws. From the manner in which the big bear commenced to beg from the spectators immediately after the fight had ended the unequal nature of the combat was evident, for he appeared to have suffered little hurt.

TATTOOED FOR LOVE

White Man's Sacrifice Failed to Win Dusky Belle

Martin Johnson went "Through the South Seas with Jack London," the author, and writing of his experiences he says:

"On one of the small islands we met a man who was an interesting subject. He had come years before, when only a young man. He was in the employ of some trading concern that he still worked for, and on his rounds among the islands he had met and fallen in love with a native girl, but she only laughed at him, saying that he was not nearly so good-looking as the natives because not tattooed. The girl's brother was just learning this art, and as he thought the white man's skin would be fine practice, he persuaded the trader to be tattooed.

"The man quit the company, and for six months lived in a native house in the mountains while the boy practised tattooing on him every day, until the work was done and the skin healed up. Then he made his way to the girl's home. At first the girl was frightened, then she nearly went into hysterics, and ridiculed him; and finally, she insulted him in the worst possible manner—she spat upon him, and ran away into the jungle. And the tattooed white man never saw her again. Now he is one of the wealthiest men in Polynesia; pearl shell, copra, and sandalwood have reaped him a fortune that is no use to him, for he can never return to civilized people again."

Great Future For Fisheries

That Canada's future in the fishing industry has even greater possibilities than Norway's was a statement made by Dr. H. Hjort, Deputy Minister of Norwegian Fisheries, in an address to the Canadian Institute at Toronto. Dr. Hjort, one of the greatest authorities on fishing in the world, was brought to Canada by the Government to study conditions here and make some suggestions for the assistance of the industry. The varieties of fish found here, he explained, were identical with those found in Norway, the greatest fishing centre in the world.

YOUNG ENEMY'S CANDOR

"I Would Fight For Germany if I Could"

Gerald Roderwald, aged twenty, of the Priory, Crystal Palace Park road, Sydenham, was charged at Penge Police Court, England, with being an absentee under the Military Service Act. Mr. G. C. Whiteley, for the defence, contended that Roderwald did not come within the Act. His parents were German; his father was interned and his mother had returned to Germany; and he himself was here for his education only. His relations were fighting on the side of Germany, and he was perfectly frank in saying that his sympathies were with the Germans and that if he could have gone back he would be fighting for Germany.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

Money talks, and it is also the only thing that understands the language of the flowers on an Easter bonnet.

If a man shows his teeth and smiles he will attain his object much quicker than if he shows his teeth and growls.

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10	per cent.	on application;
30	"	16th April, 1917;
30	"	15th May, 1917;
26	"	15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, March 12th, 1917.

WORLD'S DARKEST STORY TOLD IN SILENT DRAMA

"Intolerance" Now Running at the Grand Opera House, a Startling Commentary Upon Social Sins.

The protoplay "Intolerance" that is now running at the Grand Opera House is at once a history and a sermon and is probably the most ambitious project ever undertaken in the moving picture industry. It comes to Peterborough after successful runs in other cities endorsed by the unanimous approval of the press critics and the large crowds that witnessed the performance yesterday at the matinee and in the evening will add their commendation to that which has already been conferred upon it.

The play depends for the moral lesson which every drama is supposed to impart upon showing that the spirit of intolerance, as old as the world itself, is responsible for all human misery. It brought about the downfall of Babylon, the home of the oldest civilization in the world. It was responsible for the cruel butchery of thousands of Christians, for the persecution of the Nazarene and the tragedy on Golgotha and in the present day for all manner of social and industrial ills. The modern uplifter is unmasked, shown up in what is too often his or her true character as an officious meddler who really works more harm than good.

The various scenes are shown concurrently and the pictures are all that the most critical in art can ask for. The siege of Babylon by Cyrus when the city was defended by the soldiers of Belshazzar fighting on the walls three hundred feet high and wide enough to permit four horsemen to ride abreast on the summit is a new triumph in modern photography. No more striking spectacle was ever shown on the screen than that of the Persian army, horse, infantry and chariots, marching against the greatest city that ever fell a prey to the despoiler.

The scenes from the life of Christ are depicted with a delicate reverence. The representation of the woman taken in sin is a sermon in itself and that of the Crucifixion, shrouded in the supernatural darkness, the rumbling of the earthquake startlingly reproduced, is something likely to impress the truth upon the mind as no oral recital of the story ever can.

The modern story of the play is a sarcastic commentary on social conditions and of the frequent misunderstandings that arise between capital and labor. The lesson taught is that the rich are constantly grinding down the poor for their own exploitation and that the social reformer's main ambition is too often the advancement of his own personal interests.

The strength of the entire play rests upon its fidelity to truth. There is not a suspicion of exaggeration in any scene and even the costumes of the ancients and the magnificence of their surroundings are reproduced with a historical accuracy in which expense never entered into the consideration. "Intolerance" has been heralded as the greatest play of its kind and the success with which it is meeting everywhere justifies the claim.

The exhibition will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night. with matinees each day. One of the features is the excellent music furnished by an orchestra under the leadership of Mr. George Wiseman, who helped in this capacity to make The Birth of a Nation famous.

Mr. B[illegible] D. Courtney owns the Canadian rights for the exhibition of Intolerance, Mr. D. W. Griffith being the producer. It was Mr. Courtnew who brought The Birth of a Nation to this country.

THEATRICAL

"The Girl Who Smiles" beamed on a large audience at the Grand Opera House last night in a winsome way, and won the commendation of all present, says a criticism from the Hamilton Times. The production, the first to reach Hamilton from the Regal Corporation, is a musical comedy in three acts, of French origin, and is sufficiently bright and fast to entertain the average opera enthusiast. The box office intimates that this afternoon and night will be acapacity.

Like "The Red Rose" "The Merry Widow" and numerous other musical comedies of a like nature, "The Girl Who Smiles" involves Bohemian life in the Latin quarter of Paris, around which is written a story of Marie Fabre and Francois Dechanelle, the former a daughter of a wealthy parent and the other an artist, struggling, of course, for fame and wealth. It is another case of patental disownment and subsequent peace-making through the appearance, several years later, of a grandson to Marie's father.

"The Girl Who Smiles" abounds in musical selections of a tuneful variety, and these really give to the comedy a distinguishing mark. "Teach Me, Please, to Smile," is the favorite of the production, and with an air not altogether unlike "My Hero," it rapidly becomes a mental fixture. There are a score or more others, augmented, between the acts, by a violin solo by Maud Beatrice Beers.

The comedy is not of the extreme type so evident in similar productions, although, at times, action becomes fast, particularly during the studio scene. It is here that Dechanelle and Clarisse Luniere present the "Temptation" waltz, a terpsichorean number which wins the approval of the audience.

Miss Beth Groves Young appears as Marie and fills the role notably, her vocal contributions being generally enjoyed. Willis Claire accompanies her as Dechanelle, the artist, and with youth and a pleasing voice on his side, adds considerable attraction to the play. Tom Collins, as the chef, supported by Clara Thrapp, as maid, provide most of the vigorous humor appearing prominently during the entire three acts.

THE OVERLAND IN AUSTRALIA

ROADSTER OPENS UP NEW COUNTRY—ASTONISHES THE INLANDERS.

TRIP OF 1,500 MILES.

In Australia there is a single automobile which is given the credit for opening up more territory to motoring than the size of all the province of Manitoba. It is an Overland Roadster purchased in 1913 by A. J. Cotton, one of Australia's leading pasturers.

Mr. Cotton is a large holder of land in the Northern Territory, hundreds of miles from a railway, and he bought the car simply as an experiment in an effort to personally look after his holdings. His objective point was Booroolola station, on the MacArthur River. As soon as the car was deliverd to him, he shipped it to Longneck, the terminus of Queensland's Central Railway. Then he drove 600 miles to Cloncurry, the terminus of the Northern Railway line. Leaving Cloncurry, he headed west for Camooweal, and from the latter point northeast to Burketown, on the Gulf of Carpentaria. His arrival in Burketown is regarded by the natives of that district as an historical event, inasmush as it marked the appearance of the first automobile ever seen in that locality.

From Burketown Mr. Cotton commenced the final stage of his trip, which took him 500 miles through country inhabited chiefly by wild blacks. Without any mechanical difficulty whatever he eventually arrived at his destination, Booroolools station, 1,500 miles from the starting point.

The performance of the Overland Roadster has indirectly opened up territory more than a thousand miles square to motor transport.

LEAGUES RALLY

BRIGHT MEETING HELD AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH.

A very interesting and profitable service was held in St. James' Church last evening. The occasion was a rally of the young people's societies of the city. There was a good attendance and a spirit of enthusiasm pervaded the gathering.

Reports on the work of the societies represented were given and addresses were delivered by Mr. C. S. Thompson, B.A. president of George Street Church League, and Mr. F. J. Voaden, president of the Trinity Church C.L.A. Miss Etta Kemp sang.

Other similar meeting are planned for the future.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS TO WORK ON SEVEN ACRES OF LAND

Every effort will be made by local committees to boost along the Government's request for greater production. On Saturday night the Finance Committee of the City Council met with the Municipal Committee of the Trades and Labor Council and talked over the cultivation of the vacant city lots and plots of land adjoining the city.

Quite a few lots and acres were offered free to the committees, some being in the north and some in the south. There still remain many vacant lots in the city that were not offered, and a canvass will be made to find out whether the owners intend raising crops or have allowed others the use of the land for vegetable purposes.

The summer camp of the Y. M. C. A. boys will now be held on the property donated for use by Mr. W Harper of Lakefield. The block of seven acres is at the river below Crawford's Grove. It will be spaced off, plots allotted to each boy, a competition instituted, and practical instruction given in the matter of gardening and production. Then in the fall, when the results are known, there will be a Fall fair and certain prizes.

BYLAWS CONFIRMED.

Bylaws confirming grants to the Children's Aid, the Health Association, increasing the salaries of the auditor and employes of the city treasurer's office and ratifying an agreement with the Roman Catholic Diocese of Peterborough were passed.

BROADER NAME FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION

The city will have an association which will have a larger and broader scope than "Peterborough Industrial" would convey. Several names such as Peterborough Civic Association were suggested, and the matter was referred to a committee composed of Messrs. T. F. Matthews, J. J. Hartley, W. H. Denham and Mayor Duffus to draw up a constitution. Another committee composed of Messrs. R. Denne, R. Turner, and Jos. Begley, will draw up the committees for the new association. In this respect the committees suggested were an executive, civic improvement and good roads, industrial, labor and mercantile, transportation, publicity, social and reception, exhibition, public holidays and sports, and education.

This was the result of the first meeting of the committee selected by Mayor Duffus at the recent banquets. All the members, Messrs. T. F. Matthews, Mayor Duffus, Jos. Begley, J. J. Hartley, Roland Denne, R. Turner and W H. Denham were present at the city clerk's office on Saturday night.

AID FOR BATHING BEACHES NOT DECIDED BY COUNCIL

Request for $2000 is Turned Over to Committee

The Playgrounds Association had a deputation before the City Council last night asking that the application for a grant towards bathing beaches be reconsidered and the committee of the whole council will deal with the matter this evening.

Dr. F. C. Neal stated that many of the citizens were disappointed when the grant was refused and the Playgrounds Association's plans for this year were to a great extent interfered with. He was confident that the majority of the citizens favored the grant.

Mr. Joseph Worth was extremely anxious to see the installation of bathing beaches. The Government had asked workers on munitions to forego their holidays and during the hot months the bathing beaches would give a relaxation. From a moral standpoint the beaches should be encouraged.

Mrs. W. R. Morris would not believe that the council had refused the request of so many citizens. She hoped that they had only set the request aside to be dealt with later. For that reason she would not ask them to reconsider it, but to consider it seriously. The people wanted bathing beaches even if it increased the tax rate one-sixth of a mill. The industrial worker and tenant are paying increased taxes by increased rent. The ponds could be used as public rinks in the winter. Plans had been prepared and Mrs. Morris asked that the mayor appoint a small committee to confer on the matter with the association. The $2,000 asked would be money well spent.

Mr. Joseph Wearing knew that there was a strong demand for the bathing beaches.

Ald. Dobbin moved that the matter be referred to the committee of the whole council.

Ald. Stratton wanted to deal with the request at once. If it was referred to the committee it delayed fixing the rate, which he hoped would be done at the meeting. He moved in amendment that a grant of $2,000 be made.

Ald. Smith in seconding the amendment, stated that they were only the servants of the people. Bathing beaches were a necessity in a progressive city or town.

Not Enough Money

Ald. Dobbin stated that the objection he had to the request was that $2,000 was not enough money to build the beaches. He was in favor of bathing beaches where men, women and children could use them free of charge without danger. They could not be built for $1,000 each. The association were going to supplement this by charging locker fees, which was class legislation. The free market, the grant to the battalion must be taken care of, and he felt that the rate should not be struck until these matters had been settled. Then the beaches were not needed this year because of the war. The council had many things to consider that the association did not know of. Surface draining in East City near Gilchrist St. had been put off in order to curtail expenditures. The rate would be 30 mills if it had not been for last year's surplus of $19,000.

Ald. Smith thought that Ald. Dobbin was wrong. The protective houses, 20 x 80 feet could be built for $600 each. That left $400 each for caretaking. There was no objection to a 10c locker fee.

Ald. Saunders seconded Ald. Dobbin's motion.

Ald. Stratton's amendment was lost and the matter went to the committee.

Mayor Duffus appointed Ald. Stratton, Dobbin and Duncan a special committee to confer with the association.

Some of the girls with "The Girl Who Smiles" here next Saturday.

MERCHANTS AND LABOR MEN ON FREE MARKET

WILL HAVE JOINT MEETING BEFORE THE COUNCIL TAKES ACTION.

Messrs. T. C. Elliot, G. L. Myland and M. J. Maher appeared before the City Council last night and asked that action be deferred on the question of a free market until after a joint meeting of the Trades and Labor Council and merchants on Wednesday night.

Mayor Duffus assured them that no action would be taken until after the meeting tomorrow night.

MAY GO HIGHER

Clause Fixing the Tax Rate is Not Passed.

Peterborough's tax rate may be higher than 28 mills, as recommended by the Committee of the Whole Council. Last night the clause fixing the rate was referred back to the committee.

Ald. Stratton pointed out that it was not good financing to run the city's business on too close a line. Every item had been cut down and the grant to the battalion had been made. He thought that if the rate was raised 45-100 of a mill all emergencies could be taken care of.

Mayor Duffus opposed the rate being increased. He hoped to get taxes on the land value of the hydro property and this would cover all grants. A high tax rate was injurious to the city from an industrial standpoint.

Ald. Stratton was not fighting for an increased tax, but the Council should not leave a deficit at the end of the year. Last year Council did not spend money because they had it.

Mayor Duffus stated that he would find out definitely when in Toronto and would let the committee know whether the Government were going to adopt the resolution of the Hydro Commission.

Ald. McIntyre could see no reason for an increased tax rate.

Ald. Stratton's motion referring the clause back was carried.

C. S. STAPLETON APPOINTED SANITARY INSPECTOR AT $900

Also Receives $100 a Year For Expenses.

Chas. S. Stapleton was appointed Sanitary Inspector by the City Council last night at a salary of $900 per year and $100 travelling expenses.

Mayor Duffus insisted that the Council take some action in regard to the appointment, and the bylaw was read a first time, and then the second reading was taken up.

All four of the candidates considered by the committee were voted on by the Council.

In the first vote Dr. Leyell and Mr. Metcalfe were eliminated, and on the vote between Messrs. Powell and Stapleton the latter won out.

The Property Committee were instructed to see that the inspection of slaughter houses and dairies was rigidly carried out and monthly reports made on the inspections.

When They Split Poland

The first partition of Poland was actively commenced 142 years ago, under the terms of a compact between Frederick the Great of Prussia and Catherine of Russia, in which Austria was invited to take part. About one-third of Poland was seized on this occasion. The second partition, in 1793, and the third, in 1795, practically completed the dismemberment of the ancient kingdom, and after the congress of Vienna, a century ago, nothing was left of Poland but a memory. Before the first partition the kingdom stretched from the Carpathians to the Baltic, a distance of 600 miles. It is to these original lines that the Czar has promised to restore Poland after the conclusion of the present war. During the last century Germany, Austria, and Russia alike have sought to stamp out the language, literature, and national spirit of the Poles, but with little success. The attempt to force school children to adopt the German tongue has resulted in many "strikes" of the pupils, and the Poles have been so determined in their attitude that all the Governments involved have been forced to make compromises.

French knapsacks weigh 49 pounds, which is considerably less than their weight during the Franco-German war of 1870.

OBITUARY

WELLINGTON FERGUSON

Wellington Ferguson died at his home, Margaret Island, Rice Lake, this morning, after an illness of a month. He was aged 52. Before taking up residence at Rice Lake 12 years ago, deceased lived in this city and was employed at the Peterboro Lock Works. He is survived by his widow, three sons, Pte. Harry Ferguson in France, Roland and Sidney of this city, and two daughters, Mrs J. J. Andrews, Saskatchewan, and Mrs. Wm. Brough, city.

The funeral will be held at Roseneath on Thursday afternoon.

How Stratford Does It

Stratford Council will advertise for land and tillers, and if a sufficient number of acres are offered and enough applications received for working these, the Council will undertake the cost of preparing the land for planting. In case of soldiers' dependents this service will be free, while to others just the actual expense will be collected.

MINCED LAMB ON TOAST

Put cold lamb through the meat chopper until you have about two cups. Melt one tablespoon of butter in the saucepan, add a little boiling water, and then the chopped meat. Season with salt and pepper. Toast slices of bread, butter, moisten edges with spoonful of boiling water and cover each side with the minced lamb.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

WHEN A JOB IS WELL DONE

If your glasses break and you have them repaired, it is nice to feel that they have been put in practically "good as new" condition. Dr. Fowler's power-driven outfit in his repair department, which is in charge of an expert, assures perfect satisfaction, and new condition on broken frames and mounts. New lenses ground while you wait. All repairs completed quickly.

Winter In Florida.

While so many folks in the north are wrapped in furs and woolens, those who are spending the winter in Florida need no such garments. They lose, however, many pleasures that make cold weather very enjoyable to many people—old and young. For instance, they cannot skate because there is no ice, and the only coasting they may do is on a roller coaster. Sleigh riding is also an unknown sport where the warm sun shines. The little people here pictured probably don't give a thought to those sports because they are having a jolly time in the sand. No Jack Frost to nip their toes and color their cheeks.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

Warning To The Public

Mistakes are humiliating, expensive and annoying. So don't forget the following when you are buying your automobile:—

Every dollar you can save in price and maintenance can be used as a revenue producer.

The Ford car is the most economical to buy, and by far the most economical to maintain.

SERVICE.—If you cannot get first-class service, you have a poor investment.

At the Duffus Garage there are carried in stock all parts necessary for repairs, at the lowest possible cost. $7000 worth of spare parts. Can you get this with any other automobile?

Then, again, if you wish to exchange, you can do it without a dollar of loss.

Buy the Ford, and invest the difference in the War Loan.

BOWLING

The game last night between the C. G. E. and the All-Stars of the Can. Gen. Elec., captained by Mr. Langley, provided the bowling fans with a good night's sport.

The All-Stars, though defeated in each game, showed that with a little steady practice the tide might be reversed at any time.

Langley of the All-Stars had the high single score of 187 while Somerville of the C. G. E. team had high three games with a total of 508. He also was the only man in the game to roll over the 500 mark.

Early Marriages.

Dr. William Lee Howard is authority for the statement that if a girl marries at eighteen her offspring are apt to be totally unfitted to struggle with the problems of the world. At the age of twenty-one she may give birth to at least one child of high efficiency, but those that were born before or after will be unfit. When parents are too young, the girl under twenty-one and the man under twenty-seven, the offspring are too often delicate, and malformation and idiocy are common among the offspring of too young parents.

A French authority declared that the ideal age for parenthood is thirty-three years in men and twenty-six years in women.

marks to the council, but would not stand for a rank outsider expressing himself. He moved that the Council make a grant of $1,000.

Ald. Weir had not changed his opinion ..e would not turn down the battalion and give a grant to the bathing beaches.

Mayor Duffus sympathized with Col. Ackerman for his work in connection with the battalion. He felt that the council would meet the situation and assured the deputation that he personally favored the grant.

Ald. Stratton seconded the motion and gave vent to his opinion of the eligible young men of the city who had not enlisted.

The motion carried.

Ald. Smith suggested that the city offer a bonus for recruits.

Col. Ackerman thanked the council for the grant and made matters easier by saying that his remarks were made from a purely military standpoint.

HARRY LAUDER TELLS HOW BRAVE MOTHERS REMEMBER SOLDIER SONS

Harry Lauder, who has made the people of two continents laugh and the name of his native land famous, has addressed an open letter to the mothers of Britain who have sons buried in the cemeteries in the war zone. Harry—it would sound unusual and out of place to refer to him as Mr. Lauder—has lost his only son in battle and the grief of the bereaved mother has aroused his sympathy for the thousands who have been similarly afflicted. Unfortunately there are a number of mothers in Peterborough to whom the letter of the famous exponent of Scottish humor and character, couched in his characteristic style, will have special interest. The letter says:—

Sitting in my little parlor—Mrs. Lauder one side of the fire, and I the other side of the fire—we came to the conclusion that I might say a few words to the mothers of Britain.

I may mention here that Mrs. Lauder is a great woman, and far cleverer than I. And it was natural when I thought of writing such a thing as this present article that I should ask her advice. So you'll understand that the following words came equally from Mrs. Lauder and myself.

Nobody but a mother can understand what she gives up when she gives up her son. There's a tie between father and son which can never be broken, and the loss of my boy leaves me with a sinking, broken, lonely feeling round the heart. For we were pals, my boy and I.

The Wee Bundle in Her Arms

But the mother's loss! My dear wife bears it very quietly, and very quietly at such moments as these she tells me a little of what she feels.

From birth up the child is so near to her—from the time when somebody tells her "It's a boy," to the time when she tells her husband with glad and fearful wonder: "He's a man, now John," or "Harry," as the case may be.

At first he's just a wee bundle in her arms. And how she has to care for him then! Every moment of the day and night her thoughts are with him. Such a to-do with feeding and minding and soothing! Such a dressing and undressing! Such a making and making fine of baby clothes! Such a ceaseless watch and guard to keep away the thousand little ills that baby flesh is heir to. The wee bairn is still part of her, and his faintest cry goes through her heart.

Oh, be sure that the mother of a dead soldier sees her son as he was in those old days. Be sure that in the lonely night watches, in fancy she still holds him against her breast, rocking him gently to sleep and crooning over him the old world songs her mother sang to her. He was a great strapping fellow when he went out to the war—six feet, maybe, with broad shoulders and fierce moustache. But to his mother he is always first and foremost, that wee bundle in her arms.

She Remembers Now

And then he learns to toddle. That's a grand day when first he toddles from his mammy to his daddy and back again. And he learns to talk. Was ever poetry as wonderful as those nonsense baby words? And now he's hanging at her skirts all day, peering from behind them at the great world and the postman. And now he's breeched. His daddy's a proud man, and maybe his mother is proud too. Yet she sighs as she folds up the baby petticoats and puts them in the press with a sprig of lavender and a tear.

Care for a him! How a mother has to care. All the childish mishaps, ay! and all the childish naughtiness, fall upon her. 'Tis she must send him out to school with shining morning face, and welcome him back to dinner black from head to foot from a roll in the mud with lang Sandy Tamson's Sandy. Oh, he'll vex her often enough (what lad that is worth his salt doesn't?); but she's proud of him, he's the apple of her eye, and even her severest reproofs are caresses.

All this the mother remembers now, as she sits with her man, or may be by herself, at the fireside. Those childish hands still pull at her skirts, that childish treble still echoes round the house. A heavy-footed young rascal comes clattering down the stairs, and a beloved little voice seems to ask, "Mither, should I buy some swoeties wi' ma penny?"

More, much more, she remembers. She remembers the boy growing up into the man; she remembers the jealous pang she had when first his eyes were cast upon the lassies. She remembers him passing from school to work, or to college. Perhaps he still tells her all his secrets, perhaps there are tender little secrets he does not like to tell. But he still comes to his mammy when he's hurt. And what a pride she has in his achievements. How her heart exults (though only the flash in her eyes betrays her pride) when she hears one neighbor say to another: "Rab Anderson's Wully is a clever boy!"

She Thinks of Him Night and Day

Care for him? Does she not still care for him night and day? Has she not planned and prepared for him since his birth? Does she not still plan and prepare for him? Is she not always dreaming of what her boy will become? Does not all that has been, and all that might have been, flash before her eyes, as she sits lonely over the fire, and knows that it is all over, and knows she will never see her son again?

Never again? Blot out those words! She knows she will see him again. She knows it as surely as that the fire burns before her and the wind whistles in the street. Not on this earth, not with those poor eyes that have looked upon him so often and with such fond love. Not here, oh, not here, dear brave mothers, but somewhere else, where love is never more parted from true love, and mothers and fathers are never more parted from their sons.

This is her consolation; this is her strength. This gives her the courage to face the world and her daily round of duties; though her heart seems empty and the purpose of life seems gone. God for His own good purpose has taken this boy. Well, she will just bow her head and endure and wait. After all, it is only a few years of waiting. Then she will hold him by his strong shoulders and look in his face again.

Without that conviction the agony would be too much to be borne.

God knows it is hard enough for a man to bear the loss. Yet the man goes out into the world, he takes up his work, and in the sights and sounds of everyday life he will not be constantly reminded of his loss.

Every Moment Reminds Her

The mother stays at home—in the home where once he was. And every moment she is reminded of her boy. Every room is full of his presence. In this chair he sat; here he played; at this table he did his lessons. That iron-mould in the tablecover was an inkstain once. This is his bedroom.

Seated beside him here she ofttimes crooned a low song until the little sleeper stirred no more, and the room grew so quiet that you could hear the night air nudging at the window pane.

Supposing all that, supposing all those memories were really buried out in France! Why should the mother so bereft live on?

But just here, in the old house, belief comes to her. These are not dead memories. She does really feel her boy beside her, feel his arm around her neck, hear his voice, feel his cheek against her cheek. The poor, heroic flesh of her boy is out in France, but he himself is here here now, nearer to her than he has ever been.

So the brave woman tells herself over and over again, yet cannot stifle the dull aching of her heart.

Since I have learnt what sorrow means I have thought much of you, mothers of our dead soldiers, and wondered at your splendid courage and resolute faith. The times are hard, and some of you do not lead easy lives. Yet you never falter. We could well have forgiven you had you cursed the country which demanded of you this stupendous sacrifice. Your patriotism puts us men to shame.

And in the hearts of many of you there is no thought of mere revenge. Just now I said to Mrs. Lauder, "If only I could go out as a sniper, and get two for my one!" And she said to me, "Harry, Harry! Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord!" Oh women, women! we are dirt compared with you.

Yet to Mrs. Lauder John was more than most sons are to their mothers. For I was often away from home, and they were always together. When at last I had more time to be with him I found him a man and my equal. That was great, too; but his mother had walked with him up the years.

God's Justice Be Done

All the same, my wife has no patience with the sentimental cowards who would let murderers escape without punishment. Let God's justice be done, she says. And so she hopes that if he Kaiser is taken it will not be by the British. She knows our softness when our blood is up. But if the French take him they will give him his deserts.

And what would you think of us, mothers, if we men failed in our great purpose, and were false to you and your sons? You would esteem us little better than those unmentionable things, fit for service in every way except the way of courage who let brave men go out to die for them. You accept your loss because of the greatness of our cause. What, then, if we betray that cause?

Your sons went forth to battle with no mean purpose in their hearts. A dear friend of my boy has written to us: "He has died for the cause he believed to be the best and greatest that had ever been at stake in the world—the freedom of his country. He gave his life—not impulsively, not in adventurous recklessness—but with a settled enthusiasm belonging to the depth, and not the tumult of the soul."

In that spirit our sons went out to fight, in that spirit, they died. And in that spirit, by God's help, we will enduer, oh mothers of Britain! till the cause they fought for is triumphant.

THIS LOFTY TOWER.

Something New by Way of a Street Hat This Winter.

One feature of the season's millinery is all sorts of rosettes. The favorite ribbon one in this instance has given way to two shades of rose piled high on a black panne velvet shape. The high band is finished with a small cluster of gay little flowers.

THE VERY LATEST.

Squeezing Onions.

One housewife has used a lemon squeezer to extract onion juice and has found that there will be no injury to the eyes. She slices off the root end of the onion and proceeds as with half a lemon, using a glass lemon juice extractor.

Notice for Parents or Guardians

Mrs. Jones, of the "Tiz-It" Theatre has booked for this popular playhouse one of the best Southern pictures that has ever been produced in Peterborough, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." This picture comes here highly recommended, and its title is not new to the many people of this city. If you have seen the play or read the book you will be more than pleased at the pictures. Now, come out with your children and give them a chance to see this wonderful production that they have heard you speak so much about. There are five big reels and each one is good. Also we will have special singing, our big orchestra and good comedies, not forgetting the "Diamond from the Sky." Don't forget the days and date — Wednesday and Thursday of this week. Our prices are as usual.

WILL BUY HORSES

The Horse Shippers' Association of Ontario announce that the first of their monthly fairs will be held on the Market Square, Peterborough, on Wednesday, March 28, when purchases of heavy, chunky, general purpose horses, aged mares and geldings will be made. Owners of horses will find in these fairs a ready market for horses of all breeds at right prices.

Drunkenness in Hull

The near approach of a vote on prohibition, which is due to take place in Hull on April 16, apparently is not making the hotelkeepers in that city exercise any care towards guarding the reputation of their hostelries.

The record number of convictions for drunkenness in the Hull courts was registered over the week end when no fewer than 43 persons were fined the usual $10 and $2.

GERMAN REARGUARDS ENGAGED

FRENCH ADVANCE BRINGS ST. QUENTIN AND ST. FERE UNDER ARTILLERY FIRE

British Line Now Level With That of the French and Latter's Posts Are Two Miles From St. Fere---Germans Cleaned Out the Banks at Noyon Sending to Germany Securities Valued at 18,000,000 Francs.

TRAIN SERVICE TO SOISSONS

British Cavalry in Contact With German Rearguards Five Miles of St. Quentin Outskirts---Enemy Resistance is Most Active Between Arras and Ypres.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 22.—Germans made an energetic resistance to the French last night between the Somme and the Aisne, but after spirited fighting north of Tergnier the French forced them from several strong positions. The French occupied a number of villages situated north of Soissons. They were carried in the face of determined German resistance.

The German retreat to the Arras-St. Quentin-La Fere line is now practically complete, since the French are now within artillery range of St. Quentin and La Fere. The movement has been carried out according to approved principles, one section holding firm while the next fell back.

The Allies are now engaged in driving in the last of these sections still resisting, who are situated respectively south of Arras, southeast and east of Peronne, east of Ham, and north of Soissons.

As the result of Wednesday's operations the British line is now level with the French, which runs along the Crozat canal from St. Simon to Tergnier. At the latter point French posts are less than two and a half miles from La Fere. Part of the road from Ourscamp to Noyon, paved with granite, had been torn up by the Germans, but in less than one day the French engineers had repaired the road, built bridges and put the railroad in order as far as Ourscamp. Before leaving, the Germans made a clean sweep of Noyon banks, sending to Germany securities valued at 18 million francs.

ENEMY EXPELLED FROM POSITIONS.

A later official statement this afternoon says: In the region north of Terminier we enlarged our positions east of St. Quentin canal after spirited fighting, and expelled the enemy from several important defensive positions.

South of the Oise and north of Soissons we also made progress during the night, occupying several villages in the face of considerable opposition. We made a surprise attack north of Berry-au-Bac, which enabled us to take prisoners.

Several attacks on small French posts east of St. Hilaire-St. Souplet road, near oFntaine aux Charmes, in the Argonne, and in the vicinity of Caurieres wood w erepulsed by our fire.

Elsewhere the night passed in quiet.

TRAIN SERVICE RESUMED AFTER TWO YEARS.

PARIS, March 22.—The first regular train service on the Northern railroad from Paris to Soissons since the war began will be started tomorrow.

ALLIES GET 1,700 SQUARE MILES AND 325 TOWNS.

Since the Allied pursuit of the retreating Germans on Sataurday the enemy has given up over 1,700 square miles of French soil and 325 towns and vilalges, and the vast retirement still continues.

LONDON, March 22.—Reuter's correspondent at the front wires: "Wintry conditions, with falls of snow make observations difficult. The advance yesterday and last night was the same as on Tuesday, most rapid in Souterre Plateau, west of St. Quentin and slowest along a front of twenty miles southeastward of Arras.

"The latest report is that British cavalry patrols were in contact with German rearguards within five miles of the outskirts of St. Quentin.

"Enemy resistance was most active in the sector between Arras and Ypres."

KAISER'S COUSIN FAILS TO RETURN FROM RAID OVER ALLIES LINES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, March 22.—Spirited fighting in the sector over which the Germans have been retiring is reported in today's official communication, which mentions no further evacuation of territory.

Announcement is made that an airplane piloted by Prince Friedrick Karl, cousin of Emperor William, has not returned from a raid over the lines between Arras and Peronne.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

C.G.E. HAD THE BEST YEAR IN ITS HISTORY

TORONTO, March 22—Gross profits of $2,225,912. the largest in the history of the company, and net profits of $1,185,420, are shown in the annual report of the directors, which was read and distributed to shareholders at the annual general meeting of the Canadian General Electric Company in Toronto yesterday. The report in its entirety was probably the most satisfactory which has ever been returned. Not only have sales of machinery and supplies decidedly increased in 1916 over the preceding year, but indications point to continued improvement in the company's business.

Immediately after the outbreak of hostilities the business declined so greatly that the directors were confronted with two alternatives: either to discharge most of the staff or to retain as many as possible in the employ of the corporation, the staff co-operating by accepting a reduction of 20 per cent. in their salaries. With improved business. the company has repaid $130,000, representing the total amount deducted, while the reduction was in force.

Approximately 5,000 employes are now on the payroll and scarcity of labor is the company's chief problem to increase its production.

SAW DAMAGE FROM CYCLONE IN INDIANA

MILLBROOK, March 22 — Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Stanton returned to Millbrook on Thursday last after an experience which they will never forget, having witnessed the terrible destruction caused by the cyclone at Newcastle, Ind., on March 11. The inmates of the home where Mr. and Mrs. Stanton were staying had barely tie to get to the cellar before the roof was blown off. Mr. Stanton says that a horse was blown into a tree and was safely brought down with rope and tackle none the worse for its experience, but the driver and buggy have not yet been seen. Mr. and Mrs. Stanton are pleased to be home again.

PTE. W. TANNER 93rd MAN HAD SEVEN WOUNDS

"You will be surprised to hear I am back in England," writes Pte. Will Tanner to Mr. and Mrs. H. Hinchcliffe, 226 Edinburgh Street. "It was a dirty trick of Fritz to try and kill a man. I had seven wounds but they are all healed except two on my hip. I was up and about for three days when my hip started to swell again, forcing me to return to bed. I don't know whether I will have to undergo another operation and if not it will be six or seven weeks before I get back to France.

PTE. WM. TANNER

"I thank you ever so much for sending the parcel, which, by the way, I did not receive as I was wounded on Dec. 11. They don't send parcels back, but give them to the platoon sergeant, and he does with them what he sees fit, and some soldier benefits.

"There were seven 93rd lads in the platoon I was in. One was killed and four others were wounded."

Pte. Tanner is at the Duchess of Connaught Hospital in England. He is the son of Mr. Wm. Charles Tanner of Chandos and left here with the 93rd Batt. A brother is serving in France.

UNKNOWN MAN USES DAGGER ON PROF. PLOUFFE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, March 22—Dr. Adrien Plouffe, professor at Laval University, was attacked last night on St. Mark Street by an unknown man who plunged a dagger into his breast. A thick book which was in the professor's breast pocket prevented the point making more than a slight incision in the flesh.

Dr. Plouffe assumes the would-be assassin resented him writing letters opposing the Nationalists, and that he was prevented from completing his design when he found the professor carried a revolver.

FORMER EMPEROR UNDER ARREST

PETROGRAD, March 22.—The provisional government has issued an order for the arrest of the former emperor and empress and they have been put under charge of General Alexieff until a guard arrives to take them to Tsarsko Selo.

Tsarskoe Selo is a town ("village of the Czar") 16 miles southwest of Petrograd, where the imperial summer residence is located. Here are the old palace, built by Catherine I. in 1724, and the Alexadner palace built by Catherine II. in 1792, with a park containing an arsenal and historical museum.

COULD NOT AGREE ON PROBLEM OF SUPERVISED BATHING BEACHES

The special committee appointed by Mayor Duffus to consider the bathing beach proposition with the Playgrounds Association met yesterday afternoon.

Mesdames Mowat and Morris and Messrs. Reserve, Wearing and others presented the argument in favor of the introduction of supervised bathing places. Another deputation thought that the proposed grant could be used to better purpose this year and two bathing beaches left until after the war.

The meeting adjourned without any recommendation being arrived at.

BUSINESS MEN AND LABOR TO WORK FOR FREE MARKET

PTE. HEARD IS NOW LISTED AMONG KILLED

Equipment of all kinds is arriving at the Armories for the Quartermaster's department.

Pte. O. Banks is the last attestation made to the ranks of the 247th Batt.

The recruiting office at Bancroft is sending in a recruit today.

Rev. J. P. McInnes Home

Rev. J. P. McInnes, of the 109th Batt., has returned to Omemee, about 400 people meeting him at the station, giving him a royal welcome home after nearly a year in England. It is expected a general reception will take place this week in Coronation Hall, where he will be presented with a gold watch by the citizens of Omemee.

Killed in Action

"Killed in action March 1" is the latest official report on Pte. Wm. H. Heard, son of Wm. George Heard, R. R. N. 4, who was previously reported missing.

Pte. Blue Home

Pte. Jas. Blue, who went overseas last fall with the 239th Batt., has returned to Campbellford, having been rejected in England as medically unfit. His three sons, Ptes. Fred, Frank and Edison are in France.

Sergt. Cookman Writes

P.C. Blade has received a letter from Sergt. Cookman, a former member of the police department, but now somewhere in France, thanking the force for parcels sent but which never arrived. Sergt. Cookman, who has been at a base hospital, was going back to duty on the line.

Has Lost One Eye

Pte. D. J. McIntosh, a 93rd soldier who fought in France with the 52nd Canadians, is convalescing after having been badly wounded about the face and hands. He lost the sight of one eye and in order to receive special attention in the hope of saving the other eye, he has been a patient at the eye and ear hospital at Townwalls, Shrewsbury, England, where he is doing well.

Fracture of Skull.

It is learned that Lieut. C. R. A. Crisp, previously reported seriously ill, is suffering from a fracture of the skull, which would indicate that he met with an accident in the course of his duties with the Royal Air Service.

Presbyterian Church Reports Large Receipts

TORONTO, March 22 — Despite war conditions the annual statement of the church funds for the Presbyterian Church for the year ending Dec. 31, 1916, shows the largest receipts ever received during any single year. From missionary, educational and benevolent work of the church the total receipts reached the enormous total of $1,009,095, being an advance of $163,105 over the contributions of 1915. This creates a record in the history of the church. Of this amount $111,208 was raised in response to the special appeal for a thanks offering to remove the indebtedness on the church fund. The deficit on home missions and social service was reduced from $158,000 to $30,000.

CITY COUNCIL

The City Council will meet tomorrow night.

Welfare Committee Representing Working Men and Merchants to Watch Civic Outlay and Attend Meetings of Municipal Bodies.

Messrs. T. C. Elliot, H. Cressman, . Fair, R. J. Kidd, M. Caldwell, Basil D. Hall, E. F. Mason and R. H. Ross, a delegation from the Merchants' Association, appeared before the Trades and Labor Council last night to enlist the co-operation of the delegates in the movement to secure a free market for this city. The request was favorably received and a committee of labor men consisting of Delegates Wires, Crowe, Stevens, Bolwell, Sharpe, Hartley, Brown and Myland was selected. This committee will meet with the merchants committee in T.A.S. Hall this evening to talk over a plan of campaign and will then appear before the property committee of the council in session.

Mr. Elliot's Address

Mr. Elliot was the chief speaker for the delegation and after complimenting the members of the working classes upon their intelligence and interest in public affairs, he outlined conditions that now prevail at the market and which it is proposed to correct.

It is unjust to have a farmer's wife fined for selling short weight butter when there is no intention to defraud. After butter is prepared and weighed at home it evaporates and the seller is not to blame if it is under weight when placed on sale. Farmers are honest as a rule. The only remedy is to have the goods weighed in the market, a plan which would be satisfactory to both parties to the transaction.

It is a mistake, Mr. Elliot said to have a uniformed policeman on the market. The guardian of the law has no terrors for the urbanites who have become accustomed to his dignified presence, but he is an awe-inspiring spectacle to the majority of women from the country.

Mr. Elliot believes, too, that a shelter should be built at the market for rigs so that inclement weather will not keep the farmers away. What he recommended was that a welfare committee be appointed by the Trades Council to act permanently in conjunction with the business men not only in the matter of the market, but in all matters involving the welfare of the city, including the erecting of a bridge across Hunter Street. A high level bridge will cost about $300,000. The present bridge can be replaced on the same plan for fifty or sixty thousand. Is the difference in price worth the retention of an industry in this city?

The City Council raises about $400,000 in taxes every year and has the spending of only about $50,000. The Board of Education expends amout $120,000 yearly and the Police Commission is practically independent; in fact the city government is really a bureaucracy. The proposed Welfare Committee will attend the sessions of all civic bodies and watch that all public money is wisely laid out.

Brief addresses were made by Messrs Fair, Mason, Caldwell, Ross, Kidd and Cressman in support of Mr. Elliot's statements. Mr. Hall announced that the annual meeting of the Board of Trade would be held Tuesday evening and wanted the Trades Council to send a representation.

Ex-Alderman Crowe, one of the delegates to the Trades Council, said that in his opinion the County Council should be asked for a grant to help make up the loss of revenue that will result if the market fees are abolished.

Following out the suggestion made at the recent civic banquet in favor of keeping the citizens at home on holidays, the Council has appointed a special committee to report on the advisability of a Labor Day celebration. The aldermen will be asked for a grant.

Greater Production

Mayor Duffus has called a public meeting for Tuesday next in the Council Chamber at 8 o'clock when Mr. Fred Robson of the Ontario Deparment of Agriculture will speak on vegetable growing on vacant lots.

RENEWALS BY ALL THE HOTELS

Provincial License Inspector Bromley is in the city for the purpose of inspecting the premises of applicants for standard hotel licenses.

In company with Inspector Stewart he will visit all the towns in the district during the next few days.

All of the present holders of city licenses have renewed their applications. There is no application for the Grand Hotel.

PETROGRAD, March 22—A vigorous German attack was made yesterday on the Russian front in the direction of Lida, near Beresina River, the War Office announces. The Germans gained considerable ground although subsequently part of this territory was recovered.

BIG SUCCESS FOR WAR LOAN OPTIMISTS SAY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, March 22.—Optimists among bankers and brokers here believe that the war loan, for which applications close tomorrow, will be as largely oversubscribed as the previous loan and that the total subscriptions may reach a quarter billion dollars.

CHUM SHARED STOLEN MONEY

William Miller, who gave his age as 18 and looked nearer 15, pleaded guilty at the police court this morning to stealing $5 from the residence of Mr. Harry Morgan in East City. Crown Attorney Hatton asked the magistrate to pass sentence in a week.

This young man has served a term in the industrial school and first came under the eye of the police when he was 12 years of age. His father cannot do anything with him. When asked how he spent the $5 the young fellow admitted to entertaining a chum to good seats at the show and other lavish indulgencies.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MARCH 22, 1917

AT THE TRADES COUNCIL.

IT WAS SOMETHING of a new departure for a delegation of the merchants of the city to meet with the representatives of organized labor in the Trades Council to ask for co-operation in a public movement. The circumstance is the best possible recognition which is being extended to the growing influence of the wage-earners.

Headed by Mr. T. C. Elliot, the delegation of business men complimented the labor representatives upon their intelligence and their influence. They had demonstrated their interest in and understanding of public questions. Mr. Basil D. Hall complimented the wage-earners still further when, as president of the Board of Trade, he asked them to send representatives to the annual meeting of that organization next week.

Any outsider who watched the proceedings at the Trades Council last night could hardly fail to note that the delegates are fairly entitled to all the compliments that were paid them by the visitors. In the first place the deliberations are directed by Mr. J. J. Hartley as presiding officer, than whom there is no more responsible citizen nor better parliamentarian in the city. All discussions are carried on in strict accord with the rules of debate, and in this the procedure of the Trades Council is worthy the emulation of other executive and debating bodies in Peterborough.

The delegates last night did not confine themselves as so many do to destructive criticism, but showed themselves able to appreciate and ready to commend anything that appeared in the public interest. The returned soldiers have the sympathy of the delegates, and the latter maintain that wherever possible the heroes of the war be appointed positions in the civic service. Mayor Duffus and the aldermen who stood by him in the matter of appointing a sanitary inspector were commended for their insistence upon this principle.

One significant stand taken by the delegates last night had to do with the recent amendments made by the Ontario Legislature to the Workmen's Compensation Act. Delegate Crowe, an ex-alderman, said the thanks of the labor men were due the Provincial Government that had in this matter given them more than they had asked for. Delegate Sharpe backed up this statement with the assertion that the present Administration at Toronto is the most progressive, most interested in the welfare of the masses of any the country has ever seen.

A lack of appreciation of favors received and benefits conferred has long been a deplorable characteristic of humanity. Evidently the union labor men of Peterborough have outgrown this popular defect.

CHARGES THAT WERE BASELESS.

THE DECISIONS handed down from time to time by Sir Charles Davidson upon the evidence submitted to him as commissioner appointed to inquire into charges of graft are demonstrating the flimsy nature of all of the accusations that have been investigated. The majority of these cases were instigated for no higher purpose than to gratify personal spite or [illegible] serve some political purpose. To prove this assertion it is not necessary to go beyond the boundaries of our own city.

One of the latest decisions has to do with the case of Mr. R. A. Pringle, K.C., a well-known Ottawa barrister and former member of Parliament. He was charged with using his position in an unsuccessful attempt to obtain a contract for supplying hay and oats for the Department. To clear his reputation an investigation was held at his own request, and the result is a complete vindication. All that Mr. Pringle did was to obtain forms of specifications and tender for a client who failed in his bid.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it will be recalled, introduced a personal friend to an official who had the letting of contracts, but this friend failed to secure one, as his figures were not satisfactory. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in this matter, was certainly within his rights, and there is little difference between this particular case and that of Mr. Pringle.

All those who appeared before the committee and whose guilt has been established have been punished by being driven from public life. It is unfortunate that so much of the public funds have been wasted, so much time frittered away and so much uneasiness and bad feeling aroused in the country in the investigation of charges that were without a shadow of foundation.

RAISING A HOME GUARD.

A MILITIA OFFICER who is in a position to understand what he is talking about, ventures the opinion that there are not a dozen privates belonging to the 57th Regiment who are not in khaki and identified with some military unit. The number of officers, the majority being beyond the military age, far exceeds that of those who never got beyond the ranks before the war broke out. This officer has little hope that anything will be accomplished by the recent decision of the Department to recruit the Militia up to strength in order to raise a home guard of 50,000 men.

It is held that men who will not enlist for overseas service will not enlist voluntarily for home defence. While there are slackers who made the excuse for not enlisting that they would offer themselves for the defence of the country if the opportunity offered, this has always been taken as a mere evasion of their duty. On the other hand there are others who say that they do not enlist because they object to a long term of training in Canada. If they could get to Europe at once they would not hesitate to join the forces.

If a man will not enlist voluntarily for one branch of the service, he is not likely to enter another without some form of compulsion. Resolutions passed unanimously by representative business men of Peterborough have been sent to Ottawa asking for conscription. The recent mild order of the Department is certain to meet with scant public approval so far as this city is concerned. Raising the 57th Regiment up to anything like full strength will simply interfere with the search for recruits for the 247th. Between the two classes of men, too, there will exist a chasm as wide as that which would separate volunteers and conscripts.

The new order, however, should produce results in the province where the per centage of enlistments has been lowest. The public leaders there have always declared that the young men would enlist for home defence. These will now be given an opportunity to show that they have not been talking simply for effect. But even if they make good their pledge, that will not remove from them entirely the reproach brought upon them by a neglect of patriotic duties and responsibilities.

THE RESTORATION OF THE JEWS.

THERE IS A GENERAL impression prevailing throughout the world that when the war is over one of the most notable results will be the return of the Jews to Palestine. The Zion movement is stronger today than ever. The restoration of the Jews to the home from which they have been exiled for centuries is no longer questioned. They as a people have kept themselves apart from other races, and in all the persecution which they have endured as aliens they have nurtured the hope of ultimate triumph and a return to their once rich heritage.

The Turk will not only be driven out of Europe, but his domination over Palestine will be ended by the terms of peace. Some students of current events tell us that the British Empire is to be made the instrument under Heaven of fulfilling the prophecies of old. Palestine will become part of the British Empire, and it is to be peopled by the Jews and stand in the same relation to the central authority as Canada or Australia. The Jews, too, are to accept the Christian faith, and the federation of the races will mean a power that can stand against the world.

There is no harm in indulging in roseate dreams. But the Jews will never be content until they have for their very own a country in which they can isolate themselves and keep aloof from the people of other nations, just as they did in those days when they loftily refused to have any dealings with the Samaritans. They would no more consent to acknowledge foreign sovereignty than they did when they so grudgingly rendered unto Caesar the things that were Caesar's, even if the outside power was as beneficent as Caesar's army was cruel. The ambition of the Jews would not stop short of a king of their own, one descended from the royal house of David. An empire with Palestine populated with Jews as a dominion would be an empire confronted by a new race and religious problem.

The Christian faith has made little advancement among the Jewish people in nearly two thousand years. The work of Christianizing forty million proud-spirited people would be naturally slow. Their conversion is, it may be true, part of the Divine prophecy, but their restoration to Palestine is set many years in advance of the other forecast.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

"Peterborough's mayor," says the Lethbridge Herald, "has introduced a novel idea in that city in order to bring the different elements of the city closer together. He has held three banquets, inviting first representative business men; second, he young business men, and last, the workingmen. Affairs of interest to the industrial welfare and municipal goevrnment of the city were discussed around the festive board. Proper appreciation of municipal problems was gained and today there is a closer sympathy between the people and the civic rulers than before."

THE REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA

Is the Russian revolution to prove enduring and permanent? Are the millions of Russia's teeming population ready and fit for constitutional and democratic government? Or is the revolution merely a flash in the pan, foredoomed to an early failure?

The rural population of Russia has long enjoyed self-government. The towns and cities have gradually won a measure of local autonomy. But the provincial governors, representing the autocracy, have acted as local satraps and have often violated the rights of the people and nullified the legal guaranties of autonomy. The peasants and workmen have trusted the "white czar" while holding the subordinate officials, among whom bribery and graft have flourished to an astonishing degree, to blame for nearly all their troubles, such as heavy taxation, insufficient land, high prices and lack of educational facilities.

For more than a century the intelligent and educated classes have been agitating for political and social reforms. Comparatively small groups have been driven to revolt and to organize secret societies. The masses have neither sympathized with nor understood the radical and revolutionary forces. Terror has been tried in Russia, but without success.

Autocracy and bureaucracy in Russia have thus stood in the way of all national progress. However, since 1860 Russia has obtained or extorted, little by little, a considerable measure of political and social reform. The collapse of Russia in the Crimean war led to the emancipation of the serfs, the establishment of local self-government and other reforms. After the Russo-Turkish war and the failure of Russian diplomacy at the Berlin conference further reforms were "in the air" but the deplorable assassination of the "Czar Liberator" put an end to the movement. Gloom and pessimism prevailed in Russia all through the '90's of the last century.

Then came the unjust and stupid war with Japan over Korea and Manchuria. The war was not popular. The masses did not understand its issues. The defeat of the Russian armies and navy by Japan so weakened and discredited the government that a revolution was attempted—with a fair degree of success. The czar, after much hesitation and doubt, listened to Count Witte, a moderate liberal, and granted a constitution to the people. That constitution established the duma and provided for a democratic suffrage system. The censorship of the press was abolished. Russia rejoiced in her new freedom and expected an era of wonderful progress.

But no sooner was peace restored, and the army brought back to Russia, than the reactionaries about the czar regretted their "haste," and decided to withdraw and annul the reforms that had been granted. The duma was reduced to a mere clerical and tax voting machine. The suffrage system was illegally changed and representation made less democratic. The freedom of the press was taken away.

In 1914 came the greatest war in Russia's history. The common people understood this war and were enthusiastic in their response to the appeal for men and money. The people of Rusia sympathized with Serbia, a sister Slav state, and they hated Austria and Germany. In spite of the national sentiment, in spite of the willingness of the Russian people to make every necessary sacrifice, the reactionary and selfish cliques in the court and the bureaucracy kept the nation at arm's length. The duma was treat with suspicion and distrust. Its proposals and suggestions were ignored or denounced as unpatriotic.

Then came the upheaval. Peasants and laborers, miners and boatmen are not too ignorant to understand that a government that betrays people and tolerates corrupt intrigues with the enemy is not a government that deserves loyalty and aid.

FIRE EQUIPMENT STATISTICS

For the fourth successive year Fireman's Herald has taken a census of the fire apparatus and hose in service and reserve in American and Canadian fire departments, also of the possible purchases during 1917. This year's enumeration includes the cities of 5,000 population and over. Of these cities the fire chiefs of 890 have responded to requests for information. In last year's enumeration the statistics for 670 cities were presented, so that this year an increase of practically one-third in the number of cities has been obtained.

The rapid elimination of the horse drawn apparatus from the service is strikingly shown by a comparison between this year's census and that of 1914. In that year 315 cities were represented, with 7,059 fire vehicles pulled by Dobbin. This year nearly three times that number of departments, including the original 315, are entered, and yet the number of horse-drawn pieces of apparatus in service and reserve is less by 1,725.

The tabulation for this year shows that in these 890 cities there are 9,675 pieces of apparatus of all sorts in service and reserve. The total for horse-drawn equipment is 5,334, while there are 4,341 automobiles. A heavy deduction must be made from the horse-drawn vehicles to provide for the large number that are nominally held in reserve, but are in reality carried on fire department books because it is not easy to find purchasers at fair prices.

Of the horse-drawn pieces, steam fire engines continue to be far ahead of all others, numbering 1,575, which total includes a considerable number that will in all likelihood never again work at a fire. Combination wagons number 1,246; aerial trucks, service trucks and water towers total 883, and there are 1,630 other horse-drawn pieces.

As has been the case with the previous tabulations made by Firemen's Herald, the serviceable combination chemical and hose car again leads the motor apparatus with a total of 1,332. What appeared to be hesitation in adopting the triple combination pump, chemical engine and hose car is, perhaps, diminishing, as there are 458 of these registered as against 370 straight automobile pumping engines and combination pumps and hose carriers. Ladder trucks and water towers number 406, tractorized pieces 620, and all other fire automobiles, most of them chiefs' cars, total 1,115.

The fate that has befallen horse drawn apparatus in the fire service is again shown by this year's census of possible purchases. Of the automobiles, 1,405 are listed, while of the horse-drawn the total stands at 18, of which 8 are listed from Canadian cities. When it is considered that for obious reasons the enumeration of possible purchases is not and cannot be anywhere near complete so far as motor apparatus is concerned, while the departments that are condemned to horsed vehicles are not likely to increase their purchases, it is plain that in a year or two future purchases will not mention the horse at all.

Of the additions to be made this year, chemical and hose cars are again to the fore with 245. Pumping engines and combination pumpers and hose carriers show a growing strength with a total of 202, triple combinations, 147; hose cars, 36; chemicals, 23; aerial and service trucks and water towers, 156; tractors, 150; other automobiles, 86.

STUDY LATIN-AMERICA

Canadians Should Study Sister Continent Instead of Germany

Facts in regard to the attempts now being made by various countries to cater to Latin American taste in trade by use of the Spanish and Portuguese languages were given by a Canadian lecturer to a Toronto audience in connection with an address on German vs. Spanish culture. The speaker, Prof. Alfred Baker, of Toronto University, predicted that the Spanish-Portuguese world will take the place of Germany in the commerce and travel of British people after the war. Their natural resources were enormously greater than those of Germany, and in their process of development they offered extraordinary opportunities for British and Canadian enterprise. They need railways, bridges, electrical development. Spain is probably the most interesting country in the world for tourists; their language is very easy to learn and to speak as compared with German which it is rapidly replacing in the United States. Spanish literature, said Prof. Baker, is one of the finest in the world, especially in romance, drama and poetry. Its archives contain records of early American civilization.

For the next fifty years the speaker hoped there would be no travel by British-speaking people in Germany, and very few commercial relations with that country. The German language will be less studied; there will be fewer translations from that language; less interest in what that country may be doing in science and art. German fabrics, he declared, are simply vulgar imitations of the French and British products. After the war those people will not be held up as models, especially in universities, and there will be no need for importing ideas on research, for instance, from Germany.

The people who speak Spanish and Portuguese, which are allied languages, number nearly 140,000,000, and their combined territory 9,000,000 square miles. Nothing is more significant of the growing importance of those countries commercially than the rapidly increasing interest in their language. A wealthy Englishman has endowed a chair in Spanish in the University of Leeds with $100,000, and a similar chair has been established in London University. The German prisoners on the Isle of Man are studying Spanish. In Cambridge, Mass., with 10,000 population, 800 are studying Spanish; in Michigan University there were 453 students of Spanish. In one high school in New York there are 1,250 taking that language.

CANADIAN PADRE'S LOSS

Arab Thieves Were Very Methodical, Also Scriptural

Describing the Arab in Mesopotamia as a "Prince of Thieves," Lieut.-Col. C. L. Flick, C.M.S. (Devonshire Regiment), formerly of Nicola, B.C., sends the following: There is a weird tale of the pony of a padre who hailed from the wilds of the Nicola, in British Columbia. Now the padre's pony was an animal of price and dear to the padre's heart—so, for that reason, presumably it was taken from him—according to the Scriptures. The padre came in from a long tiring ride, and tethered his pony, as he was wont to do in that honest land beyond the Rockies. The padre went to bed at peace with all, deeming all men, even Arabs, honest; yet he awoke in the morning to find that his pearl of price in the way of horseflesh had vanished and naked Arab footprints pointed to the way and manner in which it had gone—the tracks of an Arab man and a child. From enquiry into the matter it was found that an intelligent British sentry had seen what he thought to be an Indian go up to the horse-lines, groom the horse slowly and thoroughly, then putting a saddle upon its back, mount, and with a few muttered words to the sentry, calmly ride past him in the direction of the padre's tent, behind which he vanished. And that was all there was to it.

WHY GERMANY ACCUSES

"Freedom of the Seas" is British Gift to All

One hypocritical German wail is nailed by Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University in the following: Throughout the war, German writers and the German Government have harped upon the British designs against "freedom of the seas." The British down to the present war have given the broadest extension to the doctrine of "freedom of the seas." Their home ports and colonial ports have been wide open for the trade of all nations, including the German. The success of the great German steamship lines all over the world disproves the charge that the British have controlled the seas. What the Germans really mean is that the British systematically prepared for a naval war, in which they would have coaling stations and fortified harbors scattered over the globe; and would be in a position, if war came, to sweep an enemy's commerce from the seas. The damning offense of the British is that they made that policy good and that Germans were unable to compete with their sea power in time.

FAMOUS IRISH LANDINGS

Many Attempts to Use Ireland as a Base to Attack England

There have been many parallel cases to the German attempt to land arms in Ireland, which ended in such a fiasco and the capture of Roger Casement. The most notable took place at the end of the eighteenth century, the first being that of the famous French General Hoche, who, accompanied by the Irish rebel, Wolfe Tone, attempted in December, 1796, to land 6,500 troops, an imposing array of heavy guns, and thousands of rifles, with which it was proposed to arm the Irish people. Bad weather, however, upset the calculations of the leaders of the expedition, which never landed, and with great difficulty got back to Brest.

Two years later General Humbert met with little better success when he landed 1,000 French troops in Killala Bay. The Irish people, however, refused to join this daring raider, who was forced to surrender. This raid was followed a few weeks later by the landing at Rutland Island, near Arran, of a number of French soldiers and a supply of arms and ammunition under the guidance of the famous United Irishman, Napper Tandy. He brought with him General Rey, who was to lead the Irish people when they flew to arms. Unfortunately for Tandy, the population refused to join the standard of rebellion, took to the hills, and would have nothing to do with him, with the result that he went back to France with his French helpers.

Much more serious was the attempt made about the same time as the Napper Tandy fiasco, when a French fleet attempted to land troops in Killala Bay. It was promptly tackled by a British squadron, which captured practically the whole of the French vessels in an engagement off Bloody Foreland. Wolfe Tone came over with this expedition, and was captured. He was tried by court-martial as a traitor and sentenced to be hanged, but committed suicide in prison a few days later.

To clean the inside of a silver tea pot, mix together equal quantities of soda, vinegar, and [illegible]. Paste this around the inside of the pot and let it stand overnight. It will make the inside as bright as possible with very little labor.

When a splinter gets under a finger nail it is often very hard to draw out. In such a case, if a cold water bandage is put round the top of the finger and then kept wet and cold it will in time both draw out the splinter and keep the finger from festering.

A Very Chic Gown

Washing Silk Handkerchiefs

When washing silk handkerchiefs a little care is required to prevent them from turning yellow, and to avoid this they should never be boiled or have any soap rubbed on them. Make a lather of finely shredded white soap and lukewarm water, wash and squeeze the handkerchiefs in it, press out all the moisture possible and dry them quickly. Iron while they are still damp, though not wet.

SOLDIER GLORIFIES MODERN TRENCH-RAT

Social School Teacher Who Died For Canada Penned a Brilliant Fanciful Description

A particular interest attaches to the description here given of the Trench Rat. It was written by Harry E. Lee, the Toronto school teacher whose socialistic views caused his loyalty to be questioned, and who finally answered his critics by enlisting and giving up his life on the Somme battlefield. The following is taken from a letter he wrote to a Toronto friend just before the battle where Lee was killed: "As the sparrow is to the farm yard so is the trench rat to the modern battlefield; nature's creosote crematory of the dead. A shadow falls across the soldier's path; a rustling in the grass alarms the sentry on his post; a loathsome squeaking disturbs the restless sleeper in his dug-out. It is the common trench rat, mean, ubiquitous denizen of these parts. Oh! trench rat, amidst the dead you take your being. You, alone, thrive in a cursed land as did the seed of Cain. You are sleek and obese. The fat hangs upon you where so many bones lie bared. Move your carcass! And you waddle out to enter some near unnoticed hole. Your quivering snake-tail lingers for a moment and disappears.

Voluntary Gray Millions

"Your voluntary armies are numbered in the millions. Your ranks of gray are deployed on all the far-flung battlelines of Europe. You, too, old comrade! build your entrenchments, sink your saps, consolidate your positions, forage by night and keeping cover rest by day. As shells tear up the ear, how often your plans must 'gang a gley!' When star-shells flare, we see you crouch and 'carry on.'

"We must well stoop to learn your methods and the organization and disposition of your troops. One essential difference is found. You are not engaged in a rat-war as we are in a man-war. Is a civilized twentieth century rat-war too advanced a thing for you? Or else can your very communism be the goal toward which our races stumble, and in the present issue welter through blood to grasp?

Respected, Unforgettable

"Rat! Were we to reason we should gain a respect for you. Being soldiers it is not ours to reason, but still, Old Pal, think not too ill of us. Be sure, when the Pied Piper of Peace comes to charm us all away, wherever you go we shall wish you well. In far-off Canada, in future years, we must often make mention of our old associate. Many an old soldier grown drowsy in his dotage, whilst turning over in his mind a wealth of reminiscence, will ofttimes see a furtive form glide lightly through his dreams."
